BOSSY.

Bossy is a kind old cow.
She dreams beneath the apple bough
And swings her tail and rings her bell
While roaming up and down the dell.

I see her through the pasture bars
Eat all the pretty daisy stars,
Then gently toss her head on high
To watch the clouds that dot the sky.

When night makes all the meadow black,
She lets the chickens on her back
Fall fast asleep, and sleep until
The sun comes peeping o'er the hill.

THOSE BOER LADIES.

By Middle Life They Are Almost Too Fat to Walk.

The Boer woman is very little like the trim, handsome Dutchwoman of her ancestral Holland. She is seldom pretty. Her complexion is her principal charm, and she guards this carefully whenever she goes out. She is never seen outdoors without a great peaked bonnet on her head, her visits to church being made behind an almost oriental seclusion of veils. This is necessary to preserve the pink and white of her skin, for the climate would otherwise soon tan it to the color of sole leather. Her eyes are small and set close together, and her features are irregular. Her cheeks are broad and flat, and her hair is naturally light in color, although time and weather soon bleach it from its early straw color. At a very early age she loses all her teeth, for she is constantly chewing sweet cakes and confectionery.

A European woman would replace the molars that nature has deprived her of with well mounted works of art, but the Boer woman does not do this. She thinks it would be impious thus to try to duplicate the work of the Creator. Her figure is thick and almost waistless. While still a young woman she begins to grow fat, and by the time middle life is reached she is often so unwieldy that the only exercise she is able to take is to waddle cumbrously from one armchair to another. She is clad in a loose, scantily made gown, devoid of trimming and apparently waistless. The day garments of the Boers are also their nightclothes, so the gown is generally wrinkled.

He Set at Eight.

He was only a little boy, and this was his first diary. It had been given him as a birthday present and was bound in a red cover, with a highly colored picture adorning the front.

He meant to begin well and early, so he carefully wrote, "Get up at 7." Then, according to instructions, he took it to his governess for approval.

That highly proper lady frowned. "Get up!" she said; "get up! You careless boy! Does the sun get up? No, it rises."

Very neatly she scratched out the barbarous words and made him write, "Rose at 7." This settled Master Tom; no more mistakes of this kind for him again!

So on retiring for the night he wrote, with the air of a man who knew his business well, "Set at 8."

Art Treasures in Japan.

The Japanese idea in regard to art treasures is quite different from the American idea, as seen in the home. The American method is to keep all the good pictures or beautiful bronzes or unique vases in evidence all the time. The Japanese way is to store the artistic belongings, bringing different ones to light for a time, and thereby avoiding the too abundant appearance that is often the rule here.—New York Sun.

Aggravating the Offense.

"You are charged, young man," the magistrate said, not unkindly, "with scaring the complaining witness nearly out of his senses by putting him through some mock ceremony of initiation. I can make allowance for exuberance of spirits among college students, but sometimes this exuberance is carried too far."

"It was this way, your honor," exclaimed the youth who appeared to be the spokesman—"we were out for a little lark, and we caught a jay."

"The fine will be $2 and costs each," said his honor, his face hardening.—Chicago Tribune.

Some Ready Made Law.

Bourke Cockran studied law under Judge Theodore L. Dwight. One day the professor asked a question which seemed easy, but was really difficult. With his magnificent voice Cockran answered the best he could, adding as a saving clause, "Such, I take it, is the common law."

The good old doctor glanced benignantly through his spectacles. "That would be all right, sir, if you had made it uncommon law."—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

A QUEER SENSATION.

HOW IT FEELS TO BE HELD UP AT THE POINT OF A REVOLVER.

Curious Phenomenon That Causes Each Man In a Roomful to Believe That a Weapon Is Pointed Straight at His Own Head.

"If you will take my word for a little experience I had recently, perhaps I can make clear to you how it is possible for three bad men to hold up a roomful of fairly brave men and get away safely with their money," said a merchant from the state of Washington who was a guest at the Lotos club one night recently. "I was in such a hold up not long ago, and I have ceased jeering at fellows who have been through similar experiences. I was one of 70 men who were held up in a big gambling hall, and as I am not a regular patron of such places I kept quiet about it at home. The gambling house is one of the best known in the west, and on the night of the hold up it was filled with a representative crowd. A search would have disclosed the fact undoubtedly that many of the men present were armed. No trouble in recent years has occurred in this place, and there was no reason to anticipate any. It was nearly midnight when the door opened and three men, masked and each holding two revolvers, entered the room.

"'Hands up, quick!' shouted the foremost man.

"I was sitting at a faro table when I heard this command, and as I looked up I found a revolver pointing straight at my head. When I compared notes with the other seventy odd men later, I found that each one had the same experience. There were only six revolvers, and yet each man in the room was willing to swear that one of them was pointed at his head all the time. The crowd was simply paralyzed with fright. For two or three seconds not a man moved. Then over in one corner a Leadville sport brought his hand around to reach his hip pocket.

"'Stop that or I'll shoot,' said one of the masked men, covering him with his revolver. 'Hands up, now; quick! We mean business.'

"Every man in that room did hold his hands up. There was no hesitation then. It was my first experience in that kind of game, but it was not until I was able to take my hands down that I realized how tiresome the operation was. There we stood, each man with his hands stretched high above his head, held up in a room on a busy street when an outcry would bring help at once. It was a pretty sure thing, however, that no one would make the outcry. The three masked men had eyes for every move, and their revolvers pointed all ways at once. It is easy for a man who has not been through such an experience to suggest that if several men had only made a break these fellows would have run. I can honestly say that the barrel of the revolver into which I looked seemed to me to be as large as a sewer pipe. I even thought that I could see the end of the bullet, and I was awfully afraid that the man who held the revolver might get nervous and shoot me by accident. I tried to look pleasant to appease him. All this had taken perhaps a minute and a half when the spokesman shouted to us:

"'Line up against that wall with your backs to me, and the man who takes his hands down will get shot. Quick now, gentlemen, if you please. Obey orders, and you won't get hurt.'

"We lined up as directed like a lot of schoolboys.

"'Now then, my friend here will relieve you of your valuables without your assistance,' said the spokesman. 'Don't move, because there are two dead shots behind you. Keep quiet, and it will soon be over.'

"It was a very cool piece of work, I can assure you. One of the three went straight down the row, taking each man's watch and money. He didn't get as much as he expected, and as near as we could estimate later the total haul was under $5,000. There was over $100,000 in the safe which the robbers overlooked. When we had been cleaned out, the spokesman said:

"'Now, gentlemen, we are sorry to inconvenience you further, but we shall have to request you to stand just as you are for five minutes more. Don't cut the time short, or you will get hurt.'

"The side door opened at this instant, and we heard the order 'Hands up, Chink, or you are a dead man!' It was one of our Chinese servants who was returning with a tray filled with drinks. He promptly dropped his tray, smashing all the glasses and threw up his hands. We heard no other sound for five minutes. Each man counted the seconds to make sure that he shouldn't take down his hands ahead of time. The proprietor was the first man to move. As soon as he felt that it was safe he turned and found the robbers gone. He picked up a heavy chair and threw it through the window. It carried the sash with it, and the crash that followed attracted general attention in the street below. The proprietor stuck his head out of the window and profanely shouted such details of the hold up as might put the people in the street on the track of the robbers. It was useless, however. The fellows walked out quietly, took off their masks and disappeared without leaving any clew. We all piled out of the place to aid the search. When we found out that a chase was hopeless, most of us came back to the gambling room to talk it over. When we entered the place, we found the Chink standing in the ruins of his glasses with his hands still above his head. The proprietor told him to take his hands down. The Chink wouldn't do it, and two men who pulled his arms to his side had all they could do to hold him. He had looked in the big barrel of one of those small revolvers, and he hadn't forgotten it.

"Now this was an actual experience, and some of your New York papers had accounts of it. If I were mixed up in an affair of that sort again, I would raise my arms just as quickly. It was expediency and not a yellow streak that made that crowd act as it did."

Never Caught Alive.

In Lake Derwentwater, in England, there is a species of fish called vendace, which are never caught alive. They are said to frequent the deeper parts of the lake and are never met with in the rivers. One or two dead specimens of the breed which have been found in the lake are treasured as curiosities.

Fertile Peru.

Though in the torrid zone, Peru possesses such diversity of elevations and climatic peculiarities as to be able to produce almost any product known to man.

THE WRITERS.

Michael Davitt, during his days in parliament, did nearly all his literary work in the house writing room, where silence is enforced, sitting invariably in the same seat.

Paul Bourget has announced his intention of paying a second visit to this country. He will come next spring and gather material for a novel dealing with American social life.

Theodor Mommsen, at the age of 82 years, has published a new work, "Roman Criminal Law," as a companion to his great "Roman Constitutional Law." It is a volume of 1,078 closely printed, large octavo pages.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson lately saw for the first time the statue of himself set up before the National theater in Christiania. He turned red in the face and demands that it be removed, as it is a libel on his personal appearance.

THE PARIS SHOW.

The Paris exposition catalogue will contain 100,000 names.

The parks of Milwaukee will be part of the exhibit of that city at the Paris exposition. A series of photographic views of the public parks of that city will be shown.

It took a bid of 275,000 francs to secure the privilege of letting out seats for the Paris exposition of 1900. For the 1889 exhibition the successful bid for the monopoly was 39,000 francs.

Governor Mount of Indiana is personally supervising an elaborate exhibit for his state at the Paris exposition. One of the features of this will be a series of large photographs to show the progress of the "good roads" movement in Indiana, where there are now 50,000 miles of graded and graveled highway.

His "Dear Old Jim."

"Corbett is my friend and benefactor," says Mr. Jeffries. "I was once his sparring partner, and he treated me as a gentleman. Hence I have gladly agreed to fight him as a return for favors. I am bound by all the ties of friendship and gratitude to give him a chance to fight me." Was there ever such a touching instance of devotion? Mr. Jeffries will reward his old patron and benefactor by beating him into pulp and knocking his head off. One can fancy him saying, as he puts his terrible right into his friend's ribs, "Dear old Jim!"—Kansas City Star.

The Billing and Cooing.

Uncle George—You do not appear to think it necessary to spend so much time at home as you did when you were first married. I suppose the billing and cooing are all over now.

Harry—There doesn't seem to be much of a let up in the billing, and, as for the cooing, I am dreadfully afraid of it. It is sure to mean a new hat or a new gown or a new something.—Boston Transcript.

Miss Robinson, of Omemee, is in town for a few days visiting friends.

AN ENGLISH HEROINE.

LADY SARAH WILSON'S ESCAPADES AMONG THE BOERS.

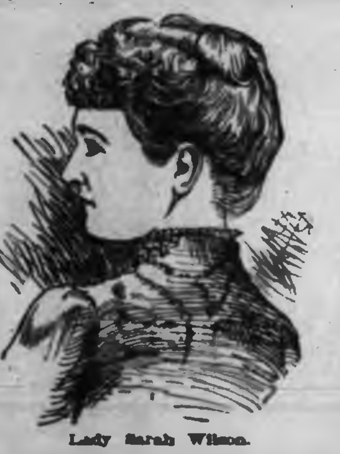
She Was Besieged, Then Escaped, Was Captured, Acted as a Spy, Was Exchanged and Is Now Shut Up in Mafeking.

English society is disposed to regard Lady Sarah Wilson, the handsome and adventurous daughter of the House of Marlborough, as a modern Joan of Arc. The adventures through which she is passing in the Boer war are more extraordinary than have fallen to the lot of any women of rank in the present century, and place her alongside those women of the middle ages who defended cities and endured the horrors of war.

She was first besieged, then escaped; was caught after many thrilling adventures; acted as a spy; was ordered to be confined in a certain town and escaped from it; and finally was exchanged for a Boer officer and returned to the besieged place from which she started.

Besieged in Mafeking.

At the beginning of the war Lady Sarah was with her husband, Capt. Wordon Wilson, in Mafeking, the chief town in British Bechuanaland, which lies northwest of the Transvaal. It was held by Col. Baden-Powell, with the Fifth Dragoons, about 900 strong. Capt. Wilson is an officer of the Horse Guards, but was out in South Africa on special service, and had attached himself to Col. Baden-Powell for the sake of adventure. Lord Edward Cecil, a son of the British prime minister, the Marquis of Salisbury, was there for the same reasons.



Lady Sarah Wilson.

The redoubtable Gen. Cronje, who captured Jameson and his raiders, besieged Mafeking with 3,000 Boers. Col. Baden-Powell reinforced his little body of regulars by enrolling and drilling all the able-bodied men in Mafeking. Thus he gathered a force of nearly 2,000 men, with which he made a brilliant defense and furnished the most picturesque feature of the war.

Lady Sarah took an active part in the work of the soldiers, and even accompanied the armored train that went out of Mafeking to fight the Boers.

Taken Prisoner by the Boers.

After a month Lady Sarah left Mafeking to carry the news of the beleaguered garrison to the outside world. She started out to ride over hundreds of miles of desert and mountain, infested not only by armed Boers, but by wandering bands of bloodthirsty Kaffirs. The chance of falling into the hands of the latter was the most appalling danger she ran. She may also consider herself fortunate that she was captured by the Boers.

One morning at Setlagoli, a small station in British territory, she was aroused by the report of firing. Riding to the scene of the trouble she found that a British armored train had been wrecked by the Boers. The train was commanded by Capt. Nesbitt, of the Mashonaland mounted police, who was trying to run through to Mafeking with ammunition. He and all his men were killed or captured.

Lady Sarah was seen by the Boers and taken prisoner. She was placed in charge of a Boer and sent to Mochudi, a Boer centre near Mafeking. While there she established a regular spy system, by means of which she supplied Col. Baden-Powell with information of the utmost value concerning the Boer plans. By informing him that the Boers ont he southern side of Mafeking were being drawn away to the siege of Kimberley she enabled him to make a sortie, in which he killed 30 Boers and captured 2,500 rounds of ammunition.

Lady Sarah secured the services of a native runner, who became so devoted to her that he would have risked death in any form to do her errands. She used to meet him late at night on the outskirts of her Boer host's farm, and there give him messages for the besieged garrison of Mafeking. He hid these in his luxuriant crop of wool, which was bound up with a copper ring on the top of his head.

Ultimately the Boer commandant, Snyman, learned that she had been sending dispatches into Mafeking. Up to that time he had been in some doubt as to how to treat her. Now he had no more doubt.

He held her strictly a prisoner, locked her up and put an armed guard over her. Then Col. Baden-Powell demanded Lady Sarah's release as a non-combatant. Commandant Snyman replied that she was a spy, and that he was behaving with leniency when he consented to exchange her for an important Boer officer, held by the British. He intimated that he had a perfect right to shoot Lady Sarah as a spy.

The gallant Col. Baden-Powell could not bear the thought of leaving a woman—and such a woman—in so distressing a position. He therefore exchanged his Boer prisoner for her, and she returned to her husband and the garrison of Mafeking.

Lady Sarah is now living in underground quarters in Mafeking to escape the Boer shells. Recently her husband was wounded in a sortie, and so she has him to nurse in addition to her other occupations.

Lady Sarah Wilson is the 10th child of a former Duke of Marlborough, and is about the same age as her nephew, the present duke. She is the youngest sister of the late duke—who married Mrs. Hammersley, of New York—and of the late Lord Randolph Churchill.

In 1891 she married Capt. Gordon Chesney, an Australian millionaire.

She is a tall, handsome woman, with an insatiable fondness for outdoor sports and for foreign travel and adventure.

IS MARS PEOPLED?

Such a Claim Advanced by a German Scientist.

"Is Mars inhabited?" has been asked very often during recent years and has engaged the serious attention of many astronomers and especially of M. Camille Flammarion, a noted French scientist and author.

Some new light is now thrown on this subject by Professor Ernst Haeckel, an eminent German philosopher, in a book entitled "World Problems. After pointing out that men have been studying the heavens for more than 4,300 years and have only been studying themselves for the last half century he says we may safely assume that the many fixed stars whose light requires thousands of years to reach us are suns and are surrounded by planets and worlds similar to those we know. We may also assume, he holds, that thousands of these planets have arrived at the same stage of development as our world, and it naturally follows that on them the same conditions of life prevail as on this earth, and there is no valid reason why human beings should not live there as they do here.

Professor Haeckel takes care to explain that there are doubtless many planets the temperature of which is such that life, as we understand the term, cannot be sustained on them. He thinks it very probable that there are types of animals and plants on some planets which are not to be found on the earth. According to him it is very likely that the biogenetic process exists on Mars, Venus and possibly some other planets of our system, as well as on planets of other solar systems, but plants on these planets have reached a higher stage of development than has been reached by animals and plants of this earth.

If we assume that Mars is inhabited—and Professor Haeckel seems pretty well satisfied that it is—we must assume, he holds, that the men and women whose home is on the planet are not such as we, but of a far higher type. They may resemble us exteriorly, but they are free from our physical defects and excel us in strength and gracefulness. It is in the intellectual sphere, however, that their superiority is most clearly shown. If there are human beings on these planets, says Prof. Haeckel, it is extremely probable that they far surpass ordinary men and women in intelligence.

An Unpredictable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the meaty portions from the shell.—

Successive Waves.

The following waif is going the rounds of the state press: We are told of a young lady in a neighboring town who waved her hand at a stranger, and in three days they were married. Two days later the young lady waved a flatiron at her husband, and the next evening he came home waving a divorce.—Nashville Banner.

Queer Cards of Shrewd Lawyers.

Not all men of the legal profession are content with the severe inscription on their cards to which etiquette and custom usually confine them. An Ohio lawyer who makes a specialty of collections calls attention to this fact by a novel device printed on his cards and letter heads. On a great red splotch intended to represent a drop of blood are the words, "Claims collected in cold blood," the capital "C" for the three first letters of those words being of sufficient size to encircle the other words.

In Maryville, Mo., a lawyer presents his portrait on his card, with the suggestive motto: "He that is not with you is against you. See me early."

ADVERTISE IN THE MORNING TIMES.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

In Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Zambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvellous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and heralded to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that to-day they enjoy the fruits of their success in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and preesent is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain, but magnificent edifices of the most modern type, beautiful botanical gardens, and the public improvements are evidences of the wonderul advance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial centre, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenue of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals, lend an air of peace and tranquility, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustable veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders" whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest manifested in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before thought of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Africander whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman—born in the Cape Colony, having traveled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Zambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience, in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work—will present South Africa as it is to-day, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collection of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this county. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

LAMP BULBS HIS WEAPON.

Burglar Put to Flight by Being Bombarded by Them.

"Of all the outlandish weapons ever employed in a fight, says a New Orleans business man, "I think I brought the most fantastic on record into play one night last week. My family are away on a visit at present and I am keeping bachelor hall out at the house. On the night to which I refer I was aroused at about 3 a.m. by a noise somewhere in the region of the dining-room and, thinking I had shut up the dog there, I jumped up very foolishly and came down stairs in my night clothes, without so much as a pocket knife. When I opened the dining-room door I was startled to see a big rough-looking man bending over the sideboard at the far end of the room, and after we had stood there on tableau for a moment the fellow made a rush at me. I leaped back into the hall and groped around for a weapon.

"On the [illegible] by were a dozen incandescent light bulbs, which I had brought home to replace some that had burned out, and purely by instinct I grabbed one of them and threw it at the burglar. It hit the door casing close to his head, and to my amazement, exploded with a noise like a young lyddite shell. I suppose it was a still greater surprise to the other fellow, for he let out a yell and broke for the rear, followed by a rapid-fire of 16 candle-power incandescents, which I continued to chuck at him as long as he remained in range. They smashed against the furniture with a series of crashes that alarmed the whole neighborhood, and I have been gathering up fragments of broken glass ever since. The burglar must have thought I was chasing him with hand grenades. It was the first time I ever knew incandescents made such a row when they broke. An electrician tells me it is caused by the air rushing into the vacuum."

LEPROSY IN AMERICA.

A NATIONAL HOME FOR LEPERS SUGGESTED BY FATHER MULHANE.

He Has Inspected All the Leper Camps Here and in Cuba—He Thinks the Disease Increasing—The Lepers in the Antilles—Arizona His Site for a Leper Home.

New Orleans, Feb. 19.—Father L. W. Mulhane, who has done much for the lepers in the United States, is now visiting New Orleans to inspect the condition of the lepers in Louisiana. He comes here from Cuba, where he also investigated the leper problem, and he may go to Hawaii and the Philippines to study the condition of the lepers in the Orient. While in Cuba he visited the hospital of San Lazaro, where the lepers are confined, and consulted with Governor General Wood as to the proper course to be pursued in regard to them. While here he has visited the Louisana Leper Home at Indian Camp, and had several conferences with the board recently appointed by Gov. Foster to select a new location for the Leper Home.

Father Mulhane found that leprosy is increasing in Cuba and in the United States, and he thinks that it is likely to become more formidable in the United States by introduction from our new colonial possessions unless the Government takes steps to establish a home where the lepers can be kept isolated from the rest of the community.

He found General Wood in Cuba fully awake to the importance of the leper problem. The leper hospital at Havana is an excellent one in many respects, he says, with an abundance of room for the inmates; but there are a number of improvements that can be made by General Wood, and will be made by him. His ideal is to make the home so comfortable that lepers will be glad to seek its seclusion. During the revolution, when the Spaniards had as much as they could attend to with their military hospitals, the leper hospital was neglected. It had very few inmates, while the lepers ran at large. Gen. Wood has ordered that the laws in regard to the confinement of the lepers in the hospital shall be rigidly enforced. A large number of these unfortunate people have voluntarily surrendered themselves, recognizing that they will be well treated, and a leper is as rare in Havana to-day as in an American city.

Father Mulhane thinks that the number of lepers in Cuba has been underestimated, because of the unwillingness of the people to confess to the disease in its first stages. He is also of the opinion that, on the same reason, there is more of it in the United States than is popularly supposed, and he roughly estimates the number of lepers in the United States at 5,000, not including Cuba, Puerto Rica, Hawaii or the Philippines. Father Mulhane is in favor of the establishment of a national leper home or hospital, and believes that the best site for it would be in Arizona, or some of the high and dry sections around the Rocky Mountains, where the isolation would be perfect, and where the climate would be admirably suited in all ways for the patients. The national hospital would be independent of any State hospital that might be needed in a locality where through neglect or any other cause leprosy had made any headway, as in the case of the Gulf marshes of Louisiana. Father Mulhane attributes the disease in Louisiana to the Chinese fishing stations on the Gulf coast, which are seldom visited by whites, from which leprosy has branched out to some of the neighboring districts. There might be, he thought, 100 lepers in Louisiana, of whom only a small proportion were confined in the home at Indian Camp.

The Port Hope Cut.

(From the Hamilton Times.)

Is there any probability that grain would be carried in barges from Georgian Bay to Montreal, via the Trent Valley Canal if that waterway were completed? Could the small boats of light draft compete with the vessels drawing fourteen feet that will go through the Welland and St. Lawrence Canals? If not, why keep on spending money on the Trent Valley Canal, or at least why treat it as anything but a local work, important only on account of way traffic? The deputation which waited upon the Government Wednesday in favor of the Port Hope as against the Trenton route, made a very good argument, if there is any chance of the canal ever handling through traffic.

Dr. Powers, who was the chief spokesman for the deputation, informed the Minister of Railways and Canals that as far back as 1894 a survey was made of a canal route between Rice Lake and Port Hope. The proposed route would be but twelve or fifteen miles in length, while the continuation of the canal from Rice Lake to Trenton would be forty-six miles in length. On the latter route, Dr. Powers said, there would be extensive rock cuttings, while on the Port Hope route there would be nothing but clay and earth to be removed. Dr. Powers, who has made a study of the question, estimated that about two million dollars would be saved by the adoption of the Port Hope route. He asked that the government make a survey of the country between Port Hope and Rice Lake. Dr. Powers also pointed out that the town of Port Hope could give adequate transhipment facilities for grain, there being already three elevators at that point.

The saving of two or three million dollars of cost is an important item to the Canadian taxpayer, and now that the Murray canal is open, connecting Bay Quinte with Lake Ontario, the distance via Port Hope would be shorter than that by the winding Trent river, while greater speed would be made on the open lake from Port Hope to Trenton than would be possible by the river route. The cutting from Rice Lake to Port Hope would give water carriage to the important towns of Peterborough and Lindsay, which would regulate railway freight rates.

But what would East Northumberland and West Hastings, constituencies which have been kept in the tory column for a generation by the Trent Valley Canal project, have to say about the diversion of their inant to Port Hope?

Illiteracy in Russia.

The illiteracy of Russia exceeds that of any other country claiming to have a civilized government. The Humanitarian states that in 10,000 villages of the vast empire there is not a school and it is estimated that not 20 per cent of the population of the empire has acquired even the rudiments of a common school education. It has been figured out that if the Czar would disband 100,000 men of the vast army he would thereby save money enough to provide a school for each of the villages. It is not surprising that the Czar should desire to reach some arrangement with the other nations which would permit him to partially disarm.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

DIED.

MARTIN.—In Fenelon Falls, on Thursday, February 15th, 1900, Ella Windrim, beloved wife of Mr. Irwin Martin, aged 25 years.

Deceased was a sister of Mrs. Thomas C. Irwin, 504 Stewart street.

A Card to the Public.

Having disposed of my baking business to my brothers, Messrs. Fred and Stanley Bates, I take this opportunity of thanking my numerous customers in the town and surrounding country and villages and the public generally, for their liberal patronage for the past seven years, and I feel assured that the new managers will serve out in a prompt and business-like manner. Walter Bates.

Excursion to Lindsay.

It was a big crowd that went up to Lindsay last night with the hockey boys. The boys had lots of friends to applaud when things went their way. The result of the match will be found in our sporting column.

Union Development Co.

Four of the properties in this proposition have produced nearly fifteen million dollars up to the present time, being three times the capitalization of the Company. They are the Goldenville, Lecatina, Cariboo, and East Mine. There are some 20 properties in this consolidation, read carefully the advertisement in this issue of the Times. A Safe investment; first block of stock offered at par, one dollar. William E. Bremner, 9 Toronto street, Toronto.

Lumbering Operations.

Lumbering operation have been very brisk during the winter in this locality, and the mills at Lakefield and Peterborough will be operated to their fullest capacity during the coming summer. A large quantity of timber will be floated down the Otonabee to Trenton and Deseronto.

The Patriotic Concert.

The patriotic concert in Riverdale Hall, North Monaghan, last night, was a decided success in every way. The hall was jammed to the doors, standing room being at a premium. The programme was an excellent one, being of a patriotic nature. The address of Rev. Mr. Symonds was in itself a treat, and was deservedly applauded. There was a large number present from town, busses having been put on to accommodate the crowd. Too much praise cannot be accorded the promoters of the entertainment, especially Mr. George W. Bennet, the popular clerk of this municipality, who worked like a Trojan to make the venture a success.

TOWN LOSES $500.

Mr. Robert Stewart to Withdraw From the Market.

Mr. Robert Stewart, the well-known drover, notified the Market Clerk yesterday that he will discontinue using the market scales for weighing stock after April 1st. This will mean a loss in revenue to the clerk of about $500 per year, and will reduce the tolls by this sum, so that it will really mean a loss to the Corporation.

Mr. Stewart was seen by the Times in regard to the matter, and stated that he would, after April 1st, do all his weighing on the scales of the Geo. Matthew's Company. He felt very sore over the treatment he had received at the hands of the Police Magistrate a few days ago. He says that the Chief of Police is responsible for the whole trouble. Had he enquired as to the truth of the statement which appeared in an evening paper, to the effect that he had cruelly abused a pig while taking it from the market to the Matthew's Packing house, he would hardly have taken the course he did Mr. Stewart appealed the case and would spend $500 if necessary to show that he was innocent of cruelty to the animal in question.

Should Mr. Stewart, really carry out his threat, it will be a very serious thing for the town, especially as the tolls are soon to be re-let.

Notice.

Messrs. Fred W. Bates and Stanley G. Bates beg to notify the public that they have purchased the baking business lately carried on by Mr. Walter Bates and will hereafter carry on the same under the name and style of Bates Bros., and hope to merit a continuance of the patronage enjoyed by their predecessor. Everything will be run in first class style and customers may depend on getting nothing but A one goods from the new firm. Bates Bros., the wide awake bakers, 654 Stewart street. Telephone 303.

Still in New Orleans.

Mr. T. Bradburn and party are still sojourning in New Orleans, and will not leave for California until early next month. The Mardi Gras Carnival, which attracts thousands from all parts of the world, will take place next week, and the party decided to wait and see it. The weather is beautiful in the Gulf City just now, the temperature ranging about 18 above zero. Mr. Bradburn was enjoying excellent health up to a couple of weeks ago, when he brought on a relapse by fatiguing himself, which kept him indoors a week or so. He is now, we are pleased to say, entirely recovered.

Sudden Death.

A sudden death took place in Otonabee yesterday morning. Mrs. John Doris, wife of John Doris, of the 15th lot, 10th concession, was in her usual health on Monday, and retired at night without any complaint or symptom of illness. About two o'clock she was taken ill and a doctor was procured but death took place about 6.30. Paralysis was given as the cause. The sudden taking off was a great shock to the family and friends. Mrs. Doris was about 55 years of age. Her maiden name was Catharine O'Keefe and she was the daughter of the late James O'Keefe, of Otonabee. A husband and five children, one boy and four girls, are left to mourn her loss. The funeral takes place from the homestead, Otonabee, to-morrow at 9 o'clock a.m. and will proceed to St. Peter's cathedral, thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery for interment.

A Bad Man.

The Chief of Police has received intelligence from Chief Grasett, of Toronto, that Charles Doran, the tramp who had an arm taken off by a C.P.R. train here a few months ago, and who sojourned in town until a couple of weeks since, has been committed to gaol for 60 days in Toronto gaol for the theft of a couple of overcoats. Before leaving town Doran borrowed a watch from Thomas Raymond and a satchel from Fred Garden, but these articles were not in his possession when arrested and Doran does not remember what became of them. The owners have been enquiring about their property but it is not likely the missing things can be now located.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

This afternoon, before a select and appreciative audience, there will appear on the ice two teams whose refulgence will radiate to every corner of the rink. As the sparks fly from the blacksmith's anvil so will the skates of the bankers scintillante over the ice. The game is exciting great interest (the thing bankers most do like), and the juniors will go so fast that there will be draughts all over the building; in fact both teams will discount almost anything except the Colts. You can make a note of this game and deposit yourselves on a good seat at the rink this afternoon about five o'clock. It is supposed that the following gentlemen will endeavor to annihilate each other—

Officers—J. Crane, goal; H. Rush, point; A. A. Hollingshead, cover point; C. W. Bell, Garnet Bell, A. Skill, A. C. B. Pousette, forwards.

Juniors—Dumble, goal; Gladman, point; Armstrong, cover point; Bell, Collins, Milburn and Paterson, forwards.

The Telegram says that as a referee Lionel King's work in the Stratford-Simcoe game was perfect.

•• • ••

The much talked of tie game between U.C.C. and Peterborough Colts was played last night ioon Lindsay. The town went up to our neighboring suburb to cheer on the boys and their wonderful club call did the work, assisted of course by the suburb playing of the boys themselves. The game was fast and exciting and Peterborough won by a score of 6 to 4. At half time it was three all, but the superior staying powers of the Colts did the work in the second half.

The boys are now in the finals and the deciding game with Stratford should be one to talk about for months after.

A Veteran's Kick.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—In this time of great excitement, war and rumors of war, kindly allow me to give vent to my feelings, as an old veteran of 1866. I believe good thinking, loyal citizens will agree with me when I mention some of the officers there are commanding the different corps in this place. I do not propose to refer to these gents by name, but will say that they are easily distinguished. I can furnish names of Boer sympathizers, (I call them traitors) who have employment, in several cases, from these people, while loyal men, including a number of old vets are not so favored. Some of the "Boers" do not take the pains to hide their satisfaction at the recent successes

I think, Mr. Editor, loyal men, and especially those connected with the militia, should give their business and patronage, whether it is a day's work on the street or a lawyer's fee, to people who are loyal.

LOYALTY.

COBOURG AND THE CANAL.

She Wants a Canal From Rice Lake to Cobourg.

Port Hope, Cobourg and Trenton are fighting for the outlet of the Trent Vallet Canal into Lake Ontario. Port Hope has interviewed the Government, and presented its case as forcibly as possible. Trenton is dumbfounded at the efforts that are being made to deprive her of her years of toil and waiting. Cobourg is now taking action, and at a meeting of the Council on Saturday evening the following deputation was appointed to go to Ottawa for the purpose of interviewing the Minister of Public Works and Minister of the Militia—Mayor Hucke, Messrs. J. B. McCall, Sam Clarke, ex-Mayor Hayden, H. Boggs, J. T. Field, Major Snelgrove and Major MacNachtan. The object of the deputation will be to urge upon the Government the early completion of the harbor and to look into the possibility of changing the terminus of the Trent Valley Canal. At present Trenton is the proposed terminus, but the deputation will endeavor to show the Government that several millions of dollars can be saved by coming by way of Cobourg, and if that can be done, the lake port should be the terminus. The Government will be urged to complete the harbor, even if they do not secure the terminus of the canal. Today there is not a harbor of refuge on Lake Ontario capable of affording shelter to the large lake craft that are now used in carrying grain between the upper lake ports and the St. Lawrence, but by the expenditure of a small sum the desired harbor of refuge will be available at Cobourg. Now that the St. Lawrence canal system has been improved, it is more than ever necessary that some protection should be given to mariners who are liable to be overtaken by storms.

It was generally thought that the deputation would move on Ottawa next week, but for some unknown reason part of the deputation named left on Tuesday night, and joined with a number from Port Hope. The Mail makes the following reference to the interview—Cobourg and Port Hope fought out their respective claims to be selected as the lake terminus of the Trent Canal. The Port Hope delegation included Mayor Quinlan, Drs. Powers and Corbett, and Messrs. McCallum and Grimison. The Cobourg men were Messrs. J. B. McColl, H. Boggs, and J. T. Field. The deputation saw Mr. Blair, and were accompanied by Senator Kerr and Messrs. Craig and Guillet, M.P.'s. The respective claims of the two routes were advocated, and the Minister promised consideration.

PAYS MILLIONS.

To Talk Health to the Public.

A short time ago the advertising manager of the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., at Battle Creek, Mich., furnished this paper with a statement as follows:—"We receive in some single months 1,200 to 1,500 letters from people explaining their experience with coffee drinking, which would interest any physician or any person making the subject of health a study (and that is really a very important subject for every one). Many of these letters give the details of how the writer, having been ill for months, and in some cases for years, without discovering the cause of illness, has finally been led to suspect that coffee (which is really a drug) has been the cause, and in order to prove for their own satisfaction, have abandoned coffee and taken up Postum Food Coffee, with remakable results in many cases.

The most common ailments from coffee are headache, general nervous prostration and stomach trouble. Many times a blotchy complexion is the result, and a very large number speak of serious kidneytroubles that have been set up, which disappear when coffee is left off and Postum Food Coffee taken in its place, but the range of disorders to the human system is very wide, and directly points to the effect of coffee on the nervous system, which locates in some one or more of the different organs of the body.

It is plainly evident that any person suffering with lung trouble, catarrh, heart trouble, bowel complaint, pain in the back of the head or at the top of the spinal column, female troubles, and a wide range of difficulties will be surely and permanently helped if coffee is left out of the diet, and Postum Food Coffee taken up. The reason is as clearly marked out as any plain conclusion that the mind can reach, and is absolutely proven by personal test. Coffee is a distinct poison, to many people, often slow and insidious, but sure. Leaving it off will remove the cause of the trouble, and on the other hand, if Postum Food Coffee is taken up, the natural elements which exist in it, and which are selected from the grains of the field intended by nature for rebuilding the nervous system will make themselves shown in increased strength, vitality and health.

We feel that we have a clear right to tell these facts over and over again to the public, and ask them "to make trial for themselves, in order to prove the truth of our statements." The subject is worth the attention of everyone interested in physical and mental health.

IT PAYS TO GO TO The Best.

THE CANADA BUSINESS COLLEGE
CHATHAM, ONT.

Canada's greatest school of SHORTHAND and BUSINESS training, still holds a very strong lead over its contemporaries.

No better evidence of this claim need be offered than the following, which shows how widely this justly popular school is patronized.

117 Cities, Towns and Villages in Canada, United States and Newfoundland represented in the attendance during the year to date.

20 Counties in Ontario, six of the United States, together with five from Manitoba and Alberta, have sent their representatives. They came from the Atlantic on the East to the Pacific on the West. Distance proves no hindrance to those who are determined to attend the best.

The present is an excellent time of year to make a start. Pupils are admitted at any time. For catalogue, address.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

In Peace and in War—A Splendid Set of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Zambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvellous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and heralded to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that to-day they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and preseent is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain, but magnificent edifices of the most modern type, beautiful botanical gardens, and the public improvements are evidences of the wonderul advance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial centre, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenue of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals, lend an air of peace and tranquility, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustable veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders" whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest manifested in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before thought of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Africander whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman—born in the Cape Colony, having traveled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Zambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experiance, in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work—will present South Africa as it is to-day, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collection of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this county. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

LAMP BULBS HIS WEAPON.

Burglar Put to Flight by Being Bombarded by Them.

"Of all the outlandish weapons ever employed in a fight, says a New Orleans business man, "I think I brought the most fantastic on record into play one night last week. My family are away on a visit at present and I am keeping bachelor hall out at the house. On the night to which I refer I was aroused at about 3 a.m. by a noise somewhere in the region of the dining-room and, thinking I had shut up the dog there, I jumped up very foolishly and came down stairs in my night clothes, without so much as a pocket knife. When I opened the dining-room door I was startled to see a big rough-looking man bending over the sideboard at the far end of the room, and after we had stood there as tableau for a moment the fellow made a rush at me. I leaped back into the hall and glared around for a weapon.

"On the table near by were a dozen incandescent light bulbs, which I had brought home to replace some that had burned out, and purely by instinct I grabbed one of them and threw it at the burglar. It hit the door casing close to his head, and to my amazement, exploded with a noise like a young lyddite shell. I suppose it was a still greater surprise to the other fellow, for he let out a yell and broke for the rear, followed by a rapid-fire of 16 candle-power incandescents, which I continued to chuck at him as long as he remained in range. They smashed against the furniture with a series of crashes that alarmed the whole neighborhood, and I have been gathering up fragments of broken glass ever since. The burglar must have thought I was chasing him with hand grenades. It was the first time I ever knew incandescents made such a row when they broke. An electrician tells me it is caused by the air rushing into the vacuum."

LEPROSY IN AMERICA.

A NATIONAL HOME FOR LEPERS SUGGESTED BY FATHER MULHANE.

He Has Inspected All the Leper Camps Here and in Cuba—He Thinks the Disease Increasing—The Lepers in the Antilles—Arizona His Site for a Leper Home.

New Orleans, Feb. 19.—Father L. W. Mulhane, who has done much for the lepers in the United States, is now visiting New Orleans to inspect the condition of the lepers in Louisiana. He comes here from Cuba, where he also investigated the leper problem, and he may go to Hawaii and the Philippines to study the condition of the lepers in the Orient. While in Cuba he visited the hospital of San Lazaro, where the lepers are confined, and consulted with Governor General Wood as to the proper course to be pursued in regard to them. While here he has visited the Louisana Leper Home at Indian Camp, and had several conferences with the board recently appointed by Gov. Foster to select a new location for the Leper Home.

Father Mulhane found that leprosy is increasing in Cuba and in the United States, and he thinks that it is likely to become more formidable in the United States by introduction from our new colonial possessions unless the Government takes steps to establish a home where the lepers can be kept isolated from the rest of the community.

He found General Wood in Cuba fully awake to the importance of the leper problem. The leper hospital at Havana is an excellent one in many respects, he says, with an abundance of room for the inmates; but there are a number of improvements that can be made by General Wood, and will be made by him. His ideal is to make the home so comfortable that lepers will be glad to seek its seclusion. During the revolution, when the Spaniards had as much as they could attend to with their military hospitals, the leper hospital was neglected. It had very few inmates, while the lepers ran at large. Gen. Wood has ordered that the laws in regard to the confinement of the lepers in the hospital shall be rigidly enforced. A large number of these unfortunate people have voluntarily surrendered themselves, recognising that they will be well treated, and a leper is as rare in Havana to-day as in an American city.

Father Mulhane thinks that the number of lepers in Cuba has been underestimated, because of the unwillingness of the people to confess to the disease in its first stages. He is also of the opinion that, or the same reason, there is more of it in the United States than is popularly supposed, and he roughly estimates the number of lepers in the United States at 5,000, not including Cuba, Puerto Rica, Hawaii or the Philippines. Father Mulhane is in favor of the establishment of a national leper home or hospital, and believes that the best site for it would be in Arizona, or some of the high and dry sections around the Rocky Mountains, where the isolation would be perfect, and where the climate would be admirably suited in all ways for the patients. The national hospital would be independent of any State hospital that might be needed in a locality where through neglect or any other cause leprosy had made any headway, as in the case of the Gulf marshes of Louisiana. Father Mulhane attributes the disease in Louisiana to the Chinese fishing stations on the Gulf coast, which are seldom visited by whites, from which leprosy has branched out to some of the neighboring districts. There might be, he thought, 100 lepers in Louisiana, of whom only a small proportion were confined in the home at Indian Camp.

The Port Hope Cut.

(From the Hamilton Times.)

Is there any probability that grain would be carried in barges from Georgian Bay to Montreal, via the Trent Valley Canal if that waterway were completed? Could the small boats of light draft compete with the vessels drawing fourteen feet that will go through the Welland and St. Lawrence Canals? If not, why keep on spending money on the Trent Valley Canal, or at least why treat it as anything but a local work, important only on account of way traffic? The deputation which waited upon the Government Wednesday in favor of the Port Hope as against the Trenton route, made a very good argument, if there is any chance of the canal ever handling through traffic.

Dr. Powers, who was the chief spokesman for the deputation, informed the Minister of Railways and Canals that as far back as 1834 a survey was made of a canal route between Rice Lake and Port Hope. The proposed route would be but twelve or fifteen miles in length, while the continuation of the canal from Rice Lake to Trenton would be forty-six miles in length. On the latter route, Dr. Powers said, there would be extensive rock cuttings, while on the Port Hope route there would be nothing but clay and earth to be removed. Dr. Powers, who has made a study of the question, estimated that about two million dollars would be saved by the adoption of the Port Hope route. He asked that the government make a survey of the country between Port Hope and Rice Lake. Dr. Powers also pointed out that the town of Port Hope could give adequate transhipment facilities for grain, there being already three elevators at that point.

The saving of two or three million dollars of cost is an important item to the Canadian taxpayer, and now that the Murray canal is open, connecting Bay Quinte with Lake Ontario, the distance via Port Hope would be shorter than that by the winding Trent river, while greater speed would be made on the open lake from Port Hope to Trenton than would be possible by the river route. The cutting from Rice Lake to Port Hope would give water carriage to the important towns of Peterborough and Lindsay, which would regulate railway freight rates.

But what would East Northumberland and West Hastings, constituencies which have been kept in the tory column for a generation by the Trent Valley Canal project, have to say about the diversion of their inant to Port Hope?

Illiteracy in Russia.

The illiteracy of Russia exceeds that of any other country claiming to have a civilised government. The Humanitarian states that in 10,000 villages of the vast empire there is not a school and it is estimated that not 20 per cent of the population of the empire has acquired even the rudiments of a common school education. It has been figured out that if the Czar would disband 100,000 men of the vast army he would thereby save money enough to provide a school for each of the villages. It is not surprising that the Czar should desire to reach some arrangement with the other nations which would permit him to partially disarm.

FLABBY FELLOWS

WHO WANT TO BUILD UP THEIR BODIES WILL FIND THE "ONE THING NEEDFUL" IN

DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

The body is built up from the food we eat. But before food can be assimilated by the body it must be prepared for assimilation by the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. Food does not feed when the stomach is "out of order." The result is, weak muscles and flabby flesh. "Golden Medical Discovery" heals diseases of the stomach and digestive and nutritive system. It works with Nature to make manly muscle and form firm flesh.

In a letter received from A. D. Weller, Esq., of Pensacola, Escambia Co., Fla. (Box 544), he states: "I have, since receiving your diagnosis of my case, as stomach trouble and liver complaint, taken eight bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and must say that I am transformed from a walking shadow (as my friends called me) to perfect health."

London, Feb. 22.

Mr. Spencer Wilkinson, reviewing the military situation in the Morning Post says: "Sir Redvers Buller can hardly be expected to follow up the Boer army to or through the passes, but it is rather surprising that he should have allowed the Boers to make good their retreat from Natal without a desperate effort either to hold them fast or to convert their retreat into a rout. The net result will be the addition in a week's time of from 18,000 to 20,000 men to the Boer army confronting Lord Roberts."

London, Feb. 22.

Mr. Winston Churchill in a despatch from Chieveley, dated Feb. 20, says he still expects fierce fighting before Ladysmith is relieved and he again urges the imperative necessity of pouring a continual stream of men guns and supplies into the Cape. He declares that soldiers are wanted in South Africa not Aldershot. Meanwhile he sees many encouraging signs that the Boers are wearing of the struggle.

London, Feb. 22.

The Times says editorially: "The silence of Lord Roberts is susceptible of more interpretations than one, but it certainly indicates that the serious operations in which he is engaged are not completed. Our correspondent at Lourenzo Marques, mentions a serious report, which may be another version of the Boer story regarding General Dewett, that comes from Pretoria of the capture of the Riet River convoy. If two events have occurred, it would be a curious coincidence."

London, Feb. 22.

A despatch to the Times dated Dradock Feb. 19, says it is believed here that all danger of a colonial rising is at an end.

Cape Town, Feb. 21.

A special correspondent of the Cape Argus says: "General Cronje is surrounded at Paardeberg drift, but is offering a stubborn resistance. The British are shelling the Boers vigorously and expect to capture the whole force."

London, Feb. 22.

The Daily Mail prints the following despatch from Mafeking dated Tuesday, Feb. 20:

"The houses in the women's laager are riddled with bulletts notwithstanding the Boer promises. A woman who was standing with a suckling child was shot through the breast, while among four hundred women and children an explosive 94 pounder shell burst in the laager, a piece fixing itself in the spine of a nine-year-old boy. The explosive used caused blood poisoning and he lingered several days in agony."

NEWS AT WINDSOR.

London, Feb. 21.—At a meeting of the Town Council of Windsor this morning it was announced that news had reached Windsor Castle that Ladysmith had been relieved.

The announcement was received with immense enthusiasm and shouts of "Brave Buller."

London, Feb. 21.—There appears to be no reasonable doubt that Ladysmith has been relieved. Such an event follows as a matter of course from the invasion of the Orange Free State by General Roberts. The fact that the Boers have abandoned the line of the Tugela and that General Buller has been able to occupy the most formidable part of that line are evidence enough that the campaign in Natal has been relinquished owing to the peril in which the Boers stand of having their retreat cut off and the absolute necessity of a retrograde movement in order to defend their own territory. Even though General Buller may not have actually entered the besieged town, the siege has been raised by the falling back of the Boers, and the British army of the Tugela may at any moment enter the town. It is exceedingly probable that the forces of White and Buller are already in touch, and as soon as the bridge over the river at Colenso has been repaired and the railway north of it restored, trains bearing the much-needed supplies may be sent to the city. Thus has the Boer campaign in Natal collapsed after an occupation of the Queen's territory by Boers extending over four months and nine days, and a series of battles which have added a hundredfold to the lustre of British arms. Natal was invaded by the Boers on October 12th, two days after the issue of President Kruger's ultimatum. Glencoe, Dundee, Elandslaagte and Reitfontein followed in quick succession with Yule's retreat added and the town invested about November 4th, General French, who has since so distinguished himself escaping under fire by the last train. Ladysmith has therefore been besieged 110 days, or five days more than Londonderry, and nine days less than Kimberley. Of General Buller's ill-fated attempts to pierce the Boer line of the Tugela, the veritable Torres Vedras of the enemy, everybody knows, and Colenso, Spion Kop and Vaal Krantz are fresh in the minds of all imperialists. The first real step towards the town was made when General Buller captured Hlangwana Hill on Sunday last. This hill was evidently held by the Boers to cover the retreat of their army from Natal and his object has doubtless been accomplished without loss, so that the whole of the enemy's guns and supplies are well on their way beyond the Drakensberg, which is being held against a possible advance of Buller and White in that quarter. The plan of the Boers is to effect a junction between Cronje and Joubert. The plan of the British is to combine the forces of Buller and Kitchener,

MACDONALD HAS BEEN WOUNDED

London, Feb. 21.—It is reported that General Hector MacDonald commander of the Highland Brigade, was severely wounded yesterday. The last news received about General MacDonald and the Highlanders was that they were pursuing General Cronje.

The War Office confirms the report that General MacDonald has been severely wounded.

CRONJE'S GREAT MILITARY FEAT.

London, Feb. 21.—Accounts of the escape of the Boers from Magersfontein serve to demonstrate the military talent of General Cronje, who is considered by the Boers to be a better leader than Joubert himself. There is no longer any doubt that the Boer commander succeeded in accomplishing the difficult military feat of withdrawing his force between the British lines, a hitch in Lord Roberts' time table causing slight delay which allowed him to do so. The wily Cronje waited at Magersfontein until General French had entered Kimberley on Thursday evening last, when he immediately struck camp, marched along the north bank of the Modder to Klip Drift, twenty miles away. This drift was occupied by the British and Boer General was consequently compelled to continue his march in search of a ford by which he could cross the river and make for Bloemfontein to the south-east. He was successful. Six miles to the east he came to Klip Kraal Drift, which he succeeded in crossing. This he would not have done had the divisions ordered to march north to occupy the drift arrived in time. A delay at the Riet River, however, caused Gen. Kelly-Kenny's division to arrive too late for this purpose and when it came up the enemy had effected a crossing, despite the opposition of a force detailed from Klip Drift and sent along the south bank of the river, but which also arrived too late to prevent the passage. On Saturday Kelly-Kenny, with the sixth, and Colville with the ninth—including the Canadians—came up and attacked the Boers, entering upon the running fight which has apparently been in progress since, while MacDonald marched along the north bank to Koodoes Rand Drift, twelve miles further east, hoping to cross and intercept them before they passed that place by the southern route. This plan also appears to have been unsuccessful so tenaciously and skilful was the retreat conducted. It is believed that a large portion of Cronje's force scattered and found its way through the British cordon in units, while the force which is retreating with Cronje was held together by the necessity of taking off the baggage and guns.

Beyond Koodoes rand drift the story does not go. General Kitchener, who is in charge of the pursuit, will evidently follow the enemy to Bloemfontein if need be. In fact, he may be there already. Be this as it may, one important object has been attained in diverting the enemy to the south in the direction of Bloemfontein and away from the north, where a junction might more easily have been effected with forces sent post haste from Natal where the siege of Ladysmith has apparently been relieved, owing to the exigencies of the campaign in the Orange Free State. Cronje may, however, be joined by the commandoes from Stormberg and Colesberg, also relieved from their presence by the necessity of defending their country. As they are not in such great numbers as Joubert's there is not so much to be feared from them, and Roberts has in all likelihood taken steps to forestall them.

CONCENTRATING FOR BIG BATTLE

London, Feb. 21.—Discussing Buller's move across the Tugela, the Morning Leader's war expert says: "The crossing was scarcely opposed, but that is not to say that fierce resistance may not be looked for before the Onderbrooks works are negotiated. A high authority agreed yesterday with the opinion expressed in these columns that two-thirds or three-fourths of White's force will be available for active operations any time within a week. We cannot see how the advance through North Natal can be made before Charlestown and Van Reenen's Pass are secured. As for the question of Buller invading the Transvaal, a practical difficult exists. Our information is that his transport is utterly insufficient, unless the Boers oblige him by fighting along the railroad. We look for one fight about Pieter's Station and then the departure of the commandoes of Free Staters for Drakensburg and the Transvaalers for Majuba.

"Nothing is doing in North Cape Colony, and the greater part of the Boers apparently have retired to fight in their own state. Expectation sits in the gate to know the result of the chase after Cronje."

BOERS USED DYNAMITE.

London, Feb. 21.—Another account of Colonel Plumer's fight at Crocodile Pools says: The Boers were entrenched on a steep, thorny ridge. While struggling through the barbed wire entanglements the British alarmed the Boer dogs. The barking of the dogs brought the Boers out, and they began firing. The British then made a bayonet charge, and the Boers exploded dynamite mines. The British retreated.

BOERS HELD AS HOSTAGES.

Lorenzo, Marquez, Feb. 21.—An official report received from Colonel Baden-Powell of the occurrences in Mafeking up to February 3rd, concludes as follows:

"General Snyman, in reply to a letter complaining of the deliberate shelling of the women's and children's laager offered no excuse or apology, and by a transparent falsehood admits that he ordered the shelling. I have told him that I have now established temporary premises for Boer prisoners in the women's laager and hospital in order to protect them from deliberate shelling."

BULLER CROSSED THE RIVER.

London, Feb. 21.—4.27 p.m.—The War Office has received the following from Gen. Buller—

"Chieveley Camp, Feb. 21.—The fifth division crossed the Tugela to-day by Pontoon and drove back the enemy's rear guard, our naval twelve-pounder silencing all of the enemy's guns."

RELIEF OF LADYSMITH.

London, Feb. 21.—The War Office declares it is unable to substantiate the reports of the relief of Ladysmith. But this does not prevent the public from believing the Queen has again forestalled the authorities at Pall Mall, and preferred to communicate the glad news direct to the public through the Mayor of Windsor, just as she announced yesterday through Lord William Cecil, commander of a militia corps, the tidings of General Buller's success hours before the War Office was able to relieve the impatient anxiety of the United Kingdom. Nevertheless as the Queen's words are not actually quoted in to-day's announcement official confirmation is eagerly awaited, especially as General Buller's despatch of yesterday is very generously regarded as foreshadowing a juncture of his and Gen. White's forces some time to-day. Public interest, expectation and anxiety therefore sway unceasingly between Ladysmith and Bloemfontein. The practical relief of the former place is regarded as due more to Field Marshal Roberts' brilliant strategy in drawing off the Boers than to Gen. Buller's numerous assaults, and news of the result of the battle between Gen. Kitchener and Gen. Cronje, reinforced by the forces thus drawn off from Ladysmith, is expected to almost synchronize with the announcement that Gen Buller has reached his objective .

The War Office announced this afternoon that it had no news from other sources. There is yet nothing to throw light on the main issues.

FORCED TO FALL BACK.

London, Feb. 21.—Regarding the military conditions, the critics of the afternoon papers express the keenest satisfaction at the phase of the campaign revealed by the latest news drawing attention to the fact that whether or not Lord Roberts succeeds in inflicting a decisive defeat, he has forced the Boers to release their grip on Ladysmith, Kimberley, Zululand and lower Natal, though admitting that the siege of Mafeking may be made more severe by the arrival of a portion of the Boer force driven off from Kimberley endeavoring to avenge itself on Colonel Baden-Powell.

ATTACK ON ARUNDEL.

London, Feb. 21.—Arundel despatches, dated Tuesday, Feb. 20, show that the Boers in force made a determined attempt to invest Arundel, but were baffled by the smart manoeuvring of the British mounted troops.

Mr. Cecil Rhodes is expected to arrive in Cape Town, Feb. 24.

LAST OF THE CANADIANS.

Halifax, N.S., Feb. 21.—The day set for the sailing of the Milwaukee, with the last detachment of the second contingent, opened bright and clear. The men were out around town last night until late, when the bugle call sounded this morning there were many who would have preferred a few hours more rest.

At 7 o'clock the express companies commenced to move the troopers' kits, and the work proceeded rapidly. Officers' quarters were also cleared early and the men ordered to clean up for inspection by General Lord William Seymour.

Crowds of people were moving about the city. Hundreds of strangers who arrived on the train last night lined the streets, all anxious to get a glimpse of the Canadians on their way to fight for and probably fall in defence of the British Empire in South Africa. Every hotel was crowded, private boarding houses were also filled up and very few more could has been accommodated. The morning trains also brought in thousands of excursionists, and the city was in readiness to give the men the best send off of any previously leaving Halifax.

The decorations about town were very attractive. The principal buildings were simply a mass of bunting and hundreds of flags floated in the breeze. Very little business was done, the merchants, as a rule, closing their shops or permitting their entire staff to leave for the balance of the day. All public schools were dismissed to give the scholars an opportunity of witnessing the departure of the brave Canadians.

At the dockyard 2,500 tickets were issued, and holders commenced to arrive bright and early in order to get good positions. The men were paraded at 2.30, and, after a brief inspection by the General, they marched through the principal streets to the dockyard. All the city bands turned out and played the men to the troopship. Embarkation was quickly completed shortly before four o'clock, and the ship pulled off at once. It is expected she will leave port at six o'clock this evening. The Elder-Dempster line guest boat, Chebucto, and the Government steamer Lansdowne, with other boats, accompanied the vessel some distance.

MILITIA BALLOT REJECTED.

London, Feb. 21.—The Earl of Wemyss' motion in the House of Lords favoring the adoption of the militia ballot was rejected yesterday by a vote of 9 to 42. Lord Lansdowne, Secretary of State for War, said that in his opinion it would be inexpedient to have recourse to the militia ballot except in the case of a complete failure of the voluntary system.

The Duke of Devonshire shared this view, adding that the present emergency did not call for the ground "hysterical appeals" of Lord Rosebery, nor for a mobilization of the fleet. Lord Kimberley and the Marquis of Salisbury were also opposed to the ballot. The latter said that if the bill were passed and the ballot proved unsuccessful it would give abroad an impression of defencelessness, thus adding to the many dangers enumerated by the Earl of Rosebery. If the ballot were introduced it would be impossible to stop short of conscription.

"It had been suggested that the ballot would have the effect of driving men into the ranks of volunteers. He suspected that it would drive them to emigrate to the trans-Atlantic countries, where their own language and religion prevail, and where there is no ballot of that sort to frighten them. He preferred not to run the risk of awakening unaccustomed emotions at a time when it is necessary that the nation should work in harmony."

THE TRIP OF THE QUEEN.

London, Feb. 21.—The final arrangements of the Queen's route to Bordighera is via Antwerp, Strasburg, Basle and Lucerne, through St. Gathard tunnel. The route nowhere touches France Emperor William and Prince Henry will go to Strasburg to meet her Majesty.

THE QUEEN'S WISHES.

Ottawa, Feb. 21.—His Excellency the Governor-General has received the following cable from the secretary of State for the Colonies.

London, Feb. 21.—Her Majesty the Queen appreciates the enthusiastic loyalty of Canada, and wishes the troops God speed and a safe return. Signed, CHAMBERLAIN.

A CONFESSION BY LEMIEUX.

He Turns Queen's Evidence and Makes Damning Charges Against Directors.

Montreal, Feb. 21.—The evidence of Ferdinand Lemieux, late accountant of the defunct Banque Ville Marie, which was taken in secret before Judge Choquet at the recent sittings, has been given to the press. It shows that Lemieux has turned Queen's evidence.

He charges that the directors as far back as 1897 knew the bank to be insolvent, and charges that the directors deliberately set to work to open as many branches and receive as much of the people's money as possible, knowing the bank to be insolvent; that they issued instructions to the manager of each branch to receive as many deposits as possible, and to pay as little discount as he could.

Many of these branches were opened since the directors knew the bank to be insolvent, he claims, the object being to get funds to pay dividends to shareholders.

He also charges that the false statements issued were prepared on instructions from the directors for the purpose of deceiving the Government and the public. He also charges the directors with speculating in stocks on margins through the firm of W. Weir & Sons, and keeping the full value of the stocks so speculated in on the books of the bank as assets.

This evidence, it is stated, was taken by Judge Choquet in person, with no lawyers present either in the interests of Limieux, the directors or the crown.

CANADIANS DIE AND BLEED FOR THE EMPIRE!

Troops From the Dominion Joined in Pursuit of the Boers and Lost Heavily in Trying to Check Cronje.

TWENTY CANADIANS WERE KILLED IN THE BATTLE.

Sixty Members of the Contingent Wounded and Nine Missing From the Ranks—Canadians Engaged in an All-Day Conflict.

Modder River, Feb. 20.—The Canadian contingent participated in Sunday's battle under Generals Colville, Kelly-Kenny and Kitchener. They made a forced march to intercept the retreating Boers and came up with the enemy at the Modder River, which they forded after marching all night. Notwithstanding their fatigue, consequent upon their long march and loss of sleep, they forded the river and attacked the enemy, and were engaged the whole day, the Boers offering a stubborn resistance, as the following list of casualties show—

WHERE THE FIGHT WAS.

Pretoria, Tuesday, Feb. 20.—Official reports have been received as follows—

Commandant Steyn says that on Saturday, Feb. 17, and Sunday, February 18, near Koedoesrand he fought the British who tried to encompass General Cronje's laager and drove them off. They fought until late Sunday evening. The Boers had one man killed and one man wounded, and captured booty and 21 horses and mules.

General Dewett says—

On Sunday afternoon between Paardeberg and Koedoesrand, in which direction there had been heavy firing since morning.

He stormed several kopjes, which the British vacated, leaving their dead and wounded and forty prisoners in the hands of the Boers who captured the kopjes. The Boer loss was two men killed and four wounded. The fight lasted until late in the evening.

Morning Times

PORTUGAL, A BRITISH ALLY.

Beyond all cavil, the most important news in reference to the South African campaign which has been made public is the fact that a sort of offensive and defensive alliance has been negotiated between the Portugese government and that of Lord Salisbury. The statement authorizing this was given out to the Associated Press on Sunday and was published in the daily papers yesterday. That it is more or less true is vouched for by this international news agency in the following words:—"It is scarcely necessary to say that all the foregoing (the facts referred to) is gleaned from the highest sources and is based on unimpeachable authority.

The only ports on the East African coast available for the Transvaal are three, Durban, in the possession of the British and forming the ocean port for Natal, with Delagoa Bay and Beira belonging to Portugal and lying to the North of Durban. The strip of Portugese territory bounded by the ocean on the east and the Transvaal on the west is about 50 miles across; the port of Delagoa Bay is connected by rail from Portugal's territory to a pass in the mountain range, and thence direct to Pretoria, the Boer capitl, the entire distance being about 350 miles. As most people are aware, it is through this Delagoa Bay that the Transvaalers have been able to obtain the bulk of their supplies of guns, ammunition and food. As an independent government, Portugal had the undoubted right to allow these shipments prior to October 10th, when the Boer ultimatum startled the civilized world. Now that a condition of war exists between the so-called republic of the Transvaal and British the Portugese authorities had no right to give "aid and comfort" to the enemy by allowing the importation of munitions of war to be despatched by rail to Pretoria. It is shrewdly suspected that the officials at Delagoa Bay, with or without the connivance of the Portuguese government, have allowed the entry of vast supplies at this place for Boer use since the war began. Doubtless, diplomatic pressure has been put upon Portugal to stop these clandestine operations, but it is feared that they still continue.

This business could easily be adjusted by the despatch of a British fleet to Delagoa Bay, but such an audacious move might be attended with worse consequences than result from the Boers getting supplies through that quarter. It is a pet theory with many that "the pen is mightier than the sword," and in this case the proverb is likely to hold good. Negotiations between Britain and Portugal for the possession, or control, of this port during the war have been going on for months, and if the news received yesterday is to be believed, have ended in Britain's obtaining such assurances from Portugal as now mark her more or less as an actual ally instead of a non-committal neutral. The despatch reads—"Portugal, bending to the medium of coercion, and convinced that Britain is able to uphold her, has acquiesced until there practically exists to-day an alliance of the strongest fibre between Great Britain and Portugal." Under this alliance, if it is a bona-fide understanding, Portugal assents to two conditions, first, not to permit the entry of supplies for the Boers via Delagoa Bay; second, to permit the entry of British troops there to cross her 50 miles of territory directly to the Transvaal border. If this is accomplished a new route to Pretoria is thus opened without forcing a passage from Natal around Ladysmith, or from the Orange river north to Bloemfontein, the Free State capital, and so on to Pretoria.

It may certainly be held that great anti-British European pressure has been exercised on Portugal to prevent the consummation of this diplomatic move, and nothing but the powerful shield that England can interpose to save her from the vengeance of her enemies has induced her to give her consent. In short, Portugal has had to consider her position all round. First, it must be apparent to her statesmen that, if the Boer pretensions are sustained, in a short time her territory would be annexed to the Transvaal as well as Delagoa Bay. Secondly, if Britain casts her adrift, herr monarchy would be absorbed by Spain. So, taking into consideration these views, she wisely deems it to her interest to close with all-powerful Britain, who will defend her against the Boer tyranny and the Franco-Spanish combination. In order to re-establish the position of Spain as a "power" in Europe, the continental scheme is to compel Portugal to allow her territory to be annexed. France and Russia are behind this movement, the details of which were arranged by the Russian minister of foreign affairs when he visited Madrid and Paris last fall. France was to obtain a Spanish port—presumably Cadiz—by way of compensation for her assistance in this political deal, while Spain herself was to acquire Portugal as a compensation for the loss of Cuba and the Philippines. It is not to the interest of Britain that the hitherto established "balance of power" in Europe should be trenched upon by the snuffing out of Portugal as an independent monarchy, and with it the transfer of all her African possessions. If this move is not thwarted by British interference very likely the important position of Delagoa Bay might fall to the share of France in the general spoliation.

All these complications, so serious to Britain are in the air. If the understanding between Portugal and Britain pertain, France, Russia and Spain will be nonplussed. In view of the mighty, the weighty, considerations involved—ultimate possession of Delagoa Bay, which is the key to the east African frontier—the Transvaal war receives additional interest. Britain may not seek to acquire this Delagoa Bay for herself, which would only further inflame the hatred with which she is regarded by France and Russia; her policy would be to maintain the ascendancy of Portugal on the East African coast with permission to free access for herself. Germany's recent exhibition of "friendship" is dominated by similar considerations, for the Emperor William would be decidedly averse to seeing France, through Spain, occupy that important place, thereby threatening Germany's interests in Africa.

These considerations are doubtless affecting the policy of Lord Salisbury at the present time. If Portugal has now resolved to throw herself upon British protection to save her African territory, and even her very existence as a "power," from absorbtion by Spain, the British fleet must be ready to defeat the machinations of the new triple alliance—France, Russia and Spain. Germany would doubtless, in the event of a war arising out of this complexity of affairs, be found with her fleet and army aiding with Great Britain for the protection of little Portugal. It looks like a pretty game of political chess as it now presents itself to the public view. So, the Transvaal war has deeper springs of action than the mere question of the supremacy of the Orange Free State and Transvaal republics. Hence, the enormous army being despatched to South Africa, and the efforts being made for the mobilization of the British fleet in all seas. Great Britain's power and possessions in Africa are being threatened by France and Russia, the two belligerent Republics merely being the advanced pawns!

THE LESSON FOR ENGLAND IN THE SOUTH AFRICAN WAR.

The English magazines of discussion, for the current month, more especially the Nineteenth Century, give much space to criticism of the existing military system of Great Britain and suggestions for its amendment and reformation. It is not necessary that we should go into these in detail, for the subject invites endless controversy, there being now, apparently, no possibility of agreement among British military men concerning it.

The most important of the changes recommended is that of Lord Rosebery for some sort of military conscription. It far outshadows in its significance all the rest, for the introduction of such a measure would involve radical social changes, completely transforming England from what it has been for a century. The revival of the Militia Ballot law, suspended since 1829, is the form most generally advocated, or rather tentatively suggested. It makes all male persons between the ages of 18 and 30 liable to military service, according to the quotas called for, though it grants many exemptions and permits of the employment of substitutes.

Could such a draft be enforced successfully in England? The circumstance that even under the strain and excitement of the present war recruiting has not been brisk, though regiments of the Volunteers have not hesitated to endure its risks, is not hopeful. In England, "England taking the Queen's shilling," or enlisting, has been heretofore regarded as almost next going to the poorhouse. An army exceeding 200,000 men has been sent to South Africa, it is true, but it includes substantially the whole force of the regular troops of the Empire not absolutely required for colonial garrisons.

It is not probable that England would have any satisfactory experience in an attempt to enforce a military conscription Such a measure is contrary to the genius of the country, and especially would it prove dangerously ineffectual in the case of a sanguinary war in far-away South Africa. Exemptions tolerated by the Militia Ballot law in 1829 would outrage the democratic spirit of the England of this time, but even if the old and disused statute could be enforced the consequences to industry would be so grave as to make its cost too great.

If Great Britain is to revise and reform its military system the task must be put off until the South African war is over. That conflict is teaching all military England a lesson which will unquestionably lead to such reformation eventually, but while the war goes on there will be no opportunity for experimenting in that direction. The Empire must be content to go along with the present military system, however faulty it may be, until the time comes, after peace, when it can deliberately study the teachings of the disasters in South Africa, with a view to making them profitable in a reorganization of its future military service.

The demonstration in South Africa of the enormous advantage modern arms give to the defensive suggests, moreover, that there has occurred a change in the conditions of warfare itself and that British misfortunes there have been due to it rather than to any mere defect in the particular British military system. Hereafter, this little war with the Boers is likely to afford more material for the study of military men the world over than they will find in many of the greatest contests of history.

HIGH EXPLOSIVES.

Making Them Is a Very Dangerous Trade —Perils That Beset the Manufacture of Nitroglycerine.

Nitroglycerin and its peculiarities are little known, even in localities where it is made. People generally give it a wide berth, and even a less number know how it is manufactured. Probably in no place in the United States is there such a great amount of the explosive used as in the Indiana oilfields, says The Philadelphia Press. Indiana has four nitroglycerin factories, and they are seldom visited by curious people.

The explosive is made from a composition of acids and glycerin. It is generally pale yellow in color, and quite colorless when pure. It is odorless, and has a sweet, pungent, aromatic flavor. If touched by one's tongue, or even brought into contact with the skin, it will produce a severe headache. A large tank, called an agitator, is where the fluid is mixed, and the mixture is composed of equal parts of nitric and sulphuric acids. Inside the tank are several paddles, like those of a churn, and it is here that the real danger exists. The paddles are put in operation and a steady stream of sweet glycerin is turned into a vat until 250 pounds are thoroughly mixed with the 1,500 pounds of acid. The chemicals coming in contact produce an intense heat, and in order to obviate the danger cold water is run through pipes encircling and running through the vat. At 85 degrees F. a red vapor, almost like fire, arises. If cutting off the supply of glycerin in the agitator does not lower the temperature, it is time to say farewell. Before 90 degrees are reached nothing but atoms of the structure and its contents are left.

Colonel William A. Meyers, of Bolivar, N.Y., was the man who made and exploded the first round of nitroglycerin in an oil well. He built the first factory in the United States, near Titusville, Pa., in 1868. Up to that time powder had been used to torpedo oil wells. It was then that an explosive that could be discharged under water was found in nitroglycerin. Colonel Myers' father was a Philadelphia chemist and taught his son how to make it.

The first well torpedoed was on Colonel Mills' lease, near Titusville, and the charge consisted of only two and the charge consisted of only two pounds. Oil was worth $9 a barrel then, and a torpedo that would double the production of a well was worth almost what the maker chose to ask for it. Colonel Myers built 12 different factories in different parts of the oil regions from 1868 to 1886, when he retired from the business. Only one of the original factories stands intact to-day. Myers made several fortunes and spent his money like a prince, but, fortunately for him, he still has a snug sum laid by.

Boers Great Pioneers.

The Boer is the ideal pioneer. From the days of the great trek, in 1837, and even before that he opened up countries hitherto unexplored by a white man. A great deal of fuss has been made of mighty travelers, English and foreign, who have traversed Africa, to the vast pecuniary benefit of their publishers and with no small meed of fame to themselves, but there was scarcely one of the old voortrekkers and hunters of the forties and fifties who did not accomplish feats of endurance, pluck and lengthy travel which were ten times as trying.—London Mail.

Family Peacemakers.

More family troubles are adjusted by the magistrates in this city than the average person would willingly believe. There is hardly a day passes that every member of the minor judiciary is not called upon by a determined husband or wife, usually the latter, to issue a warrant. Nine cases out of ten the applicant is considerably excited and is eager to invoke the aid of the law in settling some trifling controversy. By calm argument and assurances the visitor can usually be persuaded to give the offender of her or his peace and happiness another chance, and a home is perhaps saved from being broken up.—Philadelphia Call.

Union Development Co.

Four of the properties in this proposition have produced nearly fifteen million dollars up to the present time, being three times the capitalization of the Company. They are the Goldenville, Lecatina, Carlton, and East Mine. There are some 20 properties in this consolidation, read carefully the advertisement in this issue of the Times. A Safe investment; first block of stock offered at par, one dollar. William H. Bremner, 9 Toronto street, Toronto.

AMERICA'S SYMPATHIES ARE WITH THE BOERS.

An English Writer Throws a Side Light on the Public Opinion of This Country.

London, Beb. 22.—Mr. Massington, the former editor of the Chronicle, writes to the Leader under the heading, "What will America Do?" He says: "A new world power has arisen in the great American people. McKinley and Hay share, I believe, the opinion of a minority of Englishmen that the war in South Africa is an error and a crime, but they remember that, thanks to the pressure from below, the British Government was benevolently neutral in the Spanish war, and therefore, as far as public opinion will allow them, they would like to sail on an even keel in South Africa. But, as they well know, behind them lies a mighty, and as they well know, an ungovernable, force expressing itself with absolute freedom, and forcing its will on party managers and knocking imperatively at the doors of the President. Because a few American ladies who have married or fought their way into English society started a hospital ship it was imagined that American sympathies were with the British power. Nothing can be more unfortunate than any political action that comes from such quarters and is blessed by such negligible persons as the Smalley New York correspondent.

"America is not pro-English and never will be in the sense that our sentimental imperialists desire. America is profoundly attached to the republican principle. She will not see it weakened to the profit of her ancient mistress, and great popular newspapers like the New York World have been quick to read this sign of American temper. Hostile intervention on the part of America would not be tolerated, but what if, using the machinery of The Hague conference, or acting on a hint from private sources, America were to propose a policy of mutual disarmament?"

The writer then suggests this basis of intervention. The demolition of the Boer government; the withdrawal of the British army, except the Durban and Cape Town garrisons; an international guarantee of the independence of the republic, subject to British control of foreign affairs; five years naturalization for Outlanders in South Africa, and the States and Colonies to meet in convention a year after the close of the war to arrange for a confederation.

DISAGREEABLE TRAITS.

Sometimes They Impair the Usefulness of Otherwise Good Men.

Squire Granby was dead. The village people had gathered in the church to hear his funeral sermon, says The Youth's Companion. The old doctor, with his nephew, John, who was down from the city, sat in a back pew.

The minister told what everyone there knew to be the truth of the dead man. A faithful believer in Christ, a man of high integrity, in whose justice and honesty the whole community trusted, liberal to the poor, walking blameless under every moral law.

"Was all that true?" said John, as he and the doctor walked home.

"Every word of it."

"And yet," said the young man, "I got the impression the other day at the funeral that neither his neighbors nor his family felt his death very deeply. Indeed, I fancied I saw a look of relief on their faces."

The doctor was silent for a moment. "You are too shrewd an observer, Jack;" he said. "The squire loved to manage. He was a busy, energetic man, and he thought it his duty to lash every man and woman who was not as busy and energetic as himself. His tongue was like a goad. He was a man, too, who never praised or encouraged anybody. His wife and children probably never heard a word of commendation from him in their lives, strive as they might.

"Then he complained incessantly of the weather, of his food, of the state of the church and the country; of all that his family did or did not do. When he came into the room you felt that a chilly fog had closed in upon you.

"And yet, in spite of these faults, the squire was faithful in his heart to his friends and to God. He probably never was conscious of these disagreeable traits, but they were so noticeable that his neighbors, and even his children and his wife, could not help a certain feeling of relief when he was gone."

"I wonder," said Jack, "if he knew, when he wakened in that other life, how depressing and unpleasant a Christian he had been in this?"

"And I wonder," said the doctor, "if there is no way for you and me to find out our petty faults—our disagreeable personal traits—in time to mend them here in this life?"

Queer Cards of Shrewd Lawyers.

Not all men of the legal profession are content with the severe inscription on their cards to which etiquette and custom usually confine them. An Ohio lawyer who makes a specialty of collections calls attention to this fact by a novel device printed on his cards and letter heads. On a great red splotch intended to represent a drop of blood are the words, "Claims collected in cold blood," the capital "C" for the three first letters of these words being of sufficient size to encircle the other words.

In Maryville, Mo., a lawyer presents his portrait on his card, with the suggestive motto: "He that is not with you is against you. See me early."

A Race With the Sun.

The London Daily Mail says if an aerial machine were capable of traveling at any rate up to 1,000 miles an hour a traveler in it, starting westward from London at a speed of 600 miles an hour, would arrest the progress of time. If he started at 10 a. m., it would always be to him 10 a. m. Should he find his unending day monotonous, he could reverse his direction and get a quick succession of short days and nights of some six hours' duration, but he could regulate the length by the speed of his machine. Suppose he traveled from London one night at 10 o'clock westward at a speed of 1,000 miles per hour. He would soon experience the sensation of seeing the sun rising in the west where it had set a short time before.

SCAVENGER OF THE VELDT.

The Aasvogel, Which Keeps the Wide Plains Clean.

Although the term "vulture" has been used for all time as a term of the vilest opprobrium, no one who knows the bird, its appearance and its habits could doubt for a moment that it expresses a depth of degradation which is barely conceivable.

And yet the vulture does a great deal of good in acting as the scavenger of the veldt. But for his quick eye, carrion taste and love of dead meat the disease germs in the carcasses of dead oxen would be far more prolific and dangerous.

Throughout South Africa is found the aasvogel. Go anywhere you like on the veldt, and sooner or later—and in all probability the former—you will find the remains of his ghastly meal. There are hundreds of thousands of oxen used in the transport and trekking service. Many of them die from exhaustion, want of water or cruelty from their Boer masters. Or they may eat of the poisonous tulp, a bulbous plant growing in marshy places.

A kurneyor, or teamster, soon knows if any one or more of his oxen have been eating tulp. The neck of the ox swells, his eyes close up, he gives short, sharp coughs, and his case is generally hopeless. Sometimes, however, he may be saved, and this by a peculiar, homeopathic sort of remedy. If the bulb of the tulp plant is crushed into pulp, mashed with hot water and forced boiling hot down the throat of the ox he may recover.

The quickness of the eye of the aasvogel is simply astounding. An ox falls out of the team, evidently ill. He is outspanned from his yoke fellow, and he goes down to the spruit, or stream. The sky above and away to the horizon on all sides is absolutely clear and cloudless.

Hardly has the breath left the body of the poor ox than you may observe far, far away up in the sky a tiny black speck, then another and another and another, until there are 20 of them. Gradually they get larger and larger, circling round in ever diminishing circles all the while they descend. The dead ox forms the center of the circumference of their flight. Within a few minutes the grisly horde swoop down upon the still warm beast and commence their ghoulish task.

An hour afterward there is nothing in the spruit but a bundle of bleached white bones that might have been there for months. The sky is clear and speckless again. The aasvogel has scavenged the veldt.

Whittier's Predicament.

Whittier held "Gail Hamilton" (Abigail Dodge) in the highest esteem, and the letters that passed between them are really most delightful. Here is one of the series in The Ladies' Home Journal that is truly characteristic of Whittier. It was written in 1896:

"I must tell thee something droll. Last week the Amoskeag veterans from New Hampshire and a Massachusetts company, with military bands, came and paraded before our house, and Governor Smyth of New Hampshire and one or two officers called on me. When they left and I stepped out to see them civilly off, the men in epaulets got up a grand military salute, with music and three cheers to wind up with! Was ever a Quaker in such a predicament? I did, I fear, somewhat compromise myself by lifting, almost involuntarily, my hand to my hat. But I resisted the temptation and only pulled my hat lower down over my brows by way of testimony."

Steel Combs.

A man who saw in a sidewalk showcase some steel combs and who wondered what steel combs could be used for found upon inquiry that they were used by furriers in combing furs. There was one of these combs that looked much like a comb of the ordinary kind, coarse toothed for half its length and finer toothed the other half. And then there was one comb that had teeth for half its length, the solid end serving as a handle.

There are other steel combs that are used for a similar purpose, as steel combs made to comb dogs with. The dog comb looks somewhat like the fine toothed comb in its general shape, but it is larger, toothed on one side only and coarser toothed than the so called fine comb. The untoothed side combs of this sort are used on various kinds of dogs, including, for instance, long haired dogs like the French poodle.

Forgotten Her Calling.

"Yes, the doctor ordered him sent to the hospital. He wasn't getting the right kind of care at home."

"Let's see. Whom did he marry?"

"His wife was a trained nurse."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SOME QUEER DREAMS.

VISIONS THAT RESULTED IN THE CAPTURE OF CRIMINALS.

Marvelous Manifestations That Baffle the Ingenuity of Man to Explain and Which Prove Anew That Truth Is Stranger Than Fiction.

A very remarkable instance of the tracing of a criminal by means of a dream occurred in St. Louis. A woman named Mary Thornton was detained in custody for a month, charged with the murder of her husband. A week or so after her arrest she requested to see one of the prison officials and told him she had dreamed that an individual named George Ray had murdered her spouse, giving the official at the same time full details of the tragedy as witnessed in her vision. The man Ray was not suspected at the time, but the prison authorities were so much impressed by the woman's obvious earnestness that a search was at once made for him.

After some delay he was traced and charged with the crime, the details of the same as seen in the dream being rehearsed to him. Overcome with astonishment, he then and there confessed that he had committed the crime. Curiously enough, the woman had only met the murderer once and believed him to be on the very best of terms with her husband.

Almost as remarkable was the case of a woman named Drew, who dreamed one night that her husband, a retired sailor, had been murdered by a peddler at a Gravesend tavern, where the said husband was in the habit of putting up when visiting the town in question. The first news that awaited her on rising in the morning was that her spouse had been assassinated at the very tavern she had seen in her extraordinary vision, whereupon she burst into hysterical tears and cried out that her dream had come true.

She calmed down somewhat after a few hours and then handed the police officials an exact description of the peddler of the vision, giving a minute account of his dress, which included a blue coat of a very peculiar pattern. Marvelous as the fact may appear, a man wearing such a coat and following the occupation of a peddler was discovered two days later at an inn some six miles from Gravesend, and, on being taxed with the crime, he at once admitted that he was guilty and that robbery had been the motive of the outrage. He was hanged soon afterward, his doom having been brought about by the flimsy evidence of a woman's dream.

Women as dreamers seem more successful than men, but a rather peculiar instance of a crime being traced by a vision and in which the dreamer was a member of the male sex comes from Rennes, in France. A worthy merchant, having quitted his office one Saturday evening, proceeded home to dinner and after enjoying a substantial meal lay down on the couch and fell into a light doze. A very vivid dream then came to him wherein he saw two men of the burglar type engaged in rifling the safe in his office, and so much impressed was he by the vision that he resolved, upon awakening, to at once go to the office and see that everything was under lock and key.

His amazement may be imagined when, on arriving there, he discovered the door forced and a burglary in progress. To summon a couple of gendarmes was the work of an instant, and five minutes later the thieves, who proved to be notorious housebreakers, were on their way to the police depot, where the prosecutor told his extraordinary story. In view of the fact that the safe contained valuables to the extent of some thousands of pounds, the dream in question proved a very fortunate one for the dreamer.

How to explain these marvelous manifestations, which prove once more that truth is stranger than fiction, is a task beyond the ingenuity of man to compass. Perchance the theory of telepathy may have something to do with the mysterious business, but even that theory would appear rather inadequate in such cases as the aforementioned.

A skillful forger who moved in the highest circles of society was once detected by the agency of a dream. The affair occurred in Boston and caused the greatest excitement of the time.

The forger, a young man of eight or nine and twenty, had become acquainted with a rich publisher, at whose house he became a constant guest. One day the publisher's bankers discovered that some one was forging their client's signature to various large checks, and two detectives were at once instructed to look out for the culprit.

Their efforts proved useless, but one evening the publisher's youngest daughter, a little girl of 11, dreamed that she saw a man whom she described as "like Mr. Blank," the visitor to whom reference has been made, sitting in a room in Maine street copying her father's signature. The child's dream was communicated to the police, who, though inclined to ridicule the same at the outset, eventually promised to have the gentleman in question watched, with the result that his lodgings were raided and a complete plant for the making of bank notes found there. It then transpired that he was a man who was wanted for manifold forgeries throughout the Union, and he was sent to prison for a very long term.

The child's dream was all the more extraordinary in view of the fact that she was too young to understand the leading incidents of the business and attributed the copying of her father's signature in the dream to the "gentleman wanting to write nicely, like papa." Strange, very strange, but none the less true, and proving once more that, as Hamlet remarked, "There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamed of in your philosophy."—Philadelphia Times.

Rug, Mat and Carpet Makers.

Always Use the Diamond Dyes.

They Give the Richest, Most Brilliant and Most Lasting Colors.

Ninety-five per cent. of the rags and other materials used in the manufacture of home-made mats, rugs and carpets are colored by the Diamond Dyes.

Why? Because the Diamond Dyes always give to cotton, wool and union materials the fullest, brightest, richest and most lasting colors; sun, soap or washing cannot fade Diamond Dye colors.

Mrs. D. Davidson, Covey Hill, P.Q., writes thus:

"I have been using your Diamond Dyes for many years, and they have always given entire satisfaction. To-day we emptied two packets of your dyes and I am obliged to buy more, as we are making sixty yards of rag carpet. I have used your cotton colors and I think they are beautiful. The stripes in my carpet—black, green, red and yellow—are rich. I cannot sufficiently praise Diamond Dyes; all my neighbors speak well of them.

BOERS KILLED IN AN EXPLOSION

Over Sixty Perished in the Arsenal Disaster at Modderfontein.

Pietermaritzburg, Natal, Feb. 20.—Major Brasier-Creagh, the surgeon in charge of the ambulance train from Frere to Mool River, brought ninety-five wounded British soldiers here today. Six of them were officers. He also brought in three wounded Boers, all of whom had been shot in the thigh.

On the way down the Boers talked freely to the surgeon. They told him the Boers were fighting for their independence and hoped they would win.

The Boer Mauser cartridge manufactory at Modderfontein has been blown up. Between sixty and seventy workmen were killed by the explosion.

Mr. J. G. Bradley, the well known cutter, of Toronto, arrived here a few days ago to assume a position in Mercer's merchant tailoring establishment. It is currently reported that negotiations are maturing for the transfer of the Mercer business to Mr. H. E. Bradley.

The many friends of Mr. C. C. Dyke, who was so badly injured by a fall from a telegraph pole a couple of weeks ago, will be pleased to know that he has made good progress towards recovery. He has been able to leave the hospital and has returnds to his boarding house.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

In Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Zambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvellous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and heralded to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that to-day they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain, but magnificent edifices of the most modern type, beautiful botanical gardens, and the public improvements are evidences of the wonderful advance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial centre, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world, a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenue of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals lend an air of peace and tranquility, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustable veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders" whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest manifested in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before thought of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Africander whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman—born in the Cape Colony, having traveled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Zambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience, in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work—will present South Africa as it is to-day, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collection of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this county. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

AFTER A GOOD INVESTMENT.

Mr. A. Cox, for the Central Canada, in Cobourg.

The Cobourg Post says—"At present everything points to an early start on the old Victoria College buildings by the Ontario Government. If the information given us by one of the leading Liberals of West Northumberland is correct, the institution to be established here will be one of the largest in Ontario. It is estimated that a large area of land will be required in addition to that on which the buildings now stand. Fortunately there is an abundance close at hand. In reference to the land question Cobourg was visited by Mr. Aaron Cox, of Peterborough, on Wednesday last, [illegible] business was directly connected [illegible] point. It is said that he [illegible] of securing an option on [illegible] of [illegible] to the east and north [illegible] buildings extending from [illegible] Ave. on [illegible] north, to the [illegible] the north. [illegible] the above [illegible] by the heirs of the late [illegible] Beatty, the Haggraft estate [illegible] in Glebe land. We are told [illegible] Cox will find no difficulty [illegible] the property belonging [illegible] first named, and as the [illegible] the Bishop of Toronto has [illegible] before a deal for the Glebe [illegible] closed, Rev. Canon Spragge did not give Mr. Cox an option, but we understand will lay the matter before a special meeting of the vestry to be called next week. Mr. Cox is well known to many of our people, but his business to town on Wednesday was not even guessed at. He is the representative of the Central Loan and Investment Company at Peterborough, and it is intimated that the above company will endeavor to buy and hold for a time all the property adjacent to the old college and dispose of it to the government as required, which it is thought, and hoped will not be very long. Mr. Cox is evidently on the inside circle, and has received intimation of an early commencement of work restoring and transforming the old college buildings into an institution apparently much needed. The most remarkable thing about the transaction is that none of our local men were sharp enough to see a good speculation in the purchase, but allowed an outsider to come in and secure the plum."

GAMBLING AMONG WOMEN

HAS FLOURISHED AMONG ALL STATIONS AND AT ALL TIMES.

Practice Now so Much in Evidence That It is Termed "the Curse of the Day"—Celebrated Gamblers of Other Times.

From time to time, throughout the world, gambling among women has flourished and declined. Today it flourishes and things have come to such a pass that a metropolitan clergyman much before the public eye has termed the practice among the gentler sex the curse of the day. It is no new experience, however, as women of all stations and all times have indulged in the practice and the pages of history tell over and over of great women gamblers. France has furnished the greatest number of these, but England has not been far behind, while America has put forth many whose fame has become international.

In Denver last week, Blanche Edwards, a fascinating young woman, was arrested as a common gambler. In court she admitted readily enough that she had made her living for 10 years by gambling, during which time she had played in every principal city of the United States.

And now the report comes from Dawson of a girl gambler—she is but 18 years old—whose coups at the gambling table have startled the entire Klondike. Three months ago this young woman—Miss Blumpkin by name—conducted a diamond store in Seattle. For the sake of adventure, she journeyed to Dawson, and there within a few weeks, accumulated a fair fortune at faro. Miss Blumpkin is not only beautiful, but is said to be the best gowned young woman in the Klondike.

There seems to be something in the blood of French women that makes them gamblers of a high order. Mme. de Montespan won so much at basset, her favorite game, that Louis XIV was delighted and borrowed some of her winnings. But she lost a great deal at times, and her play grew so furious that in 1682 Louis abolished the game. It is recorded of Mme. de Montespan that she one night, while the King looked on at the play risked a sum equal to $200,000 on a single card and the King grumbled when no one could be found to cover the bet. But madame also lost, one New Year's night, 700,000 crowns at hoca, and on another night almost a million dollars at the same game.

Mme. du Barry was the most famous woman gambler of the time of Louis XV, but with her it was only a pastime. But that other favorite Mme. de Pompadour, went in with the sole object of winning if she could. It is recorded that her winnings were enormous, and that in a single night she eased the pockets of the King of $125,000.

Queen Marie Antoinette, according to history, was a gambler who liked to be surrounded by gamblers. Faro was the popular game, but the stakes got to be so great that many a nobleman had his entire estates wiped away in a single night. Scandal rose high, and the game was forbidden. But matters got so bad before the end came that noblemen would no longer play with the Queen and she admitted to the table common gamblers.

Possibly the most famous woman gambler of English history was Nell Gwynne, the actress who was so great a favorite with Charles II. In that reign the manners were much the same as they were at the French court. Nell Gwynne lost £5,000 to her rival, the Duchess of Cleveland, and in one year lost upwards of £60,000, which the King paid. There had never been known so much gambling among women as was carried on in that reign. After the Duchess of Mazarin, niece of the cardinal, had lost £1,000,000, she died in absolute want.

Gambling among women reached such a point in 1796 that Chief Justice Kenyon, in a charge, declared that he would send to the pillory any woman convicted of the offense, even though she were the highest lady of the land.

The acknowledged queen of American women gamblers was Lonna Paquita, who was born in Texas 45 years ago, but early went into Mexico to rule over outlaws and cowboys. The little Lonna was scarcely 13 years old when she fell in with an old-time gambler who taught her every trick known to the gambler's art. She made her first appearance in Paso del Norte. She was only a child, and the rough gamblers laughed at her. But they soon found they were no match for her, and that even her teacher was a tenderfoot compared to the child. With the passing years Lonna Paquita grew to be a beautiful woman. Her hair was as black as night, she had eyes that confounded those of the gamblers who played with her, and a voice as sweet and silvery as a bell. She was as handsome a woman as one would wish to see, but with a heart of ice and nerves of iron. Her small [illegible] hands could manipulate the cards [illegible] skill that defied the watchful [illegible] keenest gambler.

There [illegible] many who thought it was mere[illegible] that followed her, but the luc[illegible] too long, and the gamblers [illegible] a few tricks themselves [illegible] that it was "art." Still, no one [illegible] ever known to catch her cheating. Before she was 30, Lonna Paquita was in New Mexico leading a gang of the worst characters of the southwest.

Her death occurred in 1875, and was tragic. Some lawless acts had been committed by a body of "greasers," and search was made for them. Lonna Paquita was found to be their leader, and was caught. She only laughed when she was taken, and proposed that a game of cards be played to see whether she should go free or kill herself. This was agreed to, and one of the party, a gambler known the country round, was selected. The woman lost. Those who looked on had scarcely time to understand this when Lonna Paquita drew a knife from her belt and plunged it into her heart.

But the women of today, although they doubtless gamble as heavily as in other times, incline more to speculation in stocks. There are women brokers who deal only with female clients, and there are known also to be women bookmakers and women pool room keepers, who possess skill and courage that many men in the same lines of business never dream of.

DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION

"I had been a sufferer for many years from nervousness with all its symptoms and complications," writes Mrs. O. N. Fisher, 1861 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. "I was constantly going to see a physician or purchasing medicine. In the spring of 1897 my husband induced me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. After taking one bottle and following your advice I was so encouraged that I took five more bottles, and then stopped for several weeks as I felt so much better, but still I was not completely cured. I commenced taking it again and felt that I was improving faster than at first. I am not now cross and irritable, and I have a good color in my face; have also gained about ten pounds in weight and one thousand pounds of comfort, for I am a new woman once more and your advice and your 'Favorite Prescription' is the cause of it, coupled with the 'Pleasant Pellets' which are not to be dispensed with. I took eight bottles of the 'Prescription' the last time, making fourteen in all, and will not take any more unless you so advise, for I do not see as I need it."

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

In Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Zambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvellous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and heralded to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that to-day they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain, but magnificent edifices of the most modern type, beautiful botanical gardens, and the public improvements are evidences of the wonderful advance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial centre, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world, a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenue of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals lend an air of peace and tranquility, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustable veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders" whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest manifested in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before thought of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Africander whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman—born in the Cape Colony, having traveled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Zambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience, in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work—will present South Africa as it is to-day, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collection of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this county. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

AFTER A GOOD INVESTMENT.

Mr. A. Cox, for the Central Canada, in Cobourg.

The Cobourg Post says—"At present everything points to an early start on the old Victoria College buildings by the Ontario Government. If the information given us by one of the leading Liberals of West Northumberland is correct, the institution to be established here will be one of the largest in Ontario. It is estimated that a large area of land will be required in addition to that on which the buildings now stand. Fortunately there is an abundance close at hand. In reference to the land question Cobourg was visited by Mr. Aaron Cox, of Peterborough, on Wednesday last, whose business was directly connected with that point. It is said that he was desirous of securing an option on a number of lots to the east and north of the buildings, extending from University Ave. on the south, to the base line on the north. Part of the above land is owned by the heirs of the late Dr. John Beatty, the Haggraft estate and some is Glebe land. We are told that Mr. Cox will find no difficulty in securing the property belonging to the two first named, and as the consent of the Bishop of Toronto has to be secured before a deal for the Glebe land could be closed, Rev. Canon Spragge did not give Mr. Cox an option, but we understand will lay the matter before a special meeting of the vestry to be called next week. Mr. Cox is well known to many of our people, but his business to town on Wednesday was not even guessed at. He is the representative of the Central Loan and Investment Company at Peterborough, and it is intimated that the above company will endeavor to buy and hold for a time all the property adjacent to the old college and dispose of it to the government as required, which it is thought, and hoped will not be very long. Mr. Cox is evidently on the inside circle, and has received intimation of an early commencement of work restoring and transforming the old college buildings into an institution apparently much needed. The most remarkable thing about the transaction is that none of our local men were sharp enough to see a good speculation in the purchase, but allowed an outsider to come in and secure the plum."

GAMBLING AMONG WOMEN

HAS FLOURISHED AMONG ALL STATIONS AND AT ALL TIMES.

Practice Now so Much in Evidence That it is Termed "the Curse of the Day"—Celebrated Gamblers of Other Times.

From time to time, throughout the world, gambling among women has flourished and declined. Today it flourishes and things have come to such a pass that a metropolitan clergyman much before the public eye has termed the practice among the gentler sex the curse of the day. It is no new experience, however, as women of all stations and all times have indulged in the practice and the pages of history tell over and over of great women gamblers. France has furnished the greatest number of these, but England has not been far behind, while America has put forth many whose fame has become international.

In Denver last week, Blanche Edwards, a fascinating young woman, was arrested as a common gambler. In court she admitted readily enough that she had made her living for 10 years by gambling, during which time sh ehad played in every principal city of the United States.

And now the report comes from Dawson of a girl gambler—she is but 18 years old—whose coups at the gambling table have startled the entire Klondike. Three months ago this young woman—Miss Blumpkin by name—conducted a diamond store in Seattle. For the sake of adventure, she journeyed to Dawson, and there within a few weeks, accumulated a fair fortune at faro. Miss Blumpkin is not only beautiful, but is said to be the best gowned young woman in the Klondike.

There seems to be something in the blood of French women that makes them gamblers of a high order. Mme. de Montespan won so much at basset, her favorite game, that Louis XIV was delighted and borrowed some of her winnings. But she lost a great deal at times, and her play grew so furious that in [illegible] Louis abolished the game. It is recorded of Mme. de Montespan that she one night, while the King looked on at the play risked a sum equal to $300,000 on a single card and the King grumbled when no one could be found t ocover the bet. But madame also lost, one New Year's night, 700,000 crowns at hoca, and on another night almost a million dollars at the same game.

Mme. du Barry was the most famous woman gambler of the time of Louis XV, but with her it was only a pastime. But that other favorite Mme. de Pompadour, went in with the sole object of winning if she could. It is recorded that her winnings were enormous, and that in a single night she eased the pockets of the King of $125,000.

Queen Marie Antoinette, according to history, was a gambler who liked to be surrounded by gamblers. Faro was the popular game, but the stakes got to be so great that many a nobleman had his entire estates wiped away in a single night. Scandal rose high, and the game was forbidden. But matters got so bad before the end came that noblemen would no longer play with the Queen and she admitted to the table common gamblers.

Possibly the most famous woman gambler of English history was Nell Gwynne, the actress who was so great a favorite with Charles II. In that reign the manners were much the same as they were at the French court. Nell Gwynne lost £5,000 to her rival, the Duchess of Cleveland, and in one year lost upwards of £60,000, which the King paid. There had never been known so much gambling among women as was carried on in that reign. After the Duchess of Mazarin, niece of the cardinal, had lost £1,000,000, she died in absolute want.

Gambling among women reached such a point in 1796 that Chief Justice Kenyon, in a charge, declared that he would send to the pillory any woman convicted of the offense, even though she were the highest lady of the land.

The acknowledged queen of American women gamblers was Lonna Paquita, who was born in Texas 45 years ago, but early went into Mexico to rule over outlaws and cowboys. The little Lonna was scarcely 13 years old when she fell in with an old-time gambler who taught her every trick known to the gambler's art. She made her first appearance in Paso del Norte. She was only a child, and the rough gamblers laughed at her. But they soon found they were no match for her, and that even her teacher was a tenderfoot compared to the child. With the passing years Lonna Paquita grew to be a beautiful woman. Her hair was as black as night, she had eyes that confounded those of the gamblers who played with her, and a voice as sweet and silvery as a bell. She was as handsome a woman as one would wish to see, but with a heart of ice and nerves of iron. Her small white hands could manipulate the cards with a skill that defied the watchfulness of the keenest gambler.

There were many who thought it was merely luck that followed her, but the luck kept up too long, and the gamblers who knew a few tricks themselves understood that it was "art." Still, no one was ever known to catch her cheating. Before she was 20, Lonna Paquita was in New Mexico leading a gang of the worst characters of the southwest.

Her death occurred in 1875, and was tragic. Some lawless acts had been committed by a boby of "greasers," and search was made for them. Lonna Paquita was found to be their leader, and was caught. She only laughed when she was taken, and proposed that a game of cards be played to see whether she should go free or kill herself. This was agreed to, and one of the party, a gambler known the country round, was selected. The woman lost. Those who looked on had scarcely time to understand this when Lonna Paquita drew a knife from her belt and plunged it into her heart.

But the women of today, although they doubtless gamble as heavily as in other times, incline more to speculation in stocks. There are women brokers who deal only with female clients, and there are known also to be women bookmakers and women pool room keepers, who possess skill and courage that many men in the same lines of business never dream of.

DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION

"I had been a sufferer for many years from nervousness with all its symptoms and complications," writes Mrs. O. N. Fisher, 1861 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. "I was constantly going to see a physician or purchasing medicine. In the spring of 1897 my husband induced me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. After taking one bottle and following your advice I was so encouraged that I took five more bottles, and then stopped for several weeks as I felt so much better, but still I was not completely cured. I commenced taking it again and felt that I was improving faster than at first. I am not now cross and irritable, and I have a good color in my face; have also gained about ten pounds in weight and one thousand pounds of comfort, for I am a new woman once more and your advice and your 'Favorite Prescription' is the cause of it, coupled with the 'Pleasant Pellets' which are not to be dispensed with. I took eight bottles of the 'Prescription' the last time, making fourteen in all, and will not take any more unless you so advise, for I do not see as I need it."

Got 30 Days.

Robert Taylor, the Chemong Indian, who was arrested charged with wounding his brother Benjamin, acknowledged the assault yesterday before County Magistrate Edmison. He, however, denied using a knife, stating that he only struck his brother with his fist. Robert will spend the next thirty days at hard labor on the county stone pile. The trouble, it seems, arose from Robert refusing to get up in the morning from his bed. Although living on his brother's charity he did as he pleased about the place, but the climax came when he tried to relieve Benjamin of his scalp.

Keep it Dark.

To-night at the skating rink for ten cents you will see figure skating by Edg. Hartley, hockey match between the coon (black) and Hardware teams for the oysters, clog dancing by Guerin and Connors, also a cake walk. The hockey will be up-to-date.

A Pleasing Event.

The at home given the congregation of All Saints' church on Tuesday night by the Senior Girls' Guild, was a decided success. The attendance was satisfactory and everybody was pleased. Rev. Mr. Armitage, the Rector, in a short address stated that it was proposed to wipe out the church debt of $600 in the following manner—20 members to give $1 per month, 20 give 75 cents, 20 give 50 and 40 give 25c. Quite a number were placed on the list. Amongst those assisting in the programme were Mrs. Seward, Miss Ethel White, the Misses English, Miss Dollie Comstock, the Misses Bullen and Mr. C. J. Rogers. Refreshments were served at the close.

From the Contingent.

A letter received yesterday from Mr. Chill Turner, stated that the boys arrived safely at Halifax. Chill speaks enthusiastically of the way the boys are being treated everywhere. They were to have sailed yesterday.

Mr. A. J. Raddon, of the T. V. C. office, has received the following telegram from Lieut.-Col. Greenwood at Halifax—

"Milwaukee sails to-morrow at four o'clock. Peterborough contingent sends farewell greetings to all friends."

The following message was sent to Lt.-Greenwood at Halifax this morning—

Peterborough, Ont.,
Feb. 21, 1900.

Lt.-Col. H. S. Greenwood, Canadian Mounted Rifles, Halifax, N.S.—

The officers of the 57th wish you and the Peterborough contingent a prosperous voyage and every success in the field, and a safe return.

R. W. BELL.

PERSONALS.

Mr. George McHugh, M.P., Lindsay, was in town yesterday.

Miss Rose has returned from Lindsay, where she has had an art class of about 30.

Miss Florence Hall is visiting with her friends in Toronto, and on Sunday last rendered a solo in Euclid avenue Methodist church.

Mr. Carter, of the Bank of Commerce, accompanied by Mrs. Carter, leaves this afternoon for Dundas, where they will reside hereafter.

Mr. George Bonida, of the Colportage Mission of Algoma and the Northwest, is making his seventeenth annual visit to Peterborough.

A PROSPEROUS YEAR.

Elsewhere will be found the financial statement of the North American Life Assurance Company, which was submitted at the annual meeting held on January 30th. The statement must furnish interesting reading for the many friends of the Company throughout Eastern Ontario, as well as throughout the whole country.

The total cash received for premiums amounted to $744,865.90, while the income from investments was $231,182.82, making a total of $893,522.30. The disbursements during the year amounted to $303,081.50 in death claims, and $231,182.82 in other payments making a total of $534,263.82. Adding the net assets to the receipts, and deducting the payments, there is a balance of assets amounting to $3,336,710.21. The assets are made up of mortgages, debentures, stocks and bonds, real estate, loans on policies and cash on hand, and are all gilt-edge securities. After deducting the total liabilities from the total assets, there remains a substantial balance amounting to $524,418.61.

The North American is deservedly popular, and has attained a very high place in the regard of the people, who look upon it as one of our leading financial institutions. To the capable management of Mr. Wm. McCabe, the Managing Director, assisted by Mr. L. Goldman, the efficient and untiring Secretary, is due the splendid position which the North American has attained. We predict for the Company a career of even increased prosperity in the future.

Our Market.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I think the present market bylaw should be overhauled before the tolls are again let, with a view to lessening the charges to farmers and others who patronize the market.

Our market is not anything like what it used to be a few years ago, the farmers evidently refusing to be ruled by the conditions of the by-law.

Our present efficient market clerk has done much to restore the confidence and good-will of the farmers, who sometimes patronize the market, but his hands would be greatly strengthened if this by-law was made more easy.

In fact, I would make it practically a free market.

I would therefore suggest, Mr. Editor, that the market committee take the matter up and consult Mr. Baptie and a few of those who are familiar with the wishes of the farmers, with a view to amending the by-law. Let us restore our market to its old-time greatness. A big market means big receipts for our merchants every time, yours,

MERCHANT.

The Police Want Him.

Chief Roszel received a telephone communication from Campbellford yesterday asking him to keep a look out for a thief who had operated in that town. A store was entered, the front door having been broken in and four fur overcoats had been stolen. No other information was supplied.

A Contradiction.

We desire to contradict the rumor that the editor of this g.f.j. was about to start for South Africa. Brother Hughes is over there, and both cannot leave the country at the same time. Besides, there appears to be no scarity of generals at the seat of war.

"Reserve Force" that's the word for GRAPE-NUTS FOOD

"I want to tell you about Grape-Nuts and my experience with them.

"I had for a year or two, felt a general debility creeping on me, and also suffered from flatnency, piles, etc., which I began to think was due to advancing age, now being 65 years old, when, in the providence of God, as I believe, the Grape-Nuts Food was brought to my notice, and tried as an experiment.

"I used it with milk, as mush. In a week I found a decided improvement in myself, and have kept improving ever since, now about three months, and am being congratulated on the bright change in my appearance by all acquaintances. Not only so, but I feel I have the reserve force so that I do not feel wearied at night, although I have worked continuously this last three months, from 7.30 a.m. until 9 p.m. Need I say that I recommend your Grape-Nuts to my friends and acquaintances, and that all of my family use the food, and that we use it at every meal whatever else is omitted? I write this being desirous of giving vent to the grateful feeling I entertain for the benefits received from the use of your incomparable food. Although a total stranger to you, I beg to subscribe myself sincerely your friend and well-wisher, John C. Fletcher, New Rochelle, N. Y."

The particular element which produces the feeling of strength is the delicate particles of phosphate of potash, not the phosphate of the drug store, but that which is prepared by Nature and furnished in the grains. This delicate element, not observed by the taste, is used by Nature in connection with the albumen of food, to repair and rebuild the gray matter in the nerve centres throughout the body and in the brain and solar plexus, so that one thus nourished and rebuilt is very sure to feel the effects of this rebuilding within a week or ten days, and this feeling grows and becomes fixed as one becomes a steady, every-day user of Grape-Nuts. The food is made by the famous pure food manufacturers at Battle Creek, Mich., the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd.

IS IT RIGHT?

For the Town to Help to Build a County Bridge.

The Times is aware that opposition to the by-law granting $300 per year for 20 years towards the construction of a bridge over Chemong Lake is not popular. But this journal never looks at the popular side in matters of this kind. Its duty is to guard the interest of the people and promote the prosperity of the community at large so far as it can.

There is another side to the question of the Mud Lake bridge which was not presented at the Board of Trade meeting in connection with the by-law which is to be voted on to-day. The Merchant, perhaps, has an interest in maintaining a bridge over Chemong Lake, but the workingman—the mechanic—where does he come in? Will he reap the slighest benefit? Will his wages be increased thereby?

But this is not the main argument. On a broad matter of principle, is it right or is it fair to ask our heavily-taxed ratepayers to mortgage their property to build a bridge in the county? Should not the County look after its own bridges? Might we not as well be asked to build bridges over other waters miles removed from town, if it is shown that such bridges are used by people coming to Peterborough? Where will the line be drawn?

As a matter of fact half the support given the Chemong Lake bridge is purely a matter of politics. The Examiner supports the proposition because it can do nothing else. It dare not oppose the job. The Review is practically in the same boat. Messrs. Stratton and Kendry may hug the Ennismore machine as much as they like, but this will not prevent the Times from expressing its honest opinion with regard to it.

We do not ask the ratepayers to vote against the by-law; we won't go so far as that. But we do ask them (in view of the fact that our municipal tax is $6.87 per head as against $2 to $3 per head in Ennismore and the rest of the county), whether they do not think it is being rubed in a trifle too hard?

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

The Toronto Telegram has the following about the Peterborough—U.C.C hockey match at Lindsay:

College was fairly beaten and bow before the Colts. But, at the same time, the "heads" at College are in no small way to blame for the boys not being in just as good condition as the Peterborough's were at the conclusion of the match. They would not permit the other students to be present at the practices at the Caledonia, that they might assist in rubbing down the players. Why, the College authorities were talking of having the seven default to Peterborough, as they did not care for the boys going out of town. Next season Upper Canada College boys will have to play amongst themselves, for they will not be allowed to enter the O.H.A. series. If this be really true, as the boys on the hill say, it will "knock" other College sports, for the boys will be discouraged.

•• • ••

Referee Jimmy McFadden blew his whistle about nine o'clock, and the toilers toiled. College went for a moment towards Peterborough goal, but Harry King, brother of the "Camel," got away with the rubber. Gill and Lynch mixed it up at centre, and some hot work ensued. There was hard checking on both sides, and then, like an arrow, Whitcroft and Morgan tore for the tall timbers, much to the delight of the bunch that had assembled at the far end of the rink. It was smooth, as Toney Burk would say, and Morgan sent a hot one in that was beautifully stopped by Wells. There was a general rush on both sides. Bert Morrison got busy, and flew up the ice with his left optic on the puck and Gill, who followed him. When they got near he passed, and Gill sent one through, which was not allowed as the umpire had his blinkers on. King worked down, and shot wide. McBain, the boy ploughman, lifted, and Whitcroft got it. He came away, but "Long" Cook and Morrison relieved him of it. Then Morrison, Jimmie Worts and Cook went down like a straight line, Cook doing the scoring. Score 1—0.

•• •• ••

This certainly looked promising, and Bert Morrison's countenance looked like a day in June. College tried to keep up this winning streak, so rushed matters hard. King then nabbed the puck, but Worts was much too fast for him. Then the Colt's forwards got going, and mowed their way through the field till Whitcroft got in one of his famous shots, and scored. 1—1.

•• • ••

The contingent woke sleepy Lindsayites, who retire early, and made them imagine a Boer brigade were upon them. And make out they didn't holler when in a few minutes Peterborough scored. 2—1.

•• • ••

Morgan and King were doing effective work, and the long lanky, brother of the "Camel" would swoop down upon the puck every time he got a chance.

•• • ••

The Colts were afraid to let Worts shoot, and from the boards "Holly" Hollingshead shouted, "Don't let that man shoot." But Jimmy did, and often too. King was sending in hot ones from the side, and things looked dangerous. Just then Worts and Morrison made a rush that was a work of art. It looked as if it were impossible to stop them, but, Cavanagh at point just nipped it in the bud. It was well done and merited the applause the play got. The Colts were pressing hard now, and in the mix up Morgan tripped Bert Morrison and was sent to the fence. Whitcroft seemed to be everywhere, but always after the puck, McBain failed to lift, and Whitcroft was down on him in a second. Mac got away, however, and caromed on the boards. In the next mix up Mac and Whitcroft accidently got tangled, both falling, and the latter had to be assisted off the ice. Little Jimmie Worts got away on the face-off and scored, making matters even up, or in other words, 2—2.

•• • ••

From an off-side McBain again failed to lift, and Morgan seizing the opportunity scored once more, 3—2.

College did not put the heart into their checking they should have, and one James Worts did not get at his man at the side often enough. Bert Morrison started after the puck, and purely by accident was checked to the post and had to be carried off the ice. He came on again showing the effects of the fall, but worked hard to score. He shot from centre, and Worts wholly atoned for his not checking enough by getting the rebound and scoring. 3—3.

•• • ••

Morgan made a beauteous run and passed everyone and shot, the rubber unluckly going wide. Or, to be more correct, luckily for us. And here half-time was called.

•• • ••

Hardly had play been again started when King got very nasty and scored. It was one of the cleanest shots ever seen and was loudly cheered. Score 4—3.

•• • ••

Profiting by past experience, McBain lifted when it came his turn and scored beautifully—on an electric light globe. But though the globe fell into a thousand pieces, the light continued to do business at the old stand.

•• • ••

Wells stopped a dandy by Morgan and an off-side occurred. Mac came hustling and passed to Worts, who lost the rubber. The Colts decided to storm the citadel, and on a large-sized rush scored. 5—3.

•• • ••

Morrison, Worts and Cook did all they could to even up matters, and moved liked clock-work. And the rush bore fruit, for Bert handed Miller a hot one. Score 5—4.

•• • ••

It did look as if College had a chance to win out, as they were playing hard and with smooth combination. King came a cropper and the game was delayed till he got his pipes in order. When play was resumed King was away down, and scored the sixth and last goal for the Colts. Score 6—4.

•• • ••

The Colts forced the fighting from now on till the bell had called time and left the easterns in the finals.

•• • ••

Ab. Stratton went batty afer the match and could hardly contain himself when the Colts had won. Ab is going to give a handsome cup for the Midland district next year.

•• • ••

Talk about being superstitious, but Walter English beats them all. If he wants his team to win he seeks some tonsorial artist and has his whiskers trimmed. Last night they were close cropped.

Ald. T. H. G. Denne, of Peterborough came to Lindsay for the express purpose of cutting loose for the Colts, and this he did to the Queen's taste. His voice was as the mighty roar of the cannon and could be heard over all others.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

The Board of Works met last night.

The 57th Battalion are looking for recruits.

The Manufacturers committee of the Town Council met last night.

It's all right. The Peterborough Board of Trade has sat on the Boers, and the war is now virtually over.

At the police court yesterday morning a young man was fined $10, or ten days for being drunk and disorderly.

The Ashburnham Public school had a holiday yesterday afternoon to celebrate the British victories in South Africa.

At the regular evening meeting of the Y.M.C.A. Debating Club, this evening, Mr. J. C. Brown will give a talk on "The Front Door of Canada."

The County Council of Perth has asked for a law providing that vagrants guilty of no crime may not be committed to jail, but sent to the Houses of Refuge.

Mr. H. P. Kennedy is making the live stock trade boom these days. Sixteen cars of stockers have been shipped to Western and Southern States and six cars of hogs to Toronto from the Kennedy stock yards this week.

We notice that both of our local contemporaries are supporting the Mud Lake Bridge scheme. The Times has no votes to make in Ennismore, and is therefore not so eloquent in favor of mortgaging our property to do work for the county.

ANOTHER TELEPHONE COMPANY.

The Victoria Company to Complete the Line to Lindsay.

The Victoria Telephone Company, whose headquarters are at Woodville, according to the Toronto papers, state that they propose to build a line into Lindsay at an early date. We are sorry for our Lindsay friends if this is true. Two telephones in a community is just one too many. Business people, especially, are obliged to have both, and no matter how strongly the local enterprise may appeal to them for exclusive patronage, they are forced to have both. We presume if there were ten telephone companies in existence the business man would be forced to use them all in order to keep in touch with all of his customers.

Peterborough had its fill of double telephone service. We put our good money into the Ontario Telephone Company, expecting we would have a cheaper and better service. The result was that while the price per telephone was slightly reduced, the service was rotten, and we had to pay for two telephones instead of one. We put ten thousand dollars or more into the enterprise, never to return. Our experience in this regard will be Lindsay's experience as sure as they monkey with the buzz saw.

IT PAYS TO GO TO The Best

THE CANADA BUSINESS COLLEGE
CHATHAM, ONT.

Canada's greatest school of SHORTHAND and BUSINESS training, still holds a very strong lead over its contemporaries.

No better evidence of this claim need be offered than the following, which shows how widely this justly popular school is patronized.

117 Cities, Towns and Villages in Canada, United States and Newfoundland represented in the attendance during the year to date.

30 Counties in Ontario, six of the United States, together with five from Manitoba and Alberta, have sent their representatives. They came from the Atlantic on the East to the Pacific on the West. Distance proves no hindrance to those who are determined to attend the best.

The present is an excellent time of year to make a start. Pupils are admitted at any time. For catalogue, address.

"FIGHT TO A FINISH OR UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER!" SAID ROBERTS.

General Cronje is Dying Hard, Hemmed in by British Infantry With Shells From Fifty Guns Falling Into His Camp With Terrible Precision.

Cronje's Magnificent Night March From Magersfontein Now Seems Likely to End in Disaster, the Boers Being Enclosed in a Terrible Death Trap. The Canadians Met Their Death While Gallantly Charging in an Attempt to Capture a Boer Laager

London, Feb. 23, 1.30 a.m

The War Office has issued the following from Lord Roberts—

"Paardberg, Feb. 22.—Methuen reports from Kimberley that supplies of food and forage are being pushed on as fast as possible. There will be enough coal to start De Beers mines in ten days. By this means great misery will be alleviated. Hospital arrangements there reported perfect. He hopes Prieska and the adjoining country will soon be settled."

At the same time the War Office announced that nothing further would be issued to-night."

Paardberg Drift, Orange Free State, Feb. 20th.

General Cronje's magnificent night march from Magersfontein now appears likely to end in disaster. The main body of the Boers is enclosed in a terrible death trap. The enemy are hiding in the bed of the Modder, commanded by the British artillery and enclosed on the east and west by the British infantry. Sunday witnessed a gallant stand on the part of the retreating force. Though tired and harrassed they still maintained a bold front.

It is somewhat difficult to explain the Sunday action, in which all the British force was engaged and in which Gen. Cronje under difficult conditions managed to hold his own. On Saturday night the British mounted infantry came into touch with Cronje's rear guard, driving them back upon the main body. On Sunday morning the action was renewed, but the Boers, who had entrenched the river bed during the night, prevented a further advance of the mounted infantry in this direction. Meanwhile the Highland brigade consisting of the Seaforths, the Black Watch and the Argyles, advanced from the south bank, and the Essex, Welsh and Yorkshires formed a long line on the left, which rested on the river, the extreme right being the Welsh. The whole line was ordered to envelope the Boers, who lined both banks of the river.

The firing soon became heavy. The Boers, holding a splendid position, covered the left of the Highland brigade, which advanced partly on the river bed and partly in the open, while the rest of the brigade with the other regiments swung round the front of the Highland Brigade on the level, coverless ground, exposed to a terrible fire, which obliged the men to lie on the ground as they did for the remainder of the day. This began at half-past seven in the morning. Through the dreadful heat and terrible thunder storm our men hung to the position, answering the Boer fire and shooting steadily. In the meantime the rest of the infantry completed the envelopment movement, the Welsh regiment having succeeded in seizing the drift, thus closing in the Boers, who fought throughout with splendid courage. General Cronje's laager, full of carts, ammunition, and stores could be plainly seen near the north bank.

General Smith-Dorrien collected a large body of men including the Canadians, and crossed the river by Paardeberg Drift, advancing toward the laager which was being vigorously shelled. This force made a gallant attempt to charge into the laager but failed. Before seizing the western drifts the Boers occupied a kopje on the south bank, running down the river. Therefore their force is cut in two. The Boers hold the kopje and have one maxim and probably one or two other guns.

Towards evening the battery on the south side opened, co-operating with the battery on the north side. A wonderful night followed. The shells fell with amazing precision along the river bed opposite the laager which was shelled thoroughly, damaging everything it contained. One shell set on fire a small ammunition wagon which burned nearly all day. Many other wagons were set on fire and the glare was visible at a considerable distance far into the night.

The infantry also maintained a terrible fire, which was answered vigorously.

The scene toward nightfall was terribly picturesque with the blazing wagons, the roaring artillery and the crackling rifle fire.

Cape Town, Feb. 22.

In reply to General Cronje's request for an armistice of 24 hours to allow him to bury his dead, Lord Roberts told the Boer commander that he must fight to a finish or surrender unconditionally. General Cronje's position is reported hopeless.

The British have occupied Barclay West.

London, Feb. 23.

The Cape Town correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says: "Gen. Cronjes request for an armistice was a mere dodge to gain time to make trenches. Lord Kitchener refused but gave him half an hour to consider whether he would surrender unconditionally or fight to a finish. The Boers having said that their intention had been misunderstood and that they would fight to the end, the battle was resumed."

The Times has the following from Paardeberg, dated 21st:

"We have expelled 500 Boers from an isolated kopje about a mile south-east of General Cronjes laager."

The Times says editorially: "The fact that the Boers started to reinforce General Cronje from Natal days ago is an additional reason why Lord Roberts should finish with him as promptly as possible. Small bodies of Boers, such as have already been broken up, are not very formidable, but a large body with guns and supplies would call for serious treatment, in which no doubt Gen. French would find congenial work.

London, Feb. 23.—4 a.m.

General Cronje is seemingly making his last stand. He is dying hard hemmed in by British infantry with shell from fifty guns falling into his camp.

Officially Lord Roberts wires that he has scattered the advancing commandos that were striving to reach General Cronje.

WHERE CRONJE IS.

Paardeberg Drift, Orange Free State, Tuesday, Feb. 20.—Via the Modder River, Wednesday, Feb. 21.—One of the costliest actions of the war occurred at Paaderberg Drift, Sunday, Feb. 18.—General Kelly-Kenny in his pursuit of General Cronje caught his rear guard at Klip Drift and followed the burghers to the Boers' laager at Koodoos Rand. The drift action began at daybreak, the mounted infantry driving the Boer rear guard up the river towards the main body, whilst another body of mounted infantry manoeuvred on the right front and flank of the Boers. The British main body advanced to outflank the Boer laager on the north bank of the river. Gen. Kelly-Kenny having seized two drifts, found the Boers strongly enclosed and ordered an attack with the Highland Brigade on the left, and General Knox's brigade on the centre and right, while General Smith-Dorien's brigade, including the Canadian contingent, crossed the river and advanced along the north bank. On both the north and south banks the ground is level. The advance across this was deadly and the British loss was heavy. The battle was an exact repetition of that at Modder River. The soldiers were under fire all day long, and all the fighting had no definite result, as the Boer laager was well barricaded and they remained therein. The British guns shelled the laager vigorously and the Boers confessed to a loss of over 800 men.

Terrific shelling was renewed Monday, when General Cronje asked for an armistice.

The shelling was continued Tuesday, over 50 guns pouring lead into the Boer camp.

BOER KOPJE CAPTURED.

Paardeberg, Wednesday, Feb. 21, 6.30 p. m.—A Boer copje has been captured with 50 prisoners. Gen. Cronje's position is unchanged.

BOTHA'S FORCE SCATTERED.

London, Feb. 22.—5.37 p.m.—A special despatch from Paarderberg, dated Wednesday, Feb. 21, says—

"Commandant Botha has been attempting to relieve Gen. Cronje. There has been severe fighting. Gen. Botha's force is scattered with heavy losses."

BOERS DRIVEN OFF.

London, Feb. 22.—4.17 p.m.—The War Office has received from Lord Roberts the following message, which was relayed in transmission, dated Paardeberg, Wednesday, Feb. 21—

"Yesterday afternoon I was satisfied by a careful reconnaissance in force of the enemy's position, that I could not assault it without very heavy loss, which I was most anxious to avoid. Accordingly I decided to bombard him with artillery, and turn my attention to the enemy's reinforcements. The result was most satisfactory. The Boers were driven off in all directions, losing a good many killed and wounded, and about 50 prisoners, who say they arrived from Ladysmith two days ago by railroad. They also say it was our artillery fire which caused them to abandon the kopje they were occupying. Our loss was two officers, Captain Campbell, of the Ninth Lancers, and Lieutenant Houstan, of the artillery, and four men, all slightly wounded."

WAR IS ONLY BEGINNING.

London, Feb. 22.—The Cape Town correspondent of the Daily Mail says—

"It is of the very gravest importance that the British public should not be carried away by recent successes into the belief that the war is practically over. Nothing could be more fatal to a satisfactory prosecution of the war, and, above all, to a satisfactory settlement of the whole country after the war, than any relaxation of the military activity and stoppage of reinforcements and temporarizing or bargaining with the Free State or the Transvaal through mistaken ideas of magnanimity towards an assumedly beaten foe.

"The highest authorities and the soundest opinion here say that the war is really only just begun in earnest. Indeed they say the struggle will only begin when the present military operations end.

"I have the best reason for asserting that an attempt is likely to be made by Boer supporters in the colony to force easy terms for the Free Staters, now or holding out a threat of a Dutch rising in the Colony.

"Any idea of leaving the Free State its independence would be fatal to British interests. There should be no halting in sending out troops. A quarter of a million of British troops will be none too many."

ESCAPE IS IMPOSSIBLE.

London, Feb. 22.—1.45 p.m.—According to general expectations to-day would surely bring a message from Field Marshal Roberts explaining the fighting of the last few days and giving the eagerly awaited status of the conflict with Gen. Cronje. All the War Office's information was said to point to General Cronje's escape being impossible, and it is now taken for granted that Lord Roberts has him surrounded. But the continued silence, broken only by a laconic list of casualties, tries the nation's nerves. All the critics of the afternoon papers urge rushing reinforcements to Lord Roberts so that he may be able to risk much in endeavoring to inflict a decisive defeat before the Boer forces gathering from every quarter strengthen Gen. Cronje's threatened force.

GENERAL BULLER'S CASUALTIES.

London, Feb. 22.—Gen. Buller reports that his casualties Monday, Feb. 19, were killed: Captain Thorburn, of the Royal Fusiliers; Wounded: two officers and fourteen men.

BULLER'S ADVANCE VISIBLE.

London, Feb. 22.—The Morning Post's second edition publishes a despatch from Ladysmith, dated February 19, which says that the bombardment continues with unusual persistence and activity from Blaauwbank, but is doing small damage. The garrison is in good spirits over General Roberts' success and the advance of General Buller which is now visible.

BOERS EVACUATE NATAL.

Berlin, Feb. 21.—The Tageblatt publishes a special despatch from Brussels which says the Transvaal legation there announces that all the Boers are evacuating Natal, their position in that colony being no longer tenable.

General Joubert has ordered the concentration of all the available forces to oppose Lord Roberts.

The siege of Ladysmith will be raised, and it is expected General Buller will enter the town at the end of the week.

BOTHA'S POCKET HANDKERCHIEF.

Chieveley Camp, Natal, Feb. 21.—The steady progress of the relief column is uninterrupted. The Boers on Tuesday were forced from their last position south of the Tugela, resulting in the evacuation of Colenso, which was promptly reoccupied by the Dublin Fusiliers, and Thorneycroft's Horse. A Transvaal flag was captured and also a handkerchief inscribed with General Botha's name. This is treasured as a great trophy.

The Boers heavily shelled Hlangwana Hill and Colenso on Wednesday, February 21, and the British advanced infantry was subjected to a severe musketry fire, but they had excellent cover, and the casualties were few.

The Boers had the railway running from Colenso to Bulwana.

The British continue to discover large quantities of ammunition. The Boers are well supplied with food, and a quantity of provisions were left behind.

It is expected that further resistance will be half-hearted and that Ladysmith will be reached in a few days.

RELIEF A MATTER OF COURSE.

London, Feb. 22.—Gen. Buller's apparent failure to prevent the Boers from slipping round to assist General Cronje creates no little comment. The relief of Ladysmith is now taken to be a matter of course and is likely to be announced before the end of the week, but it is quite within the probabilities that severe fighting will occur previous to the relief while the detachments to be sent by Gen. Buller to reinforce Lord Roberts subsequent to the relief are likely to meet with strenuous resistance in the passes of the Drakensberg, in which fairly powerful burgher forces remain. Boer reports say Gen. Joubert's nerves are unstrung and that he is no longer in command.

THE FIGHT ON HLANGWANA.

New York, Feb. 22.—London is stirred to the depths by war rumors, according to cables to the morning papers, and is anxiously awaiting details from South Africa, the battles which it is known Lord Roberts has been engaged in. That the fighting has been serious all know from the names of officers sent in who have been killed or wounded.

Of the severe wounding of General Macdonald. The Herald's correspondent says that this news had an effect which few people outside of England can fully guage. Hector Macdonald to the multitude is the man of war. The public have surrounded him with a halo of heroism. They consider him lion-hearted and invincible, and, above all, one of their own body, for Macdonald is a self-made man.

When the Boers wounded "Fighting Mac." they hurt the British public keenly.

LORD ROBERTS TO CANADA.

Ottawa, Feb. 22.—His Excellency the Governor-General has received the following telegram from Field Marshall Lord Roberts:—

"Paardeberg, Orange Free State, Feb. 22.—Canadian regiment has done admirable service since its arrival in South Africa. I deeply regret the heavy loss it suffered in the fighting on the 18th instant, and beg you will assure the people how much we all here admire the conspicuous gallantry displayed by our Canadian comrades on this occasion.

(Signed). ROBERTS.

CANADA BRAVE AND STRONG.

London, Feb. 22.—There have been many eulogistic references to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's and other Canadian speeches on the subject of the losses of the Canadians in South Africa, concerning which—curiously enough—there is not a single word, official or otherwise, known or published here, except that two officers were wounded.

The Globe says: "The spirit in which a brave strong nation should meet trial is admirably illustrated by the temper displayed by Canada. The war, if it has done nothing else, has killed political bitterness and mere party strife in all the colonies. The contrast between Ottawa and Westminster is painful and humiliating."

ATTACKED FRENCH'S REARGUARD

London, Feb. 22.—The Times has the following from Lorenzo Marques, dated Feb. 21:

"According to a Boer account, Gen. De Wet claims to have captured in an attack upon the rear guard of General French's column 180 wagons of provisions and ammunition, 2,800 oxen and 58 men."

The Times says editorially: "The silence of Lord Roberts is susceptible of more interpretations than one, but it certainly indicates that the serious operations in which he is engaged are not yet completed.

"Our correspondent at Lorenzo Marques mentions a serious report which may be another version of the Boer story regarding Gen. De Wet that comes from Pretoria, of the capture of the Riet River convoy. If two events have occurred it would be a curious coincidence."

DOGS FIGHT FOR THE BOERS.

London, Feb. 21.—It is reported that Col. Plumer, who is moving to the relief of Mafeking, surprised the Boers in a night attack at Crocodile pools. The Boers were entrenched on a steep thorny ridge.

While struggling through barbed wire entanglements, the British alarmed Boer dogs. The barking of the dogs brought the Boers out, and they began firing. The British then made a bayonet charge, and the Boers exploded dynamite mines. The British retreated.

The despatch announcing the fight is dated Gaberones, February 12, and goes on to say:

Major Bird led the attack. Several British were killed, including Captain French. Six men were severely wounded, and one man was dangerously wounded."

MORE MEN WANTED.

Winston Churchill sends from Chieveley camp a long despatch which is printed in The World in which he says:

"That late successes should not induce the Government to relax its military preparations. The first object before everyone is to bring this terrible war to an end, and the shortest way is to pour a continual stream of men and guns and supplies into the Cape. Meanwhile there are many encouraging signs that the Boers are wearing of the struggle with ever-diminishing strength against ever-increasing odds. The sky already brightens with promise of victorious peace.

Rear Guard Action.

"Our losses in the fight for Hussar Hill were about fifty. All the fighting was conducted at long rifle range. At last, for the first time during these operations, we found the Boer flank, and had placed a strong force at right angles to his main position. The fruits of this was plucked on the 18th, Sunday, when Gen. Hildyard began a vigorous attack across the Nek on Monte Christo. The guns and the other brigades assisted. The Boers now commenced a rear guard action, which degenerated rapidly into flight. The whole line of abandoned trenches, two miles long, was captured with a loss to the assaulting brigade of three men. The Boers then fled across the Tugela river at great speed with disorder, but bravely covered by their artillery. They left in their camp some prisoners and much material. The British loss was comparatively small, chiefly in Gen. Hildyard's brigade, which gallantly stormed the key of the position.

"The Boer flank has been completely turned, strong defensive positions have been captured, and valuable positions for further advance have been secured. The Boers have been put to flight for the first time in Natal since Elandslaagte. British soldiers slept last night in Boer tents on top of the captured hills, from which they can see right into Ladysmith. All ranks are encouraged, and now perhaps with God's help we shall all succeed."

GATACRE AT DORDRECHT.

London, Feb. 22.—General Gatacre of whom little has been heard recently, has arrived at Dordrecht on an armored train. The British hold the hills behind the town, which is short of food, the Boers having commandered everything before they vacated the place.

Though the Boers attempt to capture Arundel on Tuesday was defeated they still occupy commanding positions in the neighborhood of the town, and are extending these southward. The garrisons are confident of holding their own.

"THE PATH OF GLORY LEADS BUT TO THE GRAVE."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Charles Tupper Pay Glowing Tributes to Canadians Who Fell in Battle.

Ottawa, Feb. 22.—The following references were made in the House of Commons regarding the Canadians who fell in Sunday's battle—

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said—"It may not be out of place at this moment that we should interrupt the regular course of business to give a moment's attention to the news from Africa to-day. The news we have received is of a character at once to cheer and sadden our hearts. It is cheering in this respect—it brings the announcement that our Canadian troops in the field have received their baptism of fire and have supported the ordeal in a manner creditable to themselves and to their country. The telegraphic message gives no details whatever; still, we know by the number of casualities which have taken place that our men have died at their posts and that their courage has been equal to what we expected of them. But this is the saddening part of it. Such is the awful character of war, that its triumphs are always mixed with tears, and however much we can rejoice at the victories achieved by the British arms, victories in which our fellow countrymen are taking a part, still the announcement is saddened by the fact that twenty of our countrymen have lost their lives, and sixty-nine are now lying between life and death.

"The announcement is such as to, if it were possible, still more confirm us in our resolve of doing our full duty in the present emergency, We can do nothing at present to solace those families which are bereaved, but we can assure them—and this I am sure we do with all our hearts—that their loss is not their own exclusively, but that it is also ours and our country's."

Sir Charles Tupper replied as follows—"I desire to associate myself in the warmest manner with the extremely appropriate words that have just fallen from the Right Honorable leader of the House. He has truly said that the triumphs of war can only be achieved in connection with the sadder fate that involves men's lives and carries pain and suffering into the households of a great many of our people. The Canadian contingent, who have realized on the field that which Canada expected of them, who have discharged their duty nobly and faithfully, who have fallen in the cause we believe to be a righteous one, have conferred not only undying fame and honor on themselves, but that same honor and fame upon our country, which sent them there.

"I am sure that every member of this House will extend his most heartfelt sympathy to the friends and relatives of those who, still living are in a situation calling for our sympathy. The great news that has gladdened every portion of the Empire, of the success attending British arms in the relief of Kimberley and the relief of Ladysmith, together, with the prospect of more decisive measures calculated to bring this war to an end at no distant day, will, at the same time, be accompanied with a feeling of deepest sympathy and commiseration with the friends of those who have fallen on the field of battle in the glorious struggle they have made on behalf of this country. I would suggest to my Right Honorable friend that a message reflecting the warmest sympathy of this House, and of all the people of this country, whom we represent, should be sent to Colonel Otter as a solace to the wounded."

War Between Great Britain and Russia May Provoke it—Polish Patriots Would Free Their Country From Tyranny.

Special to the Times.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—Leaders in Polish national circles of this city say there is a secret National Polish League, which extends throughout Europe and America, and that it has existed not only for fourteen years, but ever since the break-up of the last struggle for Poland's independence in 1863. One of the leaders said —"The secret organization has not been plotting against any government, but for the freedom of Poland by force of arms or any other method.

"During the last few weeks the Polish national organizations in this city, which as such have no direct connection with the secret league, have been receiving information that the Russian government has resumed persecution of the Poles and that wholesale arrests are being made in Warsaw, those of the so-called central committee of the National League. The league began a spirited agitation in December of last year, when a circular was issued from Warsaw, appealing to all Poles to equip themselves both mentally and physically so that in case of need they might be ready to serve the cause of freeing Poland. The The circular called on all Poles to continue the agitation for Poland and to study and propagate Polish national spirit.

"Since the publication of the circular, books and pamphlets, which because of their intense Polish patriotic expressions are prohibited in Poland by Russia, have been printed in Chicago and other cities, sent to Europe, placed in the hands of agents of the league and distributed in Poland.

In speaking of the Polish League and of the recent arrests in Lemberg, Frank H. Jablonski, president of the Polish National Alliance of America, said: "We have been receiving information about the numerous arrests in Warsaw, but that arrsts have been made in Lemberg is a surprise to us. All we can say is that the coming events cast their shadows before them. That there is a secret Polish National Government League, with a seat in Warsaw is true and public. Who the members are I cannot tell you.

"The plan is to have a general uprising in Poland in case of war between Russia and England, and it is in line with that plan that many Poles are being recruited into English regiments from Warsaw and other places in Poland and sent, not to the Transvaal, as some correspondents would mistake, but into Asia, where the first clash is expected with Russia. Of course, men from Austro-Poland would assist their fellow countrymen, and that may be a reason for the arrests."

THE FAMINE IN INDIA.

An official report on the Indian famine gives a comprehensive view of the situation. This document explains that taking the country in detail, the prospects are good in Bengal, Burma, and the north-west provinces and Oudh; indifferent in Mysore and Madras; fair in the irrigated tracts of Sind and south-west Punjab; while the rest of the country is famine-stricken. The Punjab autumn harvest was the worst on record for many years. The coming spring harvest in the unirrigated tracts occupies half the area sown in the last two years. In Bombay there is no previous record of so extensive and total failure of crops. In the central provinces the chief commissioner reports a failure so severe and widespread as has never been experienced before. The rice crop, the mainstay of the eastern part of these provinces, is more completely lost than in 1896. Millets in the southern districts have fared but little better, and the cold weather crops in the west and north are probably worse than in 1897. In the fertile Berars the cotton crop is almost entirely lost. All the other crops have practically failed entirely. No such calamity has ever before befallen this part of India. Similarly throughout Rajputana, south-east Punjab, and the western half of the states of Central India, the present drought is without a parallel in extent and intensity. In a large part of the area affected it follows close upon a famine of great severity, and is accompanied by an unprecedented scarcity of fodder. The total area affected is 450,000 square miles, with a population of more than 40,000,000.

THE "BLACK PERIL" HORROR.

The British entry into the Orange Free State, the relief of Kimberley, and the doubtless immediate advance on the state capital, Bloemfontein, comes in the "very nick of time," for other and weighty reasons; we allude to the threatening "Black Peril." It had been hoped that the warlike and impatient native tribes would be kept quiet, leaving the Boers and British to fight out their quarrels. Feeling the desperate nature of their situation, the Boers have encouraged the Basutos tribe to take their part, and according to the statement made in the House of Commons by the Hon. J. Chamberlain on Thursday night they have armed these braves with 2,000 rifles and given them safe conduct through their territory. This may bring on a conflict with the Zulus. Mr. Chamberlain said "that the government had decided that if the native territories were invaded by the Boers the natives (Zulus) will be assisted in every way in defending themselves." This announcement in the House made a profound impression upon the members; as a correspondent Mr. T. P. O'Connor to a New York journal telegraphs—:"Everybody saw what Mr. Chamberlain meant, but nobody spoke; everybody understood all its terror and ferocity." The recent British advance and the relief of Kimberley may, we trust, have the effect of quieting a native uprising against the British which the Boers have been promoting in Zululand. It is clear that British troops will have to be sent to the Zulu territory to aid the natives against the Boers and their hostile tribe, the Basutos. This will open up another chapter in the entire business. Every effort will require to be made to squelch this native uprising of the million-and-a-half natives against civilization. A. J. Balfour, government leader in the House of Commons, on Thursday hinted at the "possibility of employing Indian troops (from British India)" if the Boers adopt a course inconsistent with the idea that, by common consent, the war would be confined to the two European races." Should Indian troops be found necessary to put down the "Black Peril" rising they would doubtless be landed at Delagoa Bay with the consent of Portugal, whose territory would also be threatened by a Black war.

The friends of the Boers, their sympathizers everywhere, especially in the United States, can hardly justify the Boer leaders in the employment of the Black element in this war. Let the native tribes get the other hand, a general massacre of all whites, commencing with the Boers, would consequently follow. Possibly, some of General Buller's forces will be despatched to aid the Zulus to suppress the Basutos. If the Boers arm these Blacks and place them on their kops and kopjes their forces for defence would be numerically increased.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

From the harrowing reports that keep coming regarding the Indian famine, and the need of relief, it would seem as if another "Pay, pay, pay" poem from Mr. Kipling would be in order.

•• • ••

Not wishing to be lost sight of altogether an obscure State named Florida rises to remark that she has been frost-bitten, and that consequently there won't be any oranges next year. We greet this with a peal of incredulous laughter.

•• • ••

Statistics of the criminal population of the United States show that only 6 per cent. of the total number of criminals are women. The other 94 per cent. are men whose crimes are inspired by women.

We suppose Bobs will do the square thing by those Kimberley butchers, and compensate them for their stock of horse meat for which there is presumably now no demand.

But three States in the Union pay their Governor an annual salary of $10,000. They are New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

•• • ••

If Bobs told Baden-Powell that Mafeking would be relieved shortly we guess Bobs knew what he was talking about.

They are hushing Boer babies over in the Transvaal now with the threat that French will get them if they don't keep quiet.

Cronje seems to be making desperate efforts to rob Aguinaldo of his sprinting laurels.

•• • ••

It is too bad Roberts didn't catch Cronje, but of course the latter doesn't think so.

•• • ••

Roberts won the game, though the other fellow took the trek.

•• • ••

Has anybody seen anything of that Fenian invasion lately?

•• • ••

In view of Mr. Macrum's noisy departure from Pretoria and his humble entry into Washington, with a very lame explanation of his conduct, the Boston Herald very pertinently enquires whether there are many other Macrums drawing salaries abroad at present.

•• • ••

Time, again, the key to Ladysmith is all the more uncertain on account of the apparent deadlock in matters there.

•• • ••

It's all right for Buller to cross the Tugela, but the thing is to get over the Boers.

•• • ••

The Boers are sending out messages assuring the world of their ultimate triumph and indicating that the Transvaal Republic has resources not dreamed of by the English. Not since the heroic days of William of Orange has finer gallantry been shown than by these sturdy burgomaster soldiers.—Buffalo Times.

Oh, we don't know. It depends upon the point of view. Those "sturdy burgomaster soldiers" have been doing the safest kind of fighting. It doesn't call for a heap of gallantry for a man to sit up behind a stone wall and take pot shots with a rifle that shoots three miles at an enemy in the open. There has been any amount of gallantry displayed in South Africa, but we fancy it has so far been pretty much all on the other side. The records of the war so far seem to show that when the "sturdy burgomaster soldiers" got into close enough quarters to enable them to display their alleged gallantry to advantage they usually threw up their hands and howled for mercy.

When the Nicaraguan canal is built its locks will not be used to close it to the world.

Kimberley is away off in Africa, but Canadians heard of its relief with as much enthusiasm as they would have greeted a similar experience to a city of their own. This greeting of fraternity pervades the Empire, and a gentleman named Kruger has strengthened it very much.

As a vehicle for investment, in the absence of snow this winter the sleigh has been a kind of revenue cutter to the liverymen.

Mr. Cluxton is Probably Right.

Our esteemed fellow townsman, Mr. W. H. Cluxton, has a theory in regard to the causes of the wonderful climatic changes which have taken place of late years on the continent. We have now comparatively snowless winters, as compared with 25 years ago. On the other hand countries that formerly knew no cold, are having severe winter weather. A despatch from Jacksonville, Florida, dated Feb. 20, says—"It is feared the cold weather Saturday and Sunday injured orange and other fruit trees. At Milton there was a fall of snow with the thermometer at 25, while thousands of fires have been kept burning since Saturday night in groves all over Florida to save trees. The effect of the cold cannot be fully ascertained until warm weather comes. Freezing temperature is reported as far south as Tampa." Mr. Cluxton is of opinion that the enormous quantities of iron, steel and copper that is exposed by the railroads, telegraph and telephone companies, is responsible for the great climatic changes which are now taking place. So far as this great family journal is concerned, it will lose no sleep over this matter, especially while wood remains at five dollars per cord. We only hope that the good work will continue, until this g.f.j. can lie in his hammock in January and pluck the golden oranges from the heavily laden trees at his elbow.

Served Him Right.

The Toronto Star says—"A pro-Boer workman at Brantford was compelled by his fellow-employes to kneel and apologize to a British flag, and was also soundly thumped." In Peterborough there is a considerable number of Boer sympathizers—men who do not favor the Transvaal because they think that country is in the right, but who are opposed to Britain at every step, because they are disloyal. Only the other day a man, well known to many of our readers, happened to be present when a young man expressed the wish that the British would get the worst of the war. He struck the speaker in the jaw, and was set on by three others and had to fly. It is time the turn was called.

An Evolution

Mr. Dan Mann, of McKenzie, Mann & Co., was at one time an ordinary sawyer, and ran a gang saw at Fenelon Falls, while "Bill" McKenzie kept a small general store at Kirkfield, a few miles west of Lindsay. This reminds us that the editor of this great family journal long ago used to smoke five cent cigars and tackle the new-fangled cider that never saw an apple. Now nothing short of a ten-center is good enough for him, and cider from the pure juice of the apple is his only beverage when out with Billy Loch and the rest of the boys.

Dominion Ballots.

In Dominion elections in future the simple white paper ballot will be used, with the exception that there will be none but horizontal lines between the names of candidates. The vertical line dividing the name from the space for the cross will be done away with, and there will be two counterfoils attached to the ballot. These will each bear the same number, and one will be exhibited, so that the agents of the candidates may see the number. Upon the marked ballot being returned the returning officer will tear off the second counterfoil, which will show whether the ballot was the one which was given the voter.

Mr. H. G. Buck is over in New York State in the interests of his lumber trade.

The Norwood Hockey Club are talking of getting up an assembly.

Rev. R. P. McKay, of Toronto, will preach in the Presbyterian church here on February 25.

The Norwood Council met on Tuesday night in the Treasurer's office to confer with D. Mahony concerning his appointment as constable, collector, sanitary inspector and street commissioner. He accepted the position at $100 per annum and is also to be paid by the day as street commissioner.

The Town Council and solicitor are looking into the matter of J. Ward Colby, who has been supported by Peterborough for some time.

The High School Hockey Team journeyed from here to Campbellford Friday last to meet Campbellford II. After a fast match the Norwood boys won 6—0. For Norwood Alex Kempt, the smallest man on the ice, played the best game on both sides. The following are the names of the school team:—Goal B. Fife, point T. R. Rutherford, cover H. Nichol, forwards A. Kempt, W. Watts, D. Pettigreen (Capt.), J. Sherry.

Next Friday night's carnival should be well attended, especially to see the hockey match between the British and the Boers. The Boers have a strong defence, but the British intend making a bayonet charge and thus hope to win their stronghold.

The School Board met on Wednesday evening, Feb. 7, at the school. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed, after which election of officers took place. The chairman, secretary and treasurer were all re-elected. The following committees were also arranged, Executive, Property, Finance and supply. The report was accepted. Moved that a committee be appointed to arrrange preliminaries of readjustment of school section lines.—Carried. A written report from the principal of the school was handed in stating why the attendance had been so small during the past few months. This report was accepted. The principal also sent in a report recommending the use of stamped letter heads with names of officers, etc., for school use and correspondence. Accounts for supplies, etc., were, if found to be correct to be paid. The Board then adjourned.

T. Fraser has quite a number of auction sales on hand.

An oyster supper under the auspices of the Norwood R. B. was held in the town hall Wednesday evening.

Deadlock at Port Hope.

There is a deadlock in connection with the affairs of the Council of Port Hope. For several meetings after the new Council was elected, it was a case of meet, quarrel and adjourn, and now it has developed into a case of no quorum. In the meantime the townsfolk do not appear to be suffering. In fact, they are wondering if it would not be wise to have a meeting only once or twice a year hereafter. It has been said in Peterborough that it is a poor meeting in which our Council do not spend $1,000 or more. A meeting, say, once in three months, might be the means of saving much money.

What shall we do with Kruger?
What shall we do with Paul?
Then why not boom the old man "Oom"
At a leading music hall?
On show he would draw a shilling
That heralds the popular star,
And if Kruger were only willing,
He might nearly pay for the war.

A CONFESSION BY LEMIEUX.

He Turns Queen's Evidence and Makes Damning Charges Against Directors.

Montreal, Feb. 26.—The evidence of Ferdinand Lemieux, late accountant of the defunct Banque Ville Marie, which was taken in secret before Judge Choquet at the recent sittings, has been given to the press. It shows that Lemieux has turned Queen's evidence.

He charges that the directors as far back as 1897 knew the bank to be insolvent, and charges that the directors deliberately set to work to open as many branches and receive as much of the people's money as possible, knowing the bank to be insolvent; that they issued instructions to the manager of each branch to receive as many deposits as possible, and to pay as little discount as he could.

Many of these branches were opened since the directors knew the bank to be insolvent, he claims, the object being to get funds to pay dividends to shareholders.

He also charges that the false statements issued were prepared on instructions from the directors for the purpose of deceiving the Government and the public. He also charges the directors with speculating in stocks on margins through the firm of W. Weir & Sons, and keeping the full value of the stocks so speculated in on the books of the bank as assets.

This evidence, it is stated, was taken by Judge Choquet in person, with no lawyers present either in the interests of Limieux, the directors or the crown.

Jimmy and the Baby.

Jimmy's mother kept cows and sold milk. Jimmy himself had nothing to do with the cows, though sometimes he used to carry the milk pail to his mother's customers. The customers all liked Jimmy, with his round, freckled face and bashful grin, and they used to ask him how business was, for, although Jimmy was only 12 years old, he had a business. He made coffins—baby coffins—and sold them to the undertaker. They were nice pine coffins, with all the edges carefully joined. Jimmy received 50 cents for each one.

One day Jimmy stopped at the house of one of his mother's customers to leave some milk. A little boy met him at the door.

"We've got a new baby!" said the little boy. "Would you like to see it?"

Jimmy nodded. The little boy's aunt laughingly led Jimmy to the cradle where the new baby was. Jimmy gazed at the infant for some time, speechless with admiration or some such emotion.

"What do you think of it, Jimmy?" asked the aunt.

Jimmy grinned.

"I guess I'll have to make a nice little coffin when I go home," he said.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Too Small.

Uncle 'Zek'el Watson was accustomed to seeing good sized squares of cup cake, 'lection cake or gingerbread on the supper table, and when he had his first plate of ice cream in a city restaurant he looked with some disfavor upon the macaroons and small sponge drops which accompanied it.

"How do you like it?" asked his niece, who was doing the honors of the city for her uncle.

"The ice cream is first rate," said Uncle 'Zek'el. "I call it extry good. But when you come to these things," he added, lifting one of the sponge "lady fingers" and surveying it doubtfully, "I presume to say they're all right enough, what there is of 'em, but there isn't enough of 'em; just nothing but gape and swallow!"—Youth's Companion.

Books.

When I consider what some books have done for the world and what they are doing, how they keep up our hope, awaken new courage and faith, soothe pain, give an ideal life to those whose homes are hard and cold, bind together distant ages and foreign lands, create new worlds of beauty, bring down truths from heaven, I give eternal blessings for this gift.—James Freeman Clarke.

RUMORS OF GERMAN INTERVENTION.

Action to Be So Timed as to End the War Within Sixty Days

Washington, Feb. 21.—For the past few days a report has been in circulation here that Germany intends to intervene between the British and the Boers. Part of the story was that Emperor William had been sounded by Dr. Leyds, the Transvaal's agent in Europe, on the proposition that Germany assert suzerainty or absolute control over the South African Republic's and demand of Great Britain that the war end. It was said also in connection with the report that Germany's action would be so timed that the war would be brought to a conclusion within sixty days. The Times reporter was told that the Government here had information that Germany intended to intervene. Secretary Hay was asked if this were so, and he said that the Government had no such information.

CLEVER, BUT SOULLESS.

One Woman's New Way In Which to Pay Social Debts.

"I don't know much of the ways of fashionable people," said a young physician not long ago, "for I am not in society, but if many society women are like one I know here in town I think I'm safer to be out of it. It was not this season, but it wasn't so long ago but that plenty of people can remember the circumstances. I had among my patients an elderly woman who lived with the daughter's family. The daughter lived, if not beyond her means, at least up to the very edge, went out a great deal and was entertained a great deal.

"The mother fell sick with a complaint which I knew would prove fatal. I did not inform the family till one day the daughter asked me to tell her frankly what her mother's condition was and just how long she could live. I told her that the old lady could not possibly last more than a fortnight. She begged me not to let anybody know how serious the case was. She didn't want her young daughters distressed, she said.

"Of course I told nobody, and just a week after that I read in the papers that Mrs. Dash, the daughter of my dying patient, had sent out invitations for a large dancing party, to be given on an evening a fortnight away. My patient did not live as long as I had expected. The day after she died I read in the papers that 'owing to the sudden death of her mother Mrs. Dash had been compelled to recall her invitations.'

"She had never intended to give a ball. She could not have afforded it, and she 'bluffed.' I have cold shivers every time I see her."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

AN EXCITING LIFE.

Why the Chicago Girl's Brown Hair Turned Golden Hued.

"Gosh, Marier, but that wus a close shave!" exclaimed Uncle Eben as he dragged his worthy spouse out of the way of a street car that was yet 30 feet away. "This yer Chicago life is 'nough to make a man's h'ar turn gray."

"Turn gray!" snarled his wife. "'Twouldn't be so bad of thet wus all it done. It's decent and respectable to have gray ha'r, but when it comes to makin a poor young gal's ha'r turn yaller jist on account of the excitement uv all these cars an railroads an stilts an howlin people thet's when I say it's a sin to hev sich big cities. I'm a-goin right out to 'Liza Jane's house, ef I kin ever find it, an stay right in it till we leave Chicago."

"How do you know it makes people's ha'r turn yaller?" asked Uncle Eben. "I ain't never hearn tell of ennything of that kind."

"Well, I see it with my own eyes—leastwise I see it turn brown agin after the poor dears wus rested all summer in the country. You know them four gals what staid all summer over at Cousin Ellen's? When they fust come, they'd big brown eyes an fa'r complexions an right yaller ha'r. Purty soon every one of 'em's ha'r begin to get streaked in spots, an before the summer wus gone they all had rich brown ha'r. Then I ast one of 'em what made their ha'r turn brown, an she said it wus allus brown, but that the excitin life she'd been livin in Chicago, whar she had to act in a theater every night, made it turn yaller. Poor thing! She looked so much better at the end of the summer that I hate to think of her comin back to this great, wicked city."—Chicago Journal.

His Opportunity.

"An operation for appendicitis," the surgeon assured the sufferer, "is rather a serious thing, of course, but it is not necessarily an alarming one, and it will demonstrate, moreover, just how much fortitude you have."

"Yes," replied the patient; "I suppose it will show just what's in me. Go ahead."—Chicago Tribune.

Picking Out the Waiters.

The safest plan to pursue at a reception where the waiters and male guests are clad in swallowtails is to jam your hands into your trousers pockets and jingle a few coins when you meet a stranger. If his eyes begin to bulge and his hand commences to travel toward you, he's a waiter. This is a straight tip.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Blackmailer.

Tommy—I bought this dog to make money out of him.

His Sister's Beau—How is that?

Tommy—I expect you to give me 10 cents for tyin him up ever' time you come to see sister. She's awful savage.—Ohio State Journal.

RETRIBUTION

He saved a little day by day,
Withheld from something that he craved.
"The dollars grow," he used to say,
"From extra pennies that are saved."

His pile of savings grew and grew,
Each day he hoarded more and more;
Each night he ran his fingers through
And gloated o'er his golden store.

And as his wealth increased his heart
Shrunk, hardened, shriveled and decayed.
He cheated, gouged and played the part
That many another fool has played.

He rose to power through his wealth;
He crushed those who were in the way;
He gained a fortune, lost his health
And miserably died one day.

Then came his drunken cousin, who
Had thrashed him when the two were boys.
His savings and his stealings, too,
One whom he hated now enjoys.

MATRON AND MAID.

Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain is not the typical American girl which some people represent her to be.

Mrs. Mary Lease has renounced her residence in Kansas and will hereafter make her home in New York.

The Duchess of Sutherland frequently attends meetings of socialistic women in company with Miss Margaret MacMillan, a socialistic lecturer.

Miss Mayme Jester, a niece of Buffalo Bill, is said to be the only female press agent on the road. She left the newspaper business to go into this new field.

Miss Emma Thursby has returned to New York and will resume work with her pupils at once. A recent report of her illness was unfounded, as she is quite well.

Dr. Cornelia de Bay of Chicago, a successful woman physician among the Dutch of that city and herself of Dutch descent, is about to give up her practice and go to the Transvaal as an army nurse.

Mrs. Julia Grant, widow of General Grant, will complete her personal memoirs before Christmas. She has been engaged on the work for nearly ten years. Society is interested in the appearance of Mrs. Grant's book.

Miss Anne M. de Beck, who heads the movement among Chicago women for the presentation of $5,000 swords to Generals Wheeler and Lee, has already had the designs for the swords worked out and announces that over half the necessary funds have been promised.

A young girl, Miss Emma M. Hery, is the superintendent of the Denver public schools. She was a newspaper woman and an active member of the Denver Woman's Press club. She is a Democrat and was elected on the straight ticket. Her opponent was also a woman.

It is rumored in Paris that Amelie Rives, now the Princess Troubetzkoy, will settle there permanently and establish a literary salon for the purpose, primarily, of securing a French translation of her literary works and such other recognition as she thinks they deserve.

Mrs. John M. Thurston, the bride of the Nebraska senator, is described as of medium height, graceful, with changeful dark gray eyes, occasionally flashed with blue, perfect figure and mobile features. She was born in Tallahassee, Fla., 27 years ago and is a graduate of Wellesley.

Under the stimulating influence of Miss Grace King, the historian of New Orleans, the Louisiana Historical society is to establish in the Crescent City a historical museum. The society hopes to obtain by and by the Cabildo building, an old and historic pile now occupied by the state supreme court.

CHICAGO AND GRAND OPERA.

Chicago, having tired of grand opera, now proposes to become the world's art center, regardless of expense.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

One explanation of the failure of the grand opera season in Chicago is that the people are saving their money to buy automobiles.—Kansas City Star.

Mr. Grau says Chicago is a poor town for grand opera. The people out there will probably strike back by declaring that Grau is an all fired poor judge of packed meat.—Washington Post.

After losing a great deal of money Manager Grau has discovered that Chicago does not care for grand opera, her people being busy listening to the grunt of dying hogs and having no time to hark to the trills of a Sembrich.—Louisville Post.

Chicago is feeling rather mortified over the cold reception it gave to Mr. Grau. It would seem that Chicago is about on a par with Rochester as a "musical center" in the matter of giving welcome and support to great artists.—Rochester Democrat.

THE FRENCH PRESS.

Sober minded Frenchmen think that undue attention has been paid in England to the obscure draftsmen whose vulgarities have adorned the pages of the Parisian gutter press.—Philadelphia Record.

Considering all the abuse the English papers heaped upon France in the matter of Dreyfus, it is not surprising that the French papers should retaliate with unfavorable comments upon English policy.—Philadelphia Times.

The sort of cartooning to which Queen Victoria is being subjected in the comic papers of Paris is a reminder of the fact that there is no country in the world where that sort of journalism descends to such depths as in France. Its cleverness and keenness are impaired by coarseness and indelicacy.—Boston Herald.

India Rubber Industry.

The bulletin of the Royal gardens, Kew, states that the falling off in the production of India rubber at Lagos is due to the reckless way in which the trees are being exhausted. There is a want of control over the collectors, who tap young trees and destroy whole rubber forests by overworking, so that this industry, which is an important source of wealth to the colony, is in danger of extinction. A similar disaster occurred in Madagascar, and now active steps are being taken to preserve the industry by the establishment of plantations of rubber producing plants.

DEADLY SNAKES.

Various Signs by Which Their Character May Be Recognized.

To distinguish between venomous and harmless snakes is easy in practice, but it is difficult to explain in words alone, as there is one external characteristic which distinguishes them. It is rather a peculiar, varying union of many separate marks that brands the dangerous reptile.

Generally speaking, all snakes may be divided into two great classes—those which have the head covered with numerous small scales and those which have it covered with large, regularly fitted plates. Leaving out the elipidæ and the poisonous sea snakes, with which the hunter will have nothing to do, all snakes with small head scales move about by night and those with the large plates on the head by day. This may be known by their eyes, for the first have vertical pupils like the cat's, while those of the latter are generally circular in form. The long, active day snake, gliding about from bush to bush or hurriedly taking refuge beneath some protruding rock or tree stump, is harmless. Even should he lie coiled in the sunshine he will flee from approaching danger. But a serpent nicely coiled in some secluded nook which instead of fleeing gathers himself closer together is most probably dangerous, particularly if he be more or less marked with a suggestion of irregular crossbars or whitish or dirty yellow and darker brown or blackish. This is the characteristic coloring of our most dangerous snakes, the rattler, the copperhead and the moccasin.

The following points embrace all the peculiarities of our American vipers, and the last two are especially noteworthy as the crowning proofs of venom:

(1) Moving about at dusk or by night, generally on the ground, and very rarely ascending trees or bushes. (2) Seldom flying in alarm, but rather coiling for defense. (3) Colors generally subdued in tint, with a semblance of irregular crossbars of lighter and darker shades. (4) Tail short, body stout, neck thin, head flat and very broad, especially behind. (5) Scales keeled—i. e., each scale has a ridge down the middle, which gives the skin a rough appearance like a rasp. (6) Head covered with small scales, sometimes larger over the eyes or nose. (7) Eyes with vertical pupils like a cat's. (8) Two pits or holes between the eyes and nose, suggesting four nostrils. (9) Two long, curved, perforated fangs in the upper jaw just in front of the eye, one on either side and so hinged that they lie backward, hidden from view in a membranous sheath, but erectile at will.

Some of the first seven peculiarities may be found in harmless snakes, but it is only in the vipers that they are united.—Outing.

How She "Guides" Them.

There is a jolly mother in Brooklyn who has several grown up sons boarding at home with her, and they declare she wants to "boss" them all the time, just as if they were children. She laughingly repudiates their charge and declares that she merely wishes to advise and guide them, but has long ago ceased to rule them. Here is an example of the way she "guides" them: At dinner the other night a big meat pie and a small roast duck were brought on together. The duck was intended for the father principally. The boys were death on duck, their mother well knew, but it would not make a mouthful apiece for them; so, addressing the boy who sat nearest her, she said, "Which will you have, Bobbie, duck or pie?" and at once began cutting the pie.

"Duck!" said Bobbie promptly.

"No, Bobbie," answered his mother cheerfully, "you can't have duck, dear. Take your choice, my son, take your choice, but you can't have duck!"—New York Tribune.

New Zealand Oddities.

The crow in New Zealand strikes as sweet a note as any heard in the woodland, says Henry D. Lloyd in The Atlantic. The robin has no song and no red breast; the native hen is the greatest of rat killers; there is a caterpillar which turns into a plant. These and some other productions of nature have done for New Zealand what the kangaroo and the ornithorhynchus have done for Australia—given it the suggestion of oddity and the marvelous. Rabbits and sweetbriers, introduced for pleasure, spread like wildfire, and it is an attraction to be duly advertised in the sale of land that it has been cleared of sweetbrier and fenced against rabbits, and then later the rabbit becomes a profit instead of a pest and is exported by millions to feed the English.

Amateur Photography.

Let me call attention to one of the most universally popular mistakes that have to do with photography—that of classing supposedly excellent work as professional and using the term amateur to convey the idea of immature productions and to excuse atrociously poor photographs. As a matter of fact nearly all the greatest work is being and has always been done by those who are following photography for the love of it, and not merely for financial reasons. As the name implies, an amateur is one who works for love, and viewed in this light the incorrectness of the popular classification is readily apparent.—Alfred Stieglitz in Scribner's.

Minnesota's First Book.

The Rev. S. W. Dickinson, an agent for the American Bible society, says that the first book printed in Minnesota was a Bible. It was printed in 1836, about 12 years before the first issue of a newspaper in St. Paul. The Bible was in the Ojibway language and was printed on the mission press at Lake Pokegama, Pine county, under the supervision of Rev. Mr. Ayer, who likewise had charge of the mission farm at that point.

Why the Barber Forgot.

Victim—Probably not. You see, it has all healed up now.—Melbourne Times.

Making Things Worse.

When a man gets nervous prostration, all his friends remind him how they warned him years ago.—Chicago Record.

RAN A RACE WITH DEATH.

Narrow Margin by Which a Man on a Railway Bridge Won.

A high trestle bridge more than a quarter of a mile long, supporting the single track of the Nickel Plate railroad, spans the valley of Grand river, east of Painesville, O. The bridge is little wider than the distance between the rails, and the ties are placed eight or ten inches apart, the space between being open to the river below.

A young man who crossed recently had a thrilling experience on the bridge. He had just passed the center when a fast train rounded the curve behind him. As the engine whistled he quickened his pace. With every step the train was rushing nearer, and there was not a moment to lose.

Once the young man stumbled and seemed about to fall, but quickly regained his balance and hurried on. As he reached the place for which he had started the train was close behind, and he had just time to swing himself over the side of the bridge as the locomotive thundered by. The ends of the ties were slippery with grease from dripping axle boxes, and his foot slipped wide as he left the track. His right hand, stretched blindly out before him, touched a round iron bar, bracing two parts of the bridge, and, with a grip like that of a drowning man, his fingers clasped around it. For a moment he swung in empty air. In another his left hand had found a place beside his right, and his feet touched the welcome edge of a brace below. With bleeding fingers clutching the slender iron bar that vibrated widely from side to side, moments seemed hours.

At last the train passed, and the young man was able to climb slowly to the track above. Unnerved by the trying experience, he lay for a moment stretched across the rails and, then rising to his feet, with blanched face and unsteady limbs, made his way to firm ground.—Cleveland Leader.

He Lost the Hole.

Ed Tufts of Los Angeles was playing golf with a friend. When he drove from the third teeing ground, he sliced the ball badly and sent it away to one side. It stopped in front of a grazing cow, and Tufts came up just in time to see it disappear into the bovine mouth. When his opponent had made his stroke, Tufts untethered the cow and, with many sounding thwacks of his club, drove the beast to the third hole. There he made her disgorge the ball and, neatly holing it, announced that he had made the hole in two strokes. His opponent calmly finished the hole in seven and claimed the hole.

"But I made it in two," protested Tufts gleefully.

"No, you didn't," declared the other. "You made it in 39. You hit that cow 37 times, for I counted every stroke," and Tufts conceded the hole.—San Francisco Argonaut.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

In Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Zambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvellous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and heralded to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that to-day they enjoy the fruits of their success in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain, but magnificent edifices of the most modern type, beautiful botanical gardens, and the public improvements are evidences of the wonderful advance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial centre, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenue of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals lend an air of peace and tranquility, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustable veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred million of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders" whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest manifested in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before thought of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Africander whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman—born in the Cape Colony, having traveled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Zambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience, in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work—will present South Africa as it is to-day, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collection of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this county. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

FARMING IN ONTARIO.

Provincial Minister of Agriculture Says the Tillers of the Soil Are Prospering.

Ottawa, Feb. 21.—That the Ontario farmer is not getting his proper share of the existing prosperity is the opinion of Hon. John Dryden, Minister of Agriculture, who is now in the capital. Despite this, however, the Ontario cabinet Minister believes the farmer's lot is improving, as the practical scientific side of the pursuit is now being studied with good results. As proof of this the Minister of Agriculture cited the fact that the attendance of pupils at the Agricultural College, Guelph, for the present year, is the greatest in the history of that institution and more accommodation will have to be provided. Another indication of this is seen in the fact that the attendance at the Farmers' Institute meetings throughout the province is greatly increased.

Hon. Mr. Dryden states that measures will be taken to open up the new lands of Ontario, of which there are 1,000,000 acres in the Rainy River district alone. In this district it is not unlikely that Doukhobors will be settled.

The Minister of Agriculture says that stock raising is in the ascendant in the agricultural world and is rivaling dairying.

Referring to the exodus of Ontario farmers to Manitoba the visiting cabinet minister remarked that it continues unabated, and will likely do so till the farmers in the western province suffered a setback, as they probably will in a few years at the most. The township fair, he says, appears to be in many places a waning institution, as the list is overcrowded. Steps may be taken to weed some out and strengthen the remaining ones.

Hon. Mr. Dryden had little to say on political questions and could not predict what the future would bring forth. Whether the government would have to go to the country soon, he could not say. Speaking of the evidences of corrupt practices disclosed in election proceedings the Ontario minister stated his government would do everything possible to conduct a full investigation.

AFTER A SURRENDER

WHAT THE CAPTURED BOERS LOOKED LIKE TO THE CANADIANS.

The Sunnyland Boers Were a Silent Downcast Crew—Odd Admixture of Practical Barbarism With Occasional Contact With Civilization—Burial of a Queensland Comrade by Canadians.

Fourteen ancient tents, their blankets, kettles and camp utensils, tossed about in wild confusion. Three long wagons of the type in which the voortrekkers voyaged the veldt, a team of a dozen magnificent oxen, a big water-cart which we eyed greedily, a Kaffir wattled hut, its floor piled high with odds and ends of clothing and valuables, its doorway marked by a shell-smash; the rocky kop side behind, a flat plain dotted with shaggy, bush-like trees in front—such was the Boer laager. Prisoners came from here and there, over a score from the kopje-top, more from this corner and that of the field, and were taken to the hut. Within it and around its door they squatted, a silent, downcast crew; what a mess they had made of their affairs! Perhaps they were not so despondent as we thought, for one man as he sat in the guarded group pointed out a rifle which one of the victors was carrying and claimed it as his own—a piece of cheek which staggered our men. The prisoners claimed only part of our attention; with eager curiosity the camp was ransacked. At last we had our hands upon these Boers; what manner of men were they, and how did they live? Poorly enough, I should say; the camp must have been densely crowded with the motley gathering, and we could see the odd admixture of practical barbarism with occasional contact with civilization, as when good suits of clothes lay side by side with repulsive-looking strips of biltong. We felt that all this was ours, ours by right of battle, ours by virtue of victory. Perhaps we were wrong, perhaps the confiscated property of rebels should fall to the Crown, but as long as men go to war so long will victors walk through the camp of the vanquished with just that feeling swelling their veins. Something else lay heavy upon us—thirst. It raged through us. The yellow pool where the veldt cut into the kopje face filled our water-bottles, and we drank and drank. The foul dregs of the Boers' water cart were drained with joy. As the sun was setting our own water cart with more wholesome water drove up, and we drank and drank again. As our fires were lighted what receptacles could be found were filled and the muddy fluid boiled. Our transport wagons were miles away and for tea or coffee we were dependent on what we found in the Boer wagons. I remember drinking a cup of hot water and finding it most refreshing. Food was foraged. One section of our men found a sheep's carcase hanging up under a tree, slaughtered by the rebels before our shell changed the tenor of their day. Some had hardtack or army rations in their haversacks. Here and there they picked up enough to make up a meal, not especially plentiful, and very scrappy, but satisfying. Indeed, a most peculiar thing about the whole affair was the great amount of work we managed to do on a very small amount of food. The shadows of the evening were falling as we finished our meal, sent out the necessary picquets and prepared for rest.

That was not all. Death was in our camp, was with us in the hour of our victory. The Queenslanders had left us early and had ridden to Rooi Pan, a farmhouse across the veldt where the rebels used to gather. Some of the New South Wales Army Medical Corps remained with us, and in a Boer tent lay two of our wounded, Ptes. Macleod and Rose, and alongside them two wounded Boers. The former was hurt unto death; a shot had pierced both hips as he stood sideways to his slayer. The surgeon was suddenly called to his side, but aid was useless, and soon the breath had left the ashen lips, as the less sorely wounded man was softly conveyed from the tent of death. The regimental surgeon was the only Queenslander left when poor Macleod died, and the Canadians willingly discharged the last duties towards his body. A grave was dug, a New Testament was found, Canadians furnished the bearers who carried the stretcher and its melancholy load to the graveside, a party of our men under Sergt. Beatty formed the firing party, our bugler sounded the 'last post.' Major Bayly, the staff officer of the expedition, who was in command of our little force, read a few selections from that wonderful chapter of Corinthians, and then the earth shoveled upon him. A rough cross with his name and corps and the inscription, "Erected by his Queensland and Canadian comrades," was erected at the head of the grave. Less honored with solemn ceremony, I may add, was the grave of Pte. Jones of the Queenslanders, who was shot through the heart at an early stage of the attack. Two men who knew where the body lay were left behind at Rooi Pan next day, and they had to go out, dig a grave and bury there comrade by themselves.

As night fell sleep came. Greatcoats and blankets were with the wagons; a very few had rubber sheets. We abandoned the Boer tents and slept in the open, using such of the Boer bedding as we fancied. South African nights are likely to be cold, but our rest was sound. By the prison-hut two fires blazed all night, their light making it hopeless for the rebels to escape. Their numbers, in fact, were increased, for in the early hours a Kaffir runner with a letter for the rebel camp innocently walked into the guard, ignorant of the events of the day.

Cleaning House

Once or twice a year the good housewife has a thorough house cleaning. The house has been swept and dusted every day in the year, but the housewife knows that in spite of vigilance dust accumulates in cracks and corners, and is only to be removed by special effort.

It's the same way with the body. You look after it every day. You take all the ordinary precautions of cleanliness and health. Yet the body needs its special cleaning to rid it of the accumulations of waste and poisonous matter which invite disease. Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, taken regularly once or twice a year, would save many a sickness. It purifies the blood, strengthens the stomach, and cleanses the body of poisonous accumulations.

"Last spring I had a severe attack of pneumonia, which left me with a bad cough, and also left my lungs in a very bad condition," writes John M. Russell, Esq., of Brent, Cherokee Nat., Ind. Ter. "I had no appetite and was so weak I could scarcely walk. My breast was all sore with running sores. I got two bottles Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which I believe saved my life. I cannot express my gratitude to you. I am able now to do very good work."

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

To Say Good-bye.

St. Andrew's congregation will meet to-night in an informal gathering with Dr. R. W. Bell and Mrs. Bell, who leave in a few days for Toronto. Dr. Bell has been chairman of the Board of Managers of St. Andrew's church for a number of years. All members and adherents are invited.

Boy Wanted.

To learn bookbinding. Apply at the Times bindery.

A Peterborough Man.

Among the western Canadians killed at Modder River on Sunday was J. H. Somers, of the 5th Royal Canadian artillery. Mr. Somers is a former Peterborough boy. He worked at the Electric works for about three years and left town to join the artillery about three years ago. Many of the men at the works remember him well.

Men Wanted.

Wanted—few young men to travel—Hustlers—apply after five in evenings to C. B. LaBelle, City Hotel, Peterborough, Ont.

Mounted Infantry.

Major Edwards of the 57th Battalion is in Ottawa interviewing the Minister of Militia in regard to the formation of a company of Mounted Infantry to form part of the 57th Battalion. Capt. Geo. W. Bennett, of North Monaghan, first suggested the idea, and will probably be placed in command should a company be formed.

New Readers

We have just received a neat little book of new readings in Scotch and English for social gatherings. The selections are from the works of Mr. John Imrie, Toronto, and are up to date. For sale at the Times Bookstore.

The Appeal Entered.

Mr. Robert Stewart yesterday deposited $50 with his solicitors, Messrs. Dennistoun, Peck & Stevenson, with instructions to proceed at once to quash the conviction which was entered against him at the Police Court a few days ago for cruelty to animals. Town Solicitor Edwards will, therefore have another opportunity to distinguish himself in a corporation law suit.

Flag Raising.

They had a great time down at the Canadian General Electric works yesterday at eleven o'clock. There was a ceremonious hoisting of the British Ensign. When the flag broke out the enthusiastic crowd of loyal workmen cheered themselves hoarse, and good wishes loud and strong were uttered for the success of the British arms in South Africa.

Double Trading Stamps.

For the next few days double trading stamps will be given at the Times Bookstore. Our stock of fancy goods will be cleared out at cost to make room for Spring importations.

THE CHILDREN CRY FOR IT.

How the Non Arrival of the Times is Regarded in the Country.

Yesterday the Times received the following letter—

Lakefield, Feb. 20.

Sir,—Great complaints are being made to-day over the non-arrival of the Morning Times. I often wish you were here to get the blame. Some one will get hurt.

Yours truly,
M. Ray, Asst. P. M.

While it is gratifying to know that this great family journal is in such favor in Lakefield, it is at the same time annoying to us to hear that the delivery of the paper is irregular. The fact is, our circulation has been growing so rapidly that it is difficult to supply our readers as early as we would like. We may say to our Lakefield friends (and this will also apply to the town and country villages in the district where the Times is largely read), that we have completed arrangements that will, we think, ensure prompt and regular delivery of the papers to the post office in time for all early outgoing trains. Barring accidents, the Times should hereafter reach all outside places by early mail.

Band Concert To-Night.

The band concert which takes place in the Market Hall on Friday evening promises to be a big drawing card, and many new selections will be rendered.

Mr. Glidden has selected the following programme:

March, Sentinel (new)..........Signard
Overture, "The Winner"..........Mackie
Waltzes, "Jolly Fellows"..........Vollsted
Clarionette solo, "Eighth Air Varie" Breapsant
Mr. Charlton.
Grand Fantasia on "My Old Kentucky Home" introducing variations for Baritone, Cornets, B flat Clarionettes, Basses and Trombones, Piccolo, E. flat Clarionette and clogs—Grand Finale.
Mazurka, "La Ruse"..........Ganne
Fire Alarm (descriptive)..........Reeves
Calm and peaceful night—Choran—All asleep—Cry of fire—Gongs—Box 32—Horses rush out and gallop away—Engine at work—Fire out—Return home—Vocal chorus—Home again.
March, "Soldiers in the Park" Monoton
God Save the Queen.

Look out for It.

When the thaw comes, which is sure to be here in a few days at most, most of the new walks will once more be under water. The Murray street canal will probably be navigable, while Water street residents may be forced to use life preservers before venturing out. It is possible that the excursion, which was postponed on account of the frost, may take place when the thaw strikes us. The town engineer will probably act as pilot, although all that is necessary will be to follow the granolithic walks, which are, in most cases, well under water.

General Electric New Stock.

At the annual meeting of the Canadian General Electric Company held in Toronto, the stockholders sanctioned the issue of $300,000 in new stock available to stockholders at 125 at the rate of one new share to three old shares. The financial statement showed remarkable increases during the year. They were attributed to the wave of prosperity that is being experienced in all lines of business in all parts of the Dominion. The factories of the General Electric Company are working night and day supplying orders, but it is thought that with increased facilities that are being added the work in future can be turned out much more rapidly. The proceeds of the stock will be used in enlarging the works here.

Through the Veldts.

The storm yesterday left the roads almost impassable. A farmer who drove in from Chemong yesterday, said that the numerous kopjes in Smith were so badly drifted that teams were forced to go through the veldts to get around the drifts. He upset several times on his way to town.

The Peterborough Market.

Yesterday our genial friend, Mr. Chas. Fairbairn, of Bobcaygeon, in speaking of the market, told the Times that he had received two offers for his hogs, both received by mail the same day. One was from Lindsay, tendering him $5.75 per 100, and the other from Peterborough offering a trifle over $6. Mr. Fairbairn said he read the article in regard to the market by-law, which appeared in yesterday's Times, and thought it was a timely suggestion. A change of policy is needed if we are to revive our market.

Lost in the Snow.

There is a gentleman in town who in slippery weather, sprinkles sand on the sidewalks to keep the citizens from breaking their bones. He did not show up yesterday morning, with his benevolent pail of sand, and some nervous people think that he and the pail are snowed under. They say the Chief has chartered a 'bus and is now exploring the snowy wastes—not for the man—but for the pail, as it was borrowed from the Lime Juice Club.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

The Canadians in New York are playing great hockey and expect to keep it up for another month.

•• • ••

The St. Nicholas team of New York were billed to play McGill College in Montreal, last night.

•• • ••

The Colts will have to play the game of their life on Monday. Stratford's juniors are no laggards.

•• • ••

It is understood that the Granites of Toronto will bring six rinks down here some day next week. It is time they paid off old scores.

•• • ••

Campbellford and Peterborough Colts will play to-day for the ownership of the cup presented by Mr. Biggar. If our boys win the cup is theirs.

•• • ••

The Kingston Whig is very sore at the O.H.A., and throws the harpoon in the following smoke-up:—

"That the O.H.A. is run for the benefit of Toronto clubs is clearly seen by the decision of the executive ordering the Peterborough Colts and Upper Canada College to play off the junior tie to-night. Peterboroughs were the winners of the semi-final, but their win was simply stole from them."

Peterborough folk laugh at the above paragraph and say they don't want any Kingston sympathy, even if they needed same.

PERSONALS.

Mr. John Nugent returned from Toronto yesterday.

Mr. John Williams, of North Monaghan, is visiting friends in Mariposa.

Mrs. W. H. Robertson is spending a few days the guest of her mother, Mrs. Brandon, Fenelon Falls.

Mr. John A. Davies, bandsman, has secured a position with the C. G. E. Co., and reports for duty this morning.

We were pleased to see our old townsman, Mr. J. W. T. Fairweather, on our streets yesterday, looking bright and well.

Mr. J. D. Boyd, the efficient Superintendent of the Confederation Life Association, Toronto, is in town, the guest of Mr. Harry Rush.

We were pleased to have a call yesterday from our old friend Mr. Charles Fairbairn, ex-M.P., Bobcaygeon, who was accompanied by Mr. John O'Donnell, of the same place.

Annual Meeting of Band.

The annual meeting of the 57th Battalion Band was held last night. The reports of the secretary and treasurer showing that the band has just passed the most successful season in their experience. Bandmaster Glidden was elected manager of the band, and the following members as an advisory board:—Bandsmen Wm. Lech, Robt. Mein, F. J. Miller and John Butcher, with Messrs. J. A. Harper, secretary and Robt. Beach, treasurer, the latter re-elected.

Spare the Pavements.

The police wish it to be understood that persons will not be allowed to hammer or chop the pavement in removing the snow and ice. The pavements cost too much money to be so destroyed. Besides, they are presumably not as hard as they otherwise might be had the proper quantities been used in their creation. Mr. Hay thought that the horse that drags the snow plow would damage the walks, and Ald. Denne, we think it was, humorously suggested that rubber boots be purchased for the horse. We must treat these precious walks tenderly.

Where is our Loyalty?

Editor Morning Times.

The Peterborough people seem rather behind hand in showing their loyalty. They are able to raise the flag for every public holiday during the year, and yet do not seem patriotic enough to raise it when good news comes from Africa saying "that England has won a victory." One or two flags have been seen flying; but surely there are more than one or two men who are loyal to their Queen and country. Why aren't the streets lined with flags? Peterborough was once supposed to be a very loyal town, but now it seems to be rather in sympathy with the Boers. Belleville and Ashburnham was able to welcome the news of Kimberley's relief, by giving the schools a half holiday. What did the loyal Peterborough people do? Nothing; not even loyal enough to raise a few flags. They really ought to be proud of themselves.

ONE WHO IS NOT A BOER OR A BOER SYMPATHIZER.

Feb. 20, 1900.

The Indian Famine.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—The people of Peterborough have already had their attention called to the terrible famine in India. Were it not for the overshadowing effect of the South African War the Indian famine would be the central thought of the world. Since the famine was officially declared by Lord Curzon four months ago, a steady and rapid development from horror to horror has marked its course. The 30,000,000 people then included in the famine area have become 50,000,000. The 300,000 on test relief works have now swollen to 3,725,000 on permanent works. The thousands that four months ago were seeking relief were strong in body; the hundred thousands that are now rushing to the relief camps are skeleton men and women, whose last possession has been pawned, whose physical strength has become exhausted, and who as a last resort are seeking to escape from death by enduring the hard toil and exposure to heat and cold on a relief camp. Already the terrible suffering of childhood has assumed great proportions. Families are broken up and children scattered, either because abandoned or sold in the last extremity of human woe. Four months ago a living skeleton, or death from starvation was noted as an exception in some out-of-the-way place. It is no exception today. Living skeletons by the thousands are making their way, without food or water, to some camps of relief. The streams are dry, wells that have never failed in the memory of the people are without water, and there are deaths from lack of water as well as food. They may die on the way or find their salvation in the hard life of the relief camp, where in unaccustomed toil their naked bodies burn under the scorching sun by day and shiver unclothed through the chilly night.

But the famine has run but half its course. Four months remain before the July rain can bring any relief. The second official statement has been issued by the Indian Government, embodying the observation of Lord Curzon's tour through the famine area, and the alarm of the Government is manifest. Fifteen per cent. of the population of many districts, and 25 per cent. of some hill tribes are on the relief works. The Government is fearful lest one-half the population be on their hands before the famine is over. And when the expected rain does come, where are the farmers to get the seed, and how till the soil with their cattle dead? The problem is a terrible one, and it needs the sympathy of the world. Before the famine is over its horrors will stagger humanity, and help therefore cannot be too quickly or too generously rendered to this people in their woe.

IT PAYS TO GO TO The Best.

THE CANADA BUSINESS COLLEGE

CHATHAM, ONT.

Canada's greatest school of SHORTHAND and BUSINESS training, still holds a very strong lead over its contemporaries.

No better evidence of this claim need be offered than the following, which shows how widely this justly popular school is patronized.

117 Cities, Towns and Villages in Canada, United States and Newfoundland represented in the attendance during the year to date.

30 Counties in Ontario, six of the United States, together with five from Manitoba and Alberta, have sent their representatives. They came from the Atlantic on the East to the Pacific on the west. Distance proves no hindrance to those who are determined to attend the best.

The present is an excellent time of year to make a start. Pupils are admitted at any time. For catalogue, address.

GEN. CRONJE'S FORCE STILL AT BAY!

NO FURTHER TIDINGS FROM LORD ROBERTS

Mr. Balfour Announces in British the Commons That There Was Absolutely No News.

BRITISH WARSHIPS FOLLOW RUSSIAN CRUISER.

Lord Methuen Arrives at Kimberley and Will Act as Administrator of the District Extending Southward to the Orange River.

Pretoria, Wednesday, Feb. 21

The following official war bulletin has been issued here—"A report was received this morning of cannon firing west of Colesburg."

"At Petersburg cannon firing commenced at six in the morning. A big fight was expected to-day.

"Dewett telegraphed yesterday from Petersburg that all was quiet, except several cannon shots and small skirmishes. Yesterday evening the British stormed the federal positions as far as Schausler, but were driven back.

"A message from General Cronje is to the effect that his loss yesterday was 14 dead and wounded.

"Dewett's loss was nil. Commandant Fronoman report sthat from Feb. 15 to Feb. 20 he was almost surrounded by the British at the Modder River, when with a small number of men he broke through the river.

"On Sunday there was a heavy fight. The British are prepared to lay siege to the Boer laager, with fighting general, we were surrounded by 2,300 British, five miles from the chief laager. At night we cut our way through with the loss of seven dead and sixteen wounded. The loss of the British was heavy. Yesterday we cut our way through to reach Dewett, who wa sin the neighborhood. 58 prisoners formerly taken have been freed.

"It is reported that the British were continually attacking Koodoesrand yesterday with infantry and lancers, but that they were driven back."

Kimberley, Thursday, Feb. 22

Lord Methuen arrived here on Tuesday. He will act as administrator of the Kimberley district extending southward to the Orange River.

Col. Kesirwick will remain in command of the local forces. The issue of seige soup ceases to-day. There are sixty-four Boer prisoners here.

Chieveley, Thursday, Feb. 22

The main body of the Boers has fled. evidently with the object of stemming the advance of Lord Roberts.

Bombay, Feb. 23.

The Times of India announces that a large Russian cruiser has arrived at Bendar Abbas on the Straits of Ormus which connects the Persian gulf with the Arabian sea. The British third-class cruiser Pomona and the British gun boat Sphinix have proceeded thither.

London, Feb. 24.—4.15 a.m.

Mr. Balfour announced in the House of Commons at half past twelve this morning that no further news regarding Gen. Cronje had been received by the Government. He had sent to the War Office during the hour and he ascertained that nothing had come to hand there.

General Cronje therefore is presumably still unbeaten. No other construction is placed upon the three days silence of Lord Roberts, for as yet no one sees how it is humanly possible judging from the despatches of his situation Wednesday morning for him to rest so long.

ROBERTS' LIST OF KILLED.

London, Feb. 23.—The official list gives 146 men killed at Paardeberg Drift on Sunday, including 63 Highlanders and 18 Canadians.

HENDERSON DRIVES OFF BOERS.

Arundel, Feb. 22.—Colonel Henderson's squadron of the Inniskillings with two guns reconnoitered westward to Mostfontein farm on the direct road to Colesberg and Hanover. They got close to the Boers in the hills and fired on by the Boers. The British got their guns quickly into position and shelled the hills. Eventually the Boers were driven out. They retired northward, and came under fire of two other guns supported by a company of Australians near the British western post on Dragoon Hill. Col. Henderson proceeded to Mostfontein farm, which he now occupies. The British patrols from Hanover also came out that far. The Boers are not in great force. They have been persistently followed all day long, and have withdrawn a considerable distance northward.

KILLED AND CAPTURED.

London, Feb. 22.—An additional list of the casualties sustained by the British troops during the retreat from Rensberg on February 15 shows that 14 men were killed, and that 158 members of the Wiltshire and Worcestershire regiments are missing, the latter fact confirming the Boer reports that a number of prisoners had been captured by them.

COVERING THE RETREAT.

Colenso, Natal, Feb. 21, via Chieveley, Feb. 22.—The British now occupy Fort Wylie. While the naval brigade was bombarding Grobler's Kloof yesterday evening with the Boers' big creusot replying, a small party of Thorneycroft's Horse crossed the river, but were driven back by fire from the trenches.

The Boer guns are still shelling the relieving force from the hills south of Ladysmith, but the impression is spreading that they are merely covering the retreat of the entire Boer force.

WHITE BOMBARDS THE BOERS.

Hoofd Laager, Ladysmith, Feb. 21.—There was heavy fighting all Monday and Tuesday, and it has continued since early this morning. Our officers hope to dislodge the British from their position. Last night a body of British troops tried to cross the river, but were beaten back with heavy loss. Our loss was slight. Our positions are being bombarded at Ladysmith at a point where the Klip river passes through the hills. Our "Long Tom" is replying with good effect.

A CANADIAN HONORED.

Ottawa, Feb. 23.—Last evening the Early of Minto received a cable from Lord Roberts at Paardeberg, stating that "Ecclestone, Canadian Field Post-office, appointed lieutenant Imperial Army Postal Corps." Mr. Ecclestone was chief of the Canadian Postal Corps, which only reached Cape Town a few days ago on the Laurentian. With his new rank he will receive pay at the rate of $3.20 per day and will be entitled to all the pension and other privileges of an officer of the British army, of which he is now a permanent member. His residence will be in England after the war.

THE LION OF AFRICA.

London, Feb. 23.—As Gustavus Adolphus, of Sweden, earned the title "Lion of the North," so has Gen. Cronje, of the South Africa Republic, won the cognomen "Lion of the South." If the history of the world's land battles be searched from Marathon and Thermopylae to Lutzen and Pultowa, from Plevna and Sebastopol, to Omdurman and Elandslaagte, no record excelling the deed now being performed on the Modder can be found. The picture of Cronje at bay for five days in the bed of a river, his enmies to the north, south, east and west in overwhelming force, the merciless Kitchener showering shrapnel and lyddite upon his army from over forty great guns and bullets from a multitude of small ones at a range of 2,000 yards, but still refusing to surrender and declaring that he will fight to the death, shows that the Spartans are still on earth. Cronje on the Boer side, with White on the British, will be noted as the heroes of the Boer War of 1899-1900, and they have earned such comment by deeds which shine as brightly as any ever performed by mortal men.

It does not seem that the end can be long delayed. The Boer army, held as in a vice by Kitchener, while Roberts and French hold at arms length and defeat in detail those who attempt to bring succor, must inevitably capitulate or be annihilated. Cooped up up within an area of a square mile, the devoted band form a target upon which the best artillerymen in the world are exercising their skill with deadly results. They may try to cut their way through the British lines, but this would result in a worse fate than surrender and few would escape. But as the Boers have shown a preference so far to die rather than capitulate, it may be that they will select the forlorn hope and fall before the bullets and bayonets of the British infantry.

General Roberts has evidently a large enough force to guard against all possibility of escape or relief. He must have at least 50,000 infantry and 10,000 cavalry around the Boer laager. These he has probably divided, allotting one-half to Kitchener and himself directing the other half, which is engaged in warding off interference. General French is evidently taking a leading part in meeting and defeating the parties of Boers from Natal, who have been sent by Joubert to relieve his fellow-general. The Boers appear to be accomplishing their retirement from Natal slowly and are allowing valuable time to be wasted. So far only detached parties appear to have made any attempt to reinforce Cronje, and no large scheme of concentration has been carried out. It is likely that Roberts and Kitchener foresaw this and so arranged the affair as to allow them a wide margin for the capture of Cronje before any large force could be assembled to aid him. The Boers seem scarcely to grasp the danger of their situation if their slowness in acting is any criterion. have had nearly two weeks since the invasion of the Free State in which to concentrate another army in that Stae and do not appear to have succeeded despite their boasted mobility. Cronje who holds on waiting for assistance, is therefore leaning on a bruised reed and news of his collapse may arrive at any moment.

ENTHUSIASM OF THE COLONIAL TROOPS.

Lord Roberts' Creation of a Colonial Force Received With Great Satisfaction.

London, Feb. 23.—The last mails from South Africa brought a bountiful supply of dramatic accounts of the war. From Ladysmith, the Tugela, Modder River, Rensburg and Mafeking come thrilling episodes and deeds of daring that make England justly proud of the men who are fighting their battles on the veldt.

Moreover, in the many published columns there are many minute explanations by experienced war correspondents that help to take away the sting of recent reverses, though these writers do not hesitate to criticise bluntly when the occasion demands. For instance, the Cape Town correspondent of the Times scathingly rebukes the insular prejudice of many British officers.

"The news of Lord Roberts' decision to create an independent colonial division," he writes, "under the command of General Brabant, an experienced colonial soldier, and officered in the main by colonial officers has caused the greatest satisfaction everywhere in Cape Colony.

From the very first there had been frequent complaints from the English population in the colony that they had been set back and that not sufficient use had been made of their readiness to serve in the defence of their country. Colonial advice was, as a rule contemptuously neglected, and the offers made by prominent colonials to raise local forces met at first with the greatest indifference, almost with hostility. Trained by experience of many Kaffir war, the English borderer is in every way the equal of the Boer at his own game, and adds to the Boer's skill and watchfulness a dash and gallantry, which the latter rarely possesses.

WARBLED FOR THE FUND.

London, Feb. 23.—Madame Patti sang last evening for the war fund at Covent Garden, the scene of her former triumphs. The Prince of Wales and other members of the Royal family were present, together with an immense audience, including many of the most distinguished persons in England.

With Alvarez, she sang in a duet from Romeo and Juliette with undiminished sweetness and purity of tone. Johannes Wolff and Edward Lloyd took part in the concert, the gross receipts of which were £12,000.

ATTITUDE OF THE NATIONS.

New York, Feb. 23.—At the Southern Society dinner here last evening, Mr. Jno. Barrett, late Minister to Siam, said—"An important statement soon to be made in Congress will show that we have led the way in the attitude of nations in taking the strongest action possible for the preservation of the integrity of the Chinese Empire; that we have safeguarded our developing interests whether China remains intact or is divided, and that, while Great Britain and Japan have accepted without reservation America's recommendations, Russia, Germany, France and Italy have hesitated only on the letter of terms, and not on the principle involved. This means then that freedom of trade as first outlined in the old Tientsin treaties is guaranteed by all the powers without discriminating duties, freight rates, inland taxes, throughout all China."

THE CASE ADJOURNED.

Cape Town, Feb. 21.—The Supreme Court has adjourned the case of the seized steamship Mashona to March 2, in order to give the owners a chance to show the vessel had no intention of trading with the Boers.

TO INVESTIGATE THE CHARES.

Washington, Feb. 23.—Representative Wheeler, of Kentucky, yesterday introduced a resolution directing the Committee on Foreign Affirs to investigate the truth or falsity of the charges made by Charles E. Macrum, late Consul of the United States at Pretoria, that his official or personal mail was opened, read, suppressed or detained by the censor of the British Government at Durban, or that a telegram sent by him to the Department of State was delayed by the British censor for several weeks. The committee, by the provisions of the resolution shall also ascertain whether the British authorities are acquainted with the secret cipher or code used by the State Department. In order that the committee may properly carry out these instructions, it is authorised to send for persons and papers and to administer oaths to witnesses examined.

The resolution was referred to the Committee on Rules.

PTE. ANDERSON'S LETTER.

Private Archie Anderson, of "C" Company, formerly a student at Toronto University, in a letter to his parents from Belmont, under date of Jan. 17, says:—"Our company was on outpost duty last night, when one of the boys out of our tent shot himself in the foot. His name is Cole, and he comes from London.

"When our men go sick now they have to parade in heavy marching order This seems to be rather a ridiculous move, but when you see the difference made in the number of sick you would be surprised. Before the order came out we had one hundred and sixty-eight parade for treatment; the next day there were not thirty-five. A great number of the boys use the sick excuse for getting out of duty. The day before yesterday I had to shovel ten tons of soft coal of a flat car. One of the most interesting things I ever saw was at church service on Sunday last. Every part of the British Empire was represented, from Ireland to Hindoostan. It was an inspiring sight and gives one but a small idea of the greatness of the power of Britain."

GEN. KITCHENER'S RAILWAY CORPS.

A Valuable Corps of Railway Pioneers a Thousand Strong Being Formed.

London, Feb. 14.—H. Prevost-Battersby, who went out with Lord Roberts to represent the Morning oPat, writes: "Already the force of new management is felt. Lord Kitchener is reorganizing the transport, and his methods and standard are not those which have prevailed. As might have been expected of the man who broke the Dervish power in the Soudan by a line of rails, the railway stands first in Lord Kitchener's favor as a means of transport. An invaluable corps of railway pioneers a thousand strong, is being raised under the direction of Colonel Clapper. It it is almost entirely composed of Rand miners, who know the country, and the people and are inured to hard work.

THE BOER GOVERNMENT IS ALARMED.

Persistent Reports That Orange Free State Government is Being Removed.

Lorenzo, Marques, Delagoa Bay, Feb. 22.—The Transvaal Government is reported to be seriously alarmed at the defeat of the Boers at Kimberley, and the retreat of their famous general, Cronje. The newspapers are reticent, but the Standard and Diggers News claims that General Cronje's movement is beneficial, as it "increases the mobility of the burghers army, enabling it to conduct more effective operations on a carefully prepared plan."

There are persistent reports that the seat of Free State Government is being removed to Wynburg.

It is also said that six thousand burghers have been sent from Ladysmith to Bloemfontein.

BOTHA'S POCKET HANDKERCHIEF.

Chieveley Camp, Natal, Feb. 21.—The steady progress of the relief column is uninterrupted. The Boers on Tuesday were forced from their last position south of the Tugela, resulting in the evacuation of Colenso, which was promptly reoccupied by the Dublin Fusiliers, and Thorneycroft's Horse. A Transvaal flag was captured and also a handkerchief inscribed with General Botha's name. This is treasured as a great trophy.

The Boers heavily shelled Hlangwane Hill and Colenso on Wednesday, February 21, and the British advanced infantry was subjected to a severe musketry fire, but they had excellent cover, and the casualties were few.

The Boers had the railway running from Colenso to Bulwana.

The British continue to discover large quantities of ammunition. The Boers are well supplied with food, and a quantity of provisions were left behind.

GEN. CRONJE MAKING GALLANT RESISTANGE

Surrounded by British Infantry and Exposed to Deadly Fire, He Still Holds Out.

SAYS HE WILL DIE RATHER THAN SURRENDER.

The Boers Retire from their Trenches to the River in Order to Seek Cover, But no Cover Could Protect them from Such a Deadly Fire.

Paardeberg Drift, Orange Free State, Feb. 20.—As night fell, after the terrific fighting which lasted all day Sunday, there was a sudden cessation of fire. Both sides were thoroughly tired and glad to rest. The work of collecting the dead and wounded proceeded and the men slept where they fought the whole day.

The action was one of the most fearfully contested in the history of the war. The Boers were fighting solely for their lives, and the British determinedly harassed themm. The mounted infantry did good work, and the Highland Brigade fought steadily and sternly. The whole force behaved well.

Completely Closed In.

Sunday evening the cordon around the Boers was completely closed on every side in perfect silence. A few Boers came into camp during the night and confessed that they were sick of fighting and that Gen. Cronje was being urged to surrender.

General Cronje's force occupies the river bed.

All the animals and the men suffered terribly from thirst. It was impossible to transport water. A heavy thunderstorm in the afternoon, however, considerably relieved their sufferings.

Lord Kitchener was present with the force.

Gen. Macdonald was wounded in the foot, but not severely.

Our men marched splendidly to overtake the retreating enemy. Deserters say that a great number of Boers lost their horses. Trek oxen are daily seen wandering over the plain and many come into our lines.

Constructed Entrenchments.

Monday morning found the Boers in the same place. During the night they had constructed entrenchments around the laager which was threatened by Gen. Smith-Dorien and the brigade in which were the Canadians. The infantry rested after the terribly hard day's fighting on Sunday.

The mounted infantry and a battery of horse artillery started to observe the enemy who was holding a kopje, but while riding around the southern side of the kopje they received a heavy fusilade and were obliged to move further out. They sustained no casualties. This was attributed to bad Boer markmanship. Pushing on the detachment found that the kopje extended a considerable distance west, sloping gradually to the plain. They seized a good defensive position, which was garrisoned. They continued the movement and completely turned the Boers, whose left was held strongly by a farm house. This was vigorously shelled. The detachment returned to camp at nightfall, leaving a garrison on the ridge. Meanwhile a desultory bombardment of the Boer position was kept up and a good deal of rifle fire concentrated where the Essex were attempting to rush up the river.

Arrival of French and Roberts.

About mid-day the cry that Gen. French had arrived was passed down the ranks but his division operated out of sight of our force. When Lord Roberts arrived he addressed several regiments, and was vigorously cheered.

Early in the day General Cronje asked for a 24-hour armistice in order to bury his dead. Lord Kitchener refused, and a little later came another message with word to the effect that if the British were inhuman enough to refuse an armistice for the purpose of burying the dead. Gen. Cronje saw no other course but to surrender. Upon receipt of this message Lord Kitchener proceeded to the Boer laager in order to arrange the capitulation, but he was met by a messenger who announced that Gen. Cronje said that the whole thing was a great mistake, that Gen Cronje had not the slighest intention of surrendering, but would fight until he died.

Ordered a Bombardment.

Gen. Kitchener returned and ordered a bombardment of the Boer position. Three field batteries and a howitzer battery took position directly in front of the laager and began an accurate fire, the howitzers using lyddite shells freely. The Boers were seen retiring from the trenches to the river bed in order to seek cover, but no cover could protect them from such a deadly fire. The howitzers dropped lyddite shells with precision into the very bed of the river, and the trenches were soon filled with horrible fumes and green smoke. But the enemy held grimly on.

Again during the night deserters arrived. They were much frightened and shaken by their awful experience. They reported that they had water in abundance, but were able to draw only scanty supplies from their laager during the night.

To-day, Tuesday, was the third day of General Cronje's imprisonment and grim resistance. Early this morning the infantry engaged the enemy in the bed of the river, and drove him back a short distance.

Toiling Like Ants.

The morning sun disclosed the Boers toiling like ants on the entrenchments around their laager. A few shells were fired to prevent them from continuing the work, but the most of the day was quiet.

Gen. French's artillery was heard off to the east, presumably engaging the Boer reinforcements.

Every opportunity was given the Boers to surrender, but when towards afternoon there wa sno sign of any intentions, lord Roberts determined to crush once and for all Gen. Cronje's resistance. On the south bank of the river at a range of 2,000 yards were placed three field batteries and two naval twelve-pounders, and on the north bank, enfilading the whole river, one howitzer, three field batteries and three naval 4.7 guns.

A Wonderful Scene.

Then followed the most wonderful scene it was ever this correspondent's lot to witness. Once before in Thessaly, he had seen one hundred and ten guns in action, but never such a number of powerful guns concentrating their fire upon a spot about a mile square. The exploding lyddite shells raised great clouds of smoke, completely filling the bed of the river. The shrapnel burst on the edge of each bank except for a short space where the proximity of the British infantry made it dangerous. Our shells searched every bush and every ravine of the river bed. The enfilading guns must have done terrible execution. The roar was deafening, yet with a spirit of desperate madness the Boers would now and again attempt to snipe the naval guns which were firing at a range of 1,000 yards. The long line of three batteries belched their missiles while on each side lay two battalions of infantry, whose Maxims sounded petty beside the roaring of the big guns.

This despatch is being written in the middle of a sleeping camp. Not a sound disturbs the heavy slumbers of the tired soldiers. Down the river bed not a fire is seen, not a cry heard.

Tragic and Stern.

There is something tragic in the stern resistance which General Cronje is hopelessly offering. It is impossible not to admire his pluck, but all condemn the wickedness of uselessly sacrificing the lives of his brave followers.

BOERS ARE SURROUNDED.

London, Feb. 23.—General Lord Roberts' army has completely surrounded the retreating Boers at Koodoesrand drift, and Commandant Cronje, with his back to the wall, is making a splendid defence, which, however, the latest despatches indicate is a forlorn hope. The Boer force, which is estimated to number ,8000 men, are entrenched in the bed of the Modder River at a point where the stream makes a sharp bend They are also occupying the hills on the south bank. The British circle round this position was completed on Monday morning by General French's mounted troops, and the brave defenders have since been the target for a terrible fire from all sides.

CAUGHT IN A VICE.

London, Feb. 23.—Every hour is expected to bring news of General Cronje's surrender. On all sides wonder is expressed that the gallant yet ghastly battle at Paardeberg Drift has not yet ended in what is considered to be the inevitable. With fifty guns bearing upon the devoted band within the terribly short range of 2,000 yards, surrender or utter annihilation can be the only result, unless all reports of the strength of the Boer reinforcements be wrong. The critics canvass every untoward contingency that can affect Field Marshall Lord Roberts, and see nothing that can save General Cronje from the terrible vice in which he has been caught. Even an unexpectedly strong attack on Lord Roberts' lines of communication could scarcely, according to these experts, alter the result. Rumors were current this morning that the end of the struggle had actually come, but these emanated from information received by the Rothschilds, which they subsequently discovered to be utterly without foundation.

The severe losses incurred Sunday by Gen. Kelly-Kenny have produced some adverse criticisms, but it is pointed out that had he fought less fiercely he would have given the Boers the opportunity to entrench themselves and perhaps affect further flight to a more advantageous position.

Gen. Buller's progress towards Ladysmith is so slow that it scarcely appeals to public interest. General White appears to be still full of fight, and to be endeavoring to assist Gen. Buller by a vigorous bombardment.

BULLER'S CASUALTIES 120.

London, Feb. 23.—General Buller's casualties on Tuesday, Feb. 20, and Wednesday, Feb. 21, were: Killed, Captain Creulock and Lieutenants Keith-Falconer and Parry of the Somersetshire Light Infantry, and nine men, wounded, 6 officers and 97 men, missing, 5 men.

ENGLAND AND SPAIN.

Great Britain Indignant Over grave Charges.

AMMUNITION FOR SPAIN.

Shells Said to Have Been Furnished to Fight United States.

Ammunition Now Returned to Use Against Boers—Story of Overtures for Alliances Also Declared to Be Unfounded.

London, Feb. 22.—A special despatch from Madrid saying that Premier Silvela recently declared in the senate that previous to the war with the United States the British government consented to let Spain have 3,500 shells which were being manufactured for her at the Maxims factory at Placentia meets with vigorous denial in London.

Albert Vickers, head of the Vickers-Maxim firm, said—

"Senor Silvela lied. There is not a word of truth in the allegation that England helped Spain to fight the United States. In the first place, the factory at Placentia is a branch of our concern, built at the request of Spain because that country wanted ammunition of home manufacture. It is under the Spanish government's control and there never was a shell manufactured there for sale in England or in any country except Spain, where a law against the export of ammunition exists."

Shells not Returned to England.

Senor Silvela is further quoted as saying that Spain, not having used the shells, allowed them to be returned to the British government and that he did not consider the latter step a violation of neutrality. This transactions Mr. Vickers also denied.

Inquiries made at the foreign office show that no papers exist dealing with any such transaction. But Lord Salisbury took the matter up personally, instituting inquiries in the various departments with the view of issuing a denial, should it be proved that Senor Silvela has been correctly quoted. These inquiries of the premier resulted in an official statement being made to the effect that that the British government never entered into any such transaction and that if the Vickers-Maxim company undertook it the concern did so without the knowledge of the government.

No Overtures for Alliances.

It is officially and emphatically stated that Great Britain has never at any time made any diplomatic or other advances for an alliance with the United States or Germany. So far as this statement refers to the United States it is fully confirmed at the United States embassy, and hopes are expressed that the false report will some day die a natural death.

In consequence of Lord Rosebery's speech cabled references to such alliances continue to appear in the British newspapers, although the view is taken here that Lord Rosebery referred to Joseph Chamberlain's alliance speech rather than to any secret negotiations, as his words were, "public overtures last December."

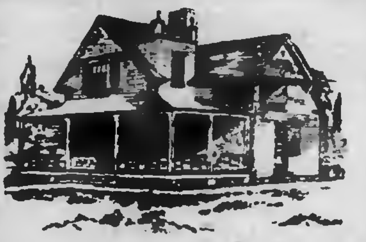
A $1000 COTTAGE

This Design could be Modified for a Working Man's House, Hotel Annex, Gate Lodge, or a small Club House, for Golf, Tennis etc.

"Copyright 1899 by Charles Willard Leighton, Architect, N. Y. City."

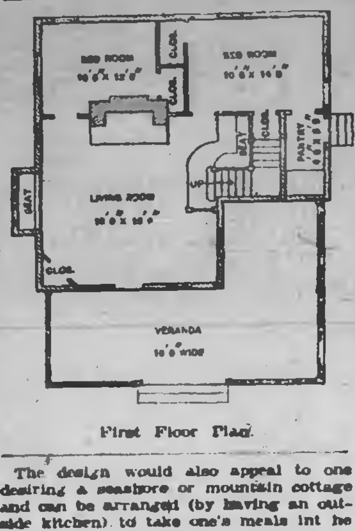
This is the third in the series of ten illustrated architectural articles running in our Saturday and Weekly edition, prepared especially by the well known architect, Mr. Charles Willard Leighton for the Times.

While there are many crying evils in the combination formed recently in manufacturing industries in this country, yet there are many benefits to the laboring class in such centralization of capital. One of the best features of combining large manufacturing industries, which perhaps has not been noted by economists, is the fact that where a few plants in large cities in one particular line of manufacturing are combined, generally to save taxes or large rents, one or more of them, or sometimes all, are closed up and a piece of property taken in a nearby suburb of a large city and good light and pure air for the working-man are obtained, the land being given for the purpose of booming the place. Railroad facilities in these times enables the shipment of goods at as low rates as could be obtained from the city itself direct. This necessitates in almost all cases some provision for the working-man; not only to save his time in travel but to keep him under the good influences of suburban towns and save his health from the unsanitary condition of crowded tenements of the large cities. This has created a demand for working-man's cottages and the architect of the modern low cost house has recently conceived many pleasing effects in such buildings where he has been given freer rein by the low cost of the land; and the home influences brought out in the working-man by the inhabiting of such a dwelling has been educated in itself and a lifting up to him; where his few crowded rooms in the unhealthy tenement of the city would have produced discomfort and discontent.



Perspective.

The design accompanying this article presents an exterior view which would be solicitation in itself,—an influence to draw the high grade working-man from the city to country employment. The floor plan shows an arrangement for a Gate Lodge. The Bed Room on the first floor marked 10 x 12 foot could, however, be used for a kitchen and a door broken through into the Bed Room marked 10 x 14 foot which would be used as a Dining Room. Upstairs two more rooms could be finished off and also a Bath Room. Though the cost of the house is $1,000 as shown, if twenty or thirty of them were built at one time, the arrangement for the kitchen, the plumbing for the bath room and the finishing off of a couple of rooms on the second story, would not materially alter the cost of the house as they could be built in quantities, (reversing every other one or changing the exterior features so as to escape a monotony of duplication) for a good deal less than $1,000 each.



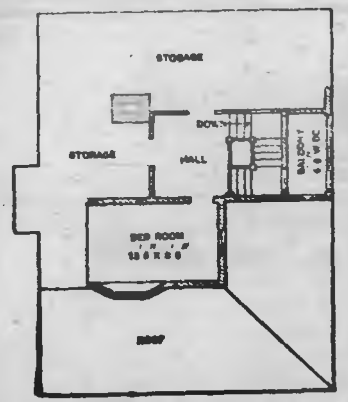
First Floor Plan.

The design would also appeal to one desiring a seashore or mountain cottage and can be arranged (by having an outside kitchen) to take one's meals in the house if no large hotel was nearby. It would also make a very tasty Golf House or a small Club House of any kind. The rooms upstairs would be used by the party taking care of same and the ones marked "Bed Rooms" down stairs, could be used for card room and dressing room with lockers built in the wall space. It has a large open fire place of rough field stone in the living or reception room with an exquisitively designed staircase to the second story therefrom. Then the reception hall has a pleasing outlook from its bay window with an artistic seat planned in same.

The veranda could be extended around the other side of the house if desired if the view is best from this point or the design could be built by just simply reversing to obtain this desideratum. A technical description of the design is given as follows—

General Dimensions—Extreme width, 32 ft. 6 ins.; depth, including veranda 39 ft.

Heights of Stories—First story, 10 ft.; second story, 8 ft. 6 ins. Exterior Materials—Foundation, posts; all walls and roofs, shingles. Interior Finish — No plaster. Partitions are constructed of, and bed rooms ceiled with N. C. pine ceiling boards; in balance of house, rafters and joists are exposed, planed smooth and varnished. Yellow pine stairs. Rough field stone chimney, fireplace and mantel.



Second Floor Plan.

Colors—All wall shingles are left natural, but finished with preservative. Roof, stained green moss. All trim, veranda floor, rail, etc., buff. Sashes, white.

Accomodations—The rooms and their sizes, closets, etc., are shown by the floor plans. Balcony in second story opens off of stair-case landing. The stair-case is broad and has an attractive seat in angle on first story. Box seat in living room opposite staircase, with fancy grille work in arch. This cottage has abundant closet room, large pantry and extensive veranda. Cost—$1,000. The estimate is based on New York prices for materials and labor. In many sections of the country the cost should be less.

A CONFESSION BY LEMIEUX.

He Turns Queen's Evidence and Makes Damning Charges Against Directors.

Montreal, Feb. 23.—The evidence of Ferdinand Lemieux, late accountant of the defunct Banque Ville Marie, which was taken in secret before Judge Choquet at the recent sittings, has been given to the press. It shows that Lemieux has turned Queen's evidence.

He charges that the directors as far back as 1897 knew the bank to be insolvent, and charged that the directors deliberately set to work to open as many branches and receive as much of the people's money as possible, knowing the bank to be insolvent; that they issued instructions to the manager of each branch to receive as many deposits as possible, and to pay as little discount as he could.

Many of these branches were opened since the directors knew the bank to be insolvent, he claims, the object being to get funds to pay dividends to shareholders.

He also charges that the false statements issued were prepared on instructions from the directors for the purpose of deceiving the Government and the public. He also charges the directors with speculating in stocks on margins through the firm of W. Weir & Sons, and keeping the full value of the stocks so speculated in on the books of the bank as assets.

This evidence, it is stated, was taken by Judge Choquet in person, with no lawyers present either in the interests of Lemieux, the directors or the crown.

RUMORS OF GERMAN INTERVENTION.

Action to Be So Timed as to End the War Within Sixty Days

Washington, Feb. 21.—For the past few days a report has been in circulation here that Germany intends to intervene between the British and the Boers. Part of the story was that Emperor William had been sounded by Dr. Leyds, the Transvaal's agent in Europe, on the proposition that Germany assert suzerainty or absolute control over the South African Republic's and demand of Great Britain that the war end. It was said also in connection with the report that Germany's action would be so timed that the war would be brought to a conclusion within sixty days. The Times reporter was told that the Government here had information that Germany intended to intervene. Secretary Hay was asked if this were so, and he said that the Government had no such information.

The Kingston Whig is very sore at the O.H.A., and throws the harpoon in the following smoke-up:—

"That the O.H.A. is run for the benefit of Toronto clubs is clearly seen by the decision of the executive ordering the Peterborough Colts and Upper Canada College to play off the junior tie to-night. Peterboroughs were the winners of the semi-final, but their win was simply stole from them."

Peterborough folk laugh at the above paragraph and say they don't want any Kingston sympathy, even if they needed some.

FILIPINO WAR RESULTS REVIEWED.

RESUME OF THE AMERICAN TROUBLE COMPARED WITH BOER STRUGGLE

The Filipinos Are a Vanishing Foe Whose Whereabouts Have Been Problematical.

While Englishmen are fighting in the Transvaal, 6,000 miles from their country, and army of Americans also 6,000 miles away from their nearest coast line are continuing war against the Filipinos. Both wars present the immense difficulties of transport and of fighting an enemy in his own country. There the comparison ends.

Probably every child in England can tell where the Boer army is, and where Kruger, Joubert and Cronje are. Aguinaldo is the Filipino President, and Tito is his chief general, but no American knows where Aguinaldo and Tito are; the War Office in Washington does not know, and General Otis is vainly trying to find out.

The Filipino army is equally vague. Fifty-seven thousand American soldiers are chasing it in every direction. Its fleeing remnants are pursued 100 miles north of Manila, and then a rebel contingent appears 10 miles south of Manila in Cavite province.

The Boers, on the other hand, stand firmly, and their stubbornness has more than once checked the advance of the British forces. The Filipinos are just the other way. They do not check the Americans. They baffle them. The American marches through and around them, finding nothing, and then when he goes into camp they turn up and pot his sentries.

The Filipino War Begins

For a year the Filipino struggle has continued. It began on the night of February 5, 1899. Admiral Dewey brought Aguinaldo from Hong Kong on his memorable entry into Manila Bay on May 1, 1898, and the American accepted the help of the natives until the Spaniards surrendered the city on August 13 of the same year. Aguinaldo and his followers claimed a large share of this victory, and were hotly indignant when the Americans not only forbade looting, but refused to allow a single Filipino soldier to enter the town.

Aguinaldo had 50,000 men, the Americans then 15,000. They elected a congress, set up civil government, ordered guns from Hong Kong, and improved the organization of the army. Still the Americans did nothing, just as the Transvaal was allowed to arm with scarcely a protest.

Later, Filipino and American outposts came in contact; on the night of February 5 a native fired into the camp of the Nebraska regiment, and the war opened. That very night the Americans drove the Filipinos from their advanced positions.

Treaty With Spain.

Then the weary business of pacifying Luzon began in earnest. At first the Filipinos fought well. Their trenches and bomb-proofs were models of engineering skill. They resisted stubbornly, and withstood everything but the bayonet. Driven from one position, they fell back to another. The Americans, by fast and gallant work, cleared a zone around Manila until their outposts were forty miles from their centre.

In November, General Otis with two-thirds (some 66,000) of the total army of the United States under his command, resumed operations. He sent a brigade by sea north to Lingayen, and while this brigade marched south another, starting from Manila, marched north. They came together at Tarlac, which was then Aguinaldo's capital. Resistance was slight, and Tarlac fell.

The Fall of Tarlac.

Aguinaldo fled, and part of the Congress was captured. Most interesting of all, Mrs. Aguinaldo and her latest offspring, George Washington Aguinaldo, were taken by the Americans.

With the fall of Tarlac all organized opposition to the Americans ended. The insurgents scattered, but in small bands continued guerilla warfare. Some, disguised as "Amigos" (friendlies) sifted through the American lines, shot mules in the pack trains, and made life miserable for the rear guard. Aguinaldo retired to Boyanagbong, in the northern part of the island, but was soon dislodged by a flying column, and fled to the mountains. His present whereabouts are unknown.

A Funny Incident.

The most unique and bloodless engagement of the campaign was recently recorded. Captain Crawford, with a scouting party of fifty men near Trinidad, a native village, located a body of 800 Filipino soldier. From Trinidad, passing through the native camp, was a telegraph wire. He attached an instrument, and after some calling, received an answer from some one in the Filipino lines. Craword asked for the commanding officer. The answer was that he was present.

"Who are you?" asked the Filipino operator, in Spanish.

"This is the headquarters of General Macarthur's division," began the unblushing Crawford. "We have you completely surrounded. I urge your immediate surrender to avoid further bloodshed. You cannot possibly escape."

Finally they enquired what terms would be allowed.

"Unconditional surrender," said Crawford. "There must be no parleying. My men will move in twenty minutes."

There was another interval of five minutes, but finally came the message, "We accept your terms."

"I will send Captain Crawford with fifty men to receive your surrender," was the next message from the supposed Macarthur, and the American instrument was detached.

Crawford and his gallant fifty then marched into the Filipino camp, where, in addition to the armed natives were also seventy-five Spanish prisoners. No one escaped, and the casualties on both sides were nil.

Lieut. Gilmore's Fate.

A less pleasant experience was that of Lieutenant Gilmore and sixteen men of the United States Navy, who nearly a year ago, while going to the relief of some Spanish prisoners at Balar, were captured. At first they were treated well, but early in December, when the Filipino army began to disintergrate, General Tito found he could not spare a guard for them and ordered them to be shot. The captain of their guard, however, was more merciful, and turned them loose in the jungle, but without giving them arms or food.

The first night Gilmore built a little fort of stone, and the sentries, armed with the same material, kept the savages at bay. The next day they found a river and built a raft, and for some days, with great hardship, worked their way towards the sea. When nearly exhausted, and about to give up, they were rescued by a small flying column which had been sent out to search for them.

The Americans fought the first part of the Philippine war chiefly with volunteers, but by this time they have nearly all been replaced. Officers and men were social equals at home, and it was not always easy to change the adjustment. On the whole, however, they obeyed well, and the only order they ever ignored was one to halt. Once started with the enemy in retreat the volunteers did not want to stop.

When Will it End?

When will the Philippine war end? General Otis reports he has the situation "well in hand." Aguinaldo once captured, the insurrection would probably end, but no one knows where Aguinaldo is. Several expeditions sent to capture him have failed. It is the opinion of some officers that the fighting may drag on for years, and will end, as the wars with the Indians ended, in the Filipinos becoming "good," otherwise dead.

All the fighting thus far has been in Luzon, the largest island of the Philippine group. In the remainder of the archipelao American authority has been established, in some cases directly and in others by procuring the allegiance of local sultans such as rule in the southern islands. Uncle Sam's year's work in his first great colony has been by no means fruitful.

Aggravating the Offense.

"You are charged, young man," the magistrate said, not unkindly, "with scaring the complaining witness nearly out of his senses by putting him through some mock ceremony of initiation. I can make allowance for exuberance of spirits among college students, but sometimes this exuberance is carried too far."

"It was this way, your honor," exclaimed the youth who appeared to be the spokesman—"we were out for a little lark, and we caught a jay."

"The fine will be $2 and costs each," said his honor, his face hardening.—Chicago Tribune.

Some Ready Made Law.

Bourke Cockran studied law under Judge Theodore L. Dwight. One day the professor asked a question which seemed easy, but was really difficult. With his magnificent voice Cockran answered the best he could, adding as a saving clause, "Such, I take it, is the common law."

The good old doctor gleamed benignantly through his spectacles. "That would be all right, sir, if you had made it uncommon law."—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

THE FIGHT ON HLANGWANA.

New York, Feb. 22.—London is stirred to the depths by war rumors, according to cables to the morning papers, and is anxiously awaiting details from South Africa, the battles which it is known Lord Roberts has been engaged in. That the fighting has been serious all know from the names of officers sent in who have been killed or wounded.

Of the severe wounding of General Macdonald. The Herald's correspondent says that this news had an effect which few people outside of England can fully guage. Hector Macdonald to the multitude is the man of war. The public have surrounded him with a halo of heroism. They consider him lion-hearted and invincible, and, above all, one of their own body, for Macdonald is a self-made man.

When the Boers wounded "Fighting Mac," they hurt the British public keenly.

[illegible] FLAWS SOMEWHERE.

It is estimated that the income of John D. Rockfeller for the year 1900, from the Standard Oil Company, will amount to [illegible]. Andrew Carnegie, who is reported to have said that Rockfeller is the richest man in the world, will, it is supposed, have an income this year, from the big steel trust, of $24,500,000. Both these men began with comparatively nothing, and both are esteemed as good men for their great charity, and their continued interest in the Christian religion. Yet they have piled up fortunes so colossal that their incomes are estimated at the immense figures already quoted. In a country that professes to confer liberty and equality upon its people, and especially in a young country that boasts a disregard for those established usages that guard the hereditary rich in the old world, would it not be reasonable that the United States Government should order an enquiry into the methods by which these colossal fortunes were amassed, and the conditions that made, or that now make, such results possible.

In this connection, it is worth noting that Rockefeller and Carnagie have not the fortunes that their incomes seem to suggest, but that both derive an unknown but immense sum from the advantages that they are permitted to take of the necessities of the great bulk of the people. It is this that should justify investigation.

WHAT WILL GREAT BRITAIN GAIN BY THE WAR?

The relief of Kimberley has naturally produced a general feeling of elation throughout the British Empire. Even the modest but considerable minority who do not profess to be military critics feel that the accomplishment of a movement which from the garrison of Kimberley and also the force devoted to its relief, for agressive action against the Boers, must be an important step towards the ultimate complete victory of British arms. That this ultimate victory will cost Great Britain heavily is already only too apparent. There have been over sixteen hundred officers and men killed, over five thousand wounded, nearly three thousand missing, to say nothing of the millions of dollars spent. Some people may be asking themselves, "Is the game worth the candle? What will Great Britain have to show in return for all this expenditure of blood and treasure? A few hundreds of square miles of rock and sand! Sovereign control of a few diamond mines, owned by English and American speculators!" If that were what England is fighting for, the game indeed would not be worth the candle. But the Empire is fighting for more than these. It is fighting, first of all, in defence of its own rights, its own honour, and its own prestige. It is fighting for those principles of justice and liberty which do and must prevail within the war is calculated to have a sobering effect upon the nation and for some time we may hope to see Jingoism finding less exuberant expression.

Not the least valuable result of the war will be the discovery, throughout the Empire, are the friends and who the foes of British unity. In this Canada of ours the war has revealed the existence of a unanimity of loyal sentiment which has never before found general expression. Here and there we have found a Canadian who doubted the propriety of Canada taking part in the wars of the empire; a Canadian who thought the time of Great Britain's need an opportune time to talk of Canada's future as something distinct and altogether separate from the future of the Empire. But these have only served to throw into splendid relief the devoted loyalty of the people as a whole, without distinction of race or creed. A united British Empire is the greatest civilizing and progressive force that the world can have, and the war has made it evident that Canada will not be the first British colony to surrender its rights and privileges or to abandon its responsibilities in this connection. sphere of British influence. There can be no doubt about the result of the conflict. Great Britain will emerge from it stronger than ever. She will have shown the continental powers that she is ready as ever to defend her honour and her rights, and to assist the oppressed.

She will have developed unsuspected military resources. She will have learned valuable military lessons from a despised foe. She will have learnt that she will have shown the world that for defence the British Empire is one and indivisible. She will have learnt much about her own weakness and her own strength. The

A PROSPEROUS YEAR.

Elsewhere will be found the financial statement of the North American Life Assurance Company, which was submitted at the annual meeting held on January 30th. The statement must furnish interesting reading for the many friends of the Company throughout Eastern Ontario, as well as throughout the whole country.

The total cash received for premiums amounted to $744,365.56, while the income from investments was $221,152.32, making a total of $965,522.38. The disbursements during the year amounted to $303,081.50 in death claims, and $231,182.32 in other payments making a total of $534,263.82. Adding the net assets to the receipts, and deducting the payments, there is a balance of assets amounting to $3,236,710.21. The assets are made up of mortgages, debentures, stocks and bonds, real estate, loans on policies and cash on hand, and are all gilt-edge securities. After deducting the total liabilities from the total assets, there remains a substantial balance amounting to $524,413.01.

The North American is deservedly popular, and has attained a very high place in the regard of the people, who look upon it as one of our leading financial institutions. To the capable management of Mr. Wm. McCabe, the Managing Director, assisted by Mr. L. Goldman, the efficient and untiring Secretary, is due the splendid position which the North American has attained. We predict for the Company a career of even increased prosperity in the future.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

In Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Zambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvellous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and heralded to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that to-day they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain, but magnificent edifices of the most modern type, beautiful botanical gardens, and the public improvements are evidences of the wonderful advance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial centre, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenue of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals lend an air of peace and tranquility, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustable veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders" whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest manifested in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before thought of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Africander whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman—born in the Cape Colony, having traveled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Zambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience, in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work—will present South Africa as it is to-day, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collection of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this county. Portfolios distibuted by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

Short Story of the Day

MR. ODDIE'S COURTSHIP.

He Was a Model Bachelor, but His Love-making Was Far From Conventional.

By Sheila E. Braine.

Mr. Markham Oddie was a model lodger, an old bachelor and a heart whole man—that is to say, he was all three until the day, considerably past his fortieth birthday, that a special fate took him in hand and brought him face to face with the younger of two ladies who had recently come to live in one of the houses opposite.

They were evidently mother and daughter. Both were comely, and the last named of the two had one of the sweetest faces it had ever been Mr. Oddie's luck to behold. She happened to drop a small parcel while walking along their mutual road, and he hurried after her with it. The smile with which she received it went straight through Mr. Oddie's somewhat antiquated waistcoat.

All the evening he thought of that smile. When he went to bed, he endeavored, with the aid of three candles, to get an impartial view of that region on the top of his head where the hair ought to have been, but now, alas, was not. That bald spot had not troubled him much up to that time. Now he regarded it with mistrust.

Mr. Oddie had led an aminable, punctual uneventful existence, going to and returning from the city every week day with regularity and despatch—the kind of person who is never asked for his season's ticket. He was comfortably off and had no one dependent upon him. The few relatives he possessed lived in the shires.

Mr. Oddie had remained a bachelor all these years possibly because nobody had set to work to marry him. It was not that he objected to women. On the contrary, he admired the fair sex, as a whole, quite unreservedly. But he had never given his heart to any one particular woman, and his landlady looked upon him as a fixture.

The returning of that apparently innocent looking parcel marked an epoch. Life was never the same again to the little old bachelor. He had not watched Miss Hexham's gentle face and well developed but graceful figure for ten days before he became convinced that it was not good for a corn dealer to live alone.

"A man wanted softening influences about him"—here he hurled a piece of fried ham to the cat—"he needed a gentle hand to guide and restrain him." Mr. Oddie at this point discovered that he had forgotten to wind up his watch the night before.

The truth was he was in love and with a young woman with whom he had never exchanged a syllable. He learned her name from his landlady, an austere person, whose mind was set upon a curious form of religion and who did not take much thought about frivolous worldly matters.

Questioned discreetly by her lodger, this worthy but depressing person could tell him little regarding the two ladies who were now the objects of such tender interest to him. They were a Mrs. and Miss Hexham, so she had heard, and Mrs. Hexham was either deaf or dumb, or it might be both, for her daughter talked on her fingers to her, and she answered back in the same way.

Mr. Oddie's courtship was a very decurous affair. In Spain, despite his years, he would doubtless have adopted the role of an "iron eater," as the youth who goes courting under his ladylove's balcony is styled.

But in sober, unromantic England the suitor does not eat iron or sernade the queen of his heart on the guitar. He has to be properly introduced, and the little corn dealer, knowing this respective custom, would have given anything for an introduction which would have allowed him to call and establish friendly relations.

The months passed, and still he could not get that thin but necessary end of the wedge in. The mother and daughter seemed to have very few friends and never went out, probably on account of Mrs. Hexham's affliction. It was hard upon the daughter, Mr. Oddie thought, but he admired her all the more for her self sacrifice.

Miss Hexham became aware of his devotion, of that Mr. Oddie was convinced. When they met—and he took care that they did meet pretty often—he ventured to raise his hat, and smiles were exchanged. But there the affair halted, to the poor little man's frequent despair. He could not get no "forrader."

Once, when he attempted to speak, Miss Hexham turned the color of a red rose and promptly hurried away.

"I have never been properly introduced, that is why," was Mr. Oddie's anguished reflection. "She must have been exquisitely brought up, the very pink of propriety."

"Something will have to be done!" cried the poor man desperately on the day that he went to the city without a tie, and an unfeeling acquaintance jeered at him and enquired if his liver was out of order. His liver! Perish the thought! It was his heart.

He declared at length that, like Hezekiah, he would ask for a sign from heaven. He would send the object of his adoration a bouquet, an anonymous bouquet of the choicest. She would surely guess from whom it came. If she placed it in the window, he would write to Mrs. Hexham, explaining himself and his intentions and request permission to call.

Mr. Oddie took a holiday the day the bouquet was sent off from Covent Garden. To sit still in his office was a thing impossible. He went for a long walk, but where his neat little legs took him he was never able to say.

The next day the agony increased. There was no sign. Mr. Oddie fell plump into the depths of despair and was convinced that he had offended his ladylove. He had not been properly introduced. The phrase became a perfect nightmare to him.

But the second day there was the bouquet in the window in all its glory, and, moreover, Miss Hexham was bending over it, inhaling its perfume. She was a beautiful woman, not too young for a man—ahem—in his prime. The wonder was that such a treasure had not been snapped up before.

Markham Oddie wrote to Mrs. Hexham. It took him hours and hours to compose the letter, and it was the most deliciously old fashioned epistle ever penned in a practical century. Two whole days elapsed before a little note came in reply:

"Mrs. Hexham presents her compliments to Mr. Markham Oddie and would be pleased to see him if he could make it convenient to call this evening between 8 and 9 o'clock."

The note was a formal one, but when the agitated little old bachelor was shown into the sitting room at Holmwood Mrs. Hexham, who was alone, received him with a very kindly smile. Her eyes looked as if she had been crying.

"Please take a seat," she said. "It has been very close all day, has it not?"

"Terribly," answered the visitor. "Do you feel the heat much?"

"Yes, I am afraid I do," was the reply, and Mr. Oddie suddenly recollected that his future mother-in-law was said to be deaf and dumb. This lady was certainly neither.

"My daughter," said Mrs. Hexham after a pause, "desired me to tell you how very, very grateful she is to you for your letter and the flowers. She has gone away for a short time to stay with friends. She—she thought it best."

Mr. Oddie sat there, unable to utter a word. "She had gone away because she thought it best." That meant that there was no hope for him.

Mrs. Hexham's eyes filled with tears as she looked at him. "Oh," she cried, "I am so sorry—so very sorry! You are such a good, kind hearted man, I am sure. Of course you did not know or you would not have thought of it."

"Thought of what?" asked Mr. Oddie, heavily.

"Of marrying my poor Agatha. You did not know that she is deaf and dumb?"

Mr. Oddie stared at the speaker in blank amazement. It was fully a minute before he grasped the significance of what she was saying. It was the daughter, not the mother, who was "afflicted," as Mrs. Roper would have phrased it. He was silent, and Mrs. Hexham continued:

"My poor girl is very sensitive, and your kindness went to her heart, I can assure you."

Mr. Oddie pulled himself together and rose to his feet. At this moment there was something almost noble about his rather tubby little figure.

"Madam," he said firmly, "your daughter is an angel, and I love her. Will you have the goodness to give me her address—that is, if you will sanction my asking her to do me the honor to be my wife?"

"It seems rather unconventional," she said, "but it is not exactly an ordinary case, is it? And I am sure you are a good man. Mr. Sedley, the vicar, was talking about you only the other day and saying how charitable you were. Agatha has the sweetest disposition, and she is so quick you hardly realize that she is not like other people. Indeed, I think you would be very happy together."

"I think we three would be very happy together," answered Mr. Oddie, emphasizing the "three." He took the widow's hand and kissed it with old fashioned gallantry.

It is unnecessary to mention at what unearthly hour Mr. Oddie required his breakfast the next morning or to state that he hardly ate a mouthful of it.

In the afternoon of the same day Mrs. Hexham might have been seen reading a telegram with a beaming face. It was not a long one, for it contained only 5 words, "Love from Agatha and Markham."—Sketch.

FAIR MILLBROOK.

The Red Cross entertainment held in the Town Hall on Thursday and Friday evenings, February 15 and 16, was the most successful event ever held here. The commodious hall was filled beyond standing room long before the curtain was raised. The elaborate patriotic play "Temple of Fame," which was selected by Mrs. Rev. W. C. Allen and given in such a clever and creditable manner by 60 of our local talent, that we can not find words to describe the gratitude we owe to those who took part, and especially those who supervised the programme for this noble and charitable work. The following are the names and characters represented in the play. The costumes were well selected being principally satin trimmed suitably.

Miss Burnham, representing fair Canada; costume was white satin trimmed with maple leaves the beaver and a silk flag.

Accompanists.

On Friday evening Messrs. Col. John Hughes and Mayor H. A. Ward came out and ably officiated in presenting the Fenian Raid medals and delivering a stirring and patriotic address. Mrs. (Dr.) H. A. Turner, Miss Hughes, Mrs. A. A. Smith and Mrs. C. H. Winslow also assisted in presenting the medals to the old Veterans who so loyally defended their country during the Fenian invasion.

All those who attended the entertainment took away pleasing remembrances of the brilliant manner in which our citizens selected the programme, and wished for a speedy return of our noble sons, so that they may again have the pleasure of attending another such successful gathering if they were allowed space on the roof. Those who took part in the play have been the recipients of numbers of invitations from our sister villages to repeat the performance, and also from Port Hope offering to give munificent sums for their services towards swelling the patriotic fund.

The entertainment was a credit to our town and a red letter mark for our district.

PERSONALS.

We noticed Mr. and Mrs. (Col) McLean of Port Hope in town Tuesday having come out to attend the funeral of Mrs. Geo. Fowler.

Mr. Wm. Fair left on the evening train Wednesday for Peterborough, to take in the excursion to Ottawa.

Springtime

Is the sweetest season in human life, as it is in Nature generally. It is the time of promise. As the young girl draws near to that mysterious line "Where womanhood and girlhood meet," her whole destiny is in a measure being determined. How often the sweet young girl, under the influence of the change, withers and droops like some blighted bud. Nature generally needs some little help at this critical period, and this help in its best form is contained in Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, and gives the vigor of perfect health to the womanly organs. It contains no alcohol, neither opium, cocaine, nor other narcotic.

Miss Emma Lee, of Williford, Sharp Co., Ark., writes: "I was suffering severely and tried several doctors' remedies, but received only very little relief; therefore, I feel it my duty to write and let other sufferers know what your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets,' have done for me. I took eight bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' six vials of the Pellets,' also one bottle of your 'Compound Extract of Smart-Weed.' As soon as I had taken the first bottle I could see that the medicine was helping me. I had disease of internal organs with bronchitis and catarrh. I also used the local treatment you suggested."

The sluggish liver can be cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

THE BEAUTY PATCH.

A RAILWAY COMEDY

(By Richard O'Monroy.)

The Saint-Lazaree station is a gay station in the heart of the city, a stone's throw from the opera and the boulevard, five minutes from the Champs Elysees, 20 minutes from the Bois de Boulogne. In the waiting room, the Hall of the Lost Footsteps, lined up before the booking offices or seeking quem devorent, there are always a lot of pretty girls with extravagantly yellow hair crowned by marvelous hats. They walk down the Rue d'Amsterdam, their noses in the air, striking the echoing curbstones with their little high heels and generally carrying small leather bags, supposed to give them a countenance. What a countenance! Hence trips to Saint Gremain or Versailles, starting from the above mentioned gay station, are true pleasure trips.

Yesterday I was obliged to go to Versailles, and, profiting by my experience—in garrison there for several years—I strolled up and down, in no haste to choose my compartment. The railway carriages standing high above the level of the platform, the women passengers have to practice regular gymnastics to get aboard, and there are, therefore, all sorts of picturesque sights to be seen, not to speak of the services to be rendered. For the latter purpose the best thing to do is to stand opposite the revolving platforms. They make the steps at least a foot higher—enough to make one quite dizzy climbing in. I was on the lookout for a pretty fellow traveler. I might even say that I had the embarrassment of choosing. It almost looks as if the Western company has the monopoly of good-looking ticket holders. But, alas! Not one of them was alone. Naturally I avoided cavalry officers; they all go to the terminus of the line. The infantry add to the chances of a tete-a-tete, for they generally get off at Courbevoie, St. Cloud or Ville d'Avray. As to the artillery—that's a risk to run. There is a battery at Suresnes, but there are two regiments at Versailles as well.

I was at this stage of perplexity when, in one of the last of the first-class compartments, I caught sight of a pretty brunette, to be classified among the piquantee brunettes—velvety eyes, fringed with long lashes, a faintly shadowed upper lip and above the left corner of the mouth—a souvenir of a bygone century—a dainty little patch that our gallant ancestors would have called killing. She wore a maise colored bengaline bodice, trimmed with guipure. On her head was perched a big hat with outspread white wings that make her look like a valkyrie—but a gay, not a warlike one. Beside her was seated a large, elderly gentleman, with big mustaches, a decoration in his buttonhole. He had a military air and imposing eyebrows and was reading the paper. But, from time to time, he raised suspicious eyes on her—the eyes of a proprietor defending his domain—the husband, evidently.

I got into the carriage and seated myself discreetly opposite the pair, but in the far corner. Although I had made a slight bow on entering, I did not have the good fortune to claim the lady's attention. She seemed preoccupied and kept her head out of the window, as if she were expecting some one. The mustached gentleman, however, returned my bow most politely. He was no doubt obliged to me for having left the seat opposite him unoccupied. At the moment the train was starting a handsome blond young fellow, carrying a brief case under his arm, sprang inside breathlessly. He rapidly exchanged a smile of intelligence with the lady and then sat down opposite her, knee to knee.

"Look sharp," I said to myself, "this is going to turn out interesting."

Naturally, the big, elderly man, absorbed in his paper, had noticed nothing. The whistle sounded, the train started, and the fair young man, no doubt to appear occupied, began to turn the leaves of the voluminous document in the leather case. But every now and then he raised his eyes, and then it was easy to see that the lady with the patch smiled at him imperceptibly. It would have been impossible to be more imprudent, and this little maneuver, barely concealed, ran a great risk of being discovered by the man with the terrible eyebrows.

My soul is instinctively lenient to human weaknesses and at the bottom of my heart I always find a secret pleasure on learning that the corporation of husbands counts one more victim. So as far as was possible I decided to come to the assistance of the sweethearts by atracting the attenion of the husband. Seizing the first slight pretext, I engaged him in conversation. As we approached Asnieres I uttered a reflection that suddenly passed through my mind:

"To think that that bridge was out in 1870! What was the good of it, pray, with Mont Valerein just opposite?"

"It was idiotic," returned the decorated gentleman. "At that time I was on the staff of Admiral La Ronciere Le Noury. You have no conception, sir, of all the mistakes that were committed during the seige of Paris. Just fancy—"

Here the big man obligingly changed over into the corner seat, to be nearer me, leaving the pretty brune opposite the fair man, and he went on with his course in tactics with broad gestures, pointing out to me the magnificent horizon, the Seine like a silver ribbon at the foot of the green slopes of Courbevoie, and, far in the background, Paris, with its houses and its monuments, among which stood out the gigantic silhouette of the Arc de Triomphe, dishonored by scaffoldings, and the gilded dome of the Invalides.

"Remember," continued the decorated gentleman, "that we were occupying the region near Clichy."

But I hardly heard him, for I saw with terror that, profiting by my manoeuvre, our two lovers had become to whisper in smothered tones. The brief was still spread out on the young man's knees, for the looks of the thing, but it was easy to see that he nolonger even cast a glance at it. And the train sped along, and the soldier, absorbed by his memories, went on with his discourse on military history that I feigned to listen to most devoutly, so as to draw his attention to the left side of the line.

We reach St. Cloud; we enter the tunnel, and in the pitch darkness, on my word, I would swear that I heard the sound of a kiss. When we rush out again into the light, I cast a glance at the fair haired man, who is once more deeply absorbed in his case. What do I make out on his left notril but a funny little black spot! Sapristi! It is the patch, the killing patch that in a thoughtless contact had loosened and passed from the lips of the dark beauty to the nose of her admirer.

I foresaw a horrible tragedy, for my tactician turned a questioning and suspicious look upon the lady as if he had found something altered in her appearance, he hardly knew what. I would have given worlds to have been able to whisper to the good looking young man, "For heaven's sake, remove that compromising patch at once, or you are betrayed!" Unfortunately, it was quite out of the question, seated as I was at a distance. So it seemed wiser to recall the officer's thoughts to the war of 1870 and the heights of Viroflay, but he no longer paid any heed to me. He chuckled in a sinister way behind his fierce mustache, gazing at the bepatched nose of the fair young man.

As for the woman, crimson, overcome with terror, she began to fan herself violently, a most distressing sight. What was going to happen? What terrible sentence was the implacable judge going to pronounce on the guilty wretches cowering beneath his gaze? Was I going to be obliged to look on in this narrow railway carriage at a challenge, a boxing match, perhaps a butchery, a massacre?

Suddenly, to my intense relief, I caught site of the three little yew trees, trimmed into sugar loaf shape, that guard the entrance into the grand monarch's town. A guard called out: "Versailles, Versailles!" The train stopped. I got out, determined to stick to the officer to see what would happen. Judge of my stupor on seeing the lady take the fair man's arm and trip along by his side, while the decorated gentleman said to me as he saw them disappear:

"They are charming. I know them. They live quite near me in the Rue Duplessis. The husband is a lawyer. They are half way through the honeymoon, as you might infer, sir. What a hug he gave her in the tunnel at Ville d'Avray, to be sure!"

THE ARCTIC MOSQUITO.

It Is About the Most Terrible Insect Pest in the World.

"Nothing that has ever been written about the arctic mosquito begins to come up to the real thing," said a guest in the St. Charles corridor the other evening. "I went up the Yukon river in the summer of 1896, representing the Alaska and Dominion Trading company, and we struck mosquitoes as soon as we got into the hills. They are twice as large as our familiar bayou species, and their sting is like the prod of a hot needle. They sweep along the valleys in dense clouds, and if they catch a man unprepared they are liable to blind him before he can escape. I heard stories of children being stung to death and can readily believe them.

"Whenever we went ashore we wore heavy hat nets and took the utmost precaution, but were certain to suffer more or less. One of our party cut the tongues out of his shoes, and a narrow line of sock was exposed under the lacing. Next day he was bitten there at least a hundred times, and his feet were so terribly inflamed that the shoes had to be cut off.

"Another man, a fireman in the boat crew, got drunk on Alaska whisky one afternoon and lay down to take a nap in a corner of the engine room. I noticed him a little later and was horrified at the solid brown mass of mosquitoes that had settled on a small exposed section of his cheek and throat. In an hour his face was swollen out of all resemblance to anything human, he was unable to swallow and was burning with fever. It was a week before he was able to be about. I saw a number of cattle near Fort Hamilton that had been made stone blind by stings near the eye.

"The arctic foothill mosquito is without doubt the most terrible insect pest in the world."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

They Keep One Eye Shut.

A recent traveler in Mexico, who visited the mines there during his journey, says that he was much astonished at seeing the men who carry the ore come out of the mine, each with one eye shut.

The foreman, seeing his surprise, explained the matter. He said the candles belonging to the barateros (who drill and blast) do not give sufficient light in the drifts, where it is consequently quite dark, but where, nevertheless, the barateros see well enough not to run their heads against the rocks, but, on emerging into daylight, they would be blinded did they not take precautionary measures.

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft, at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light they drop the eyelid of one eye and keep this down while they are discharging their ore and until they have redescended the shaft.

When they are again in the dark, they open the eye kept hitherto in reserve and at once see everything distinctly, while the

A CLERGYMAN'S INFLUENCE.

Paine's Celery Compound

Recommended by Rev. C. M. Tyler, a Methodist Minister of Nova Scotia.

It Saves the Life of Mr. George W. Parks.

A Gain in Flesh of Thirty-two Pounds in Three Weeks.

Amongst professional men who are active and ardent advocates of Paine's Celery Compound, clergymen are found who never weary in recommending the wonderful medicine to members of their churches who are ailing, sick and diseased.

The true and honest clergyman who has himself experienced the life-giving powers of Paine's Celery Compound—who has been raised from weakness of body to full health and vigor, feels it a duty to speak to others of the only true health and strength builder that the world has ever seen.

Mr. G. W. Parks, once near the dark grave, but rescued and saved by Paine's Celery Compound after failure of his doctors, sends the following letter:

"While at sea I was taken sick, which compelled me to abandon my work and seek home and rest. I consulted the doctors who pronounced it typhoid or slow fever. I suffered severely from night-sweats, and cold chills during the day. Added to this I was extremely nervous, which weakened me and reduced my flesh until I was a mere skeleton. This continued until last winter, when my wife and friends began to despair of my recovery, as the medicines I took produced no good, and I was gradually growing worse.

"Through the influence of the Rev. C. M. Tyler, I was induced to give Paine's Celery Compound a trial, and I can truly say it worked wonders. The first bottle gave me great relief, and five bottles completely cured me. I gained thirty-two pounds in three weeks, and am now strong and healthy. I would urge the suffering everywhere to give Paine's Celery Compound a trial."

Sing While Marching.

A German army doctor has discovered that singing possesses health giving properties. He claims that it intensifies the respiratory movements, thus rendering the lungs capable of dealing with more air. This increases and strengthens the action of all the organs of the body. Appetite and thirst increase, and the more frequent movements of the diaphragm materially aid digestion. German foot soldiers are therefore encouraged to sing on the march.

Electric Bell Substitute.

A substitute for an electric bell has been devised by a deaf couple. Not being able to hear the bell themselves, and having no servant, they have fixed up an arrangement by means of which when the button at the front door is pressed, the electric lights all over the place light up, and remain so until the button is released. By a reversal of the arrangement, all the lights are switched off when the button is operated after dark.

TOLD IN THE SMOKING CAR.

The Strange Yarn of an Idolized Town Clock.

Jones, the commuter, always read his morning paper during the time occupied by the transit of his regular morning train and ferryboat to the city. On the way home at night he invariably played whist in the smoker with three of his fellow townsmen. He had been a commuter ten years. From all this it may be inferred that Jones was a creature of habit. And so one night when a seedy looking stranger with a long red nose, baggy cheeks and a wild glare in his eyes dropped into the seat usually occupied by his playing partner, Jimson, Jones was visibly annoyed, while his two fellow commuters, who had been waiting for the tardy Jimson with their whist board on their knees, sniffed in disgust.

The stranger, nothing daunted, however, gazed at the three commuters with a faraway look in his eyes and gave vent to an occasional cavernous sigh, which seemed to come from the depths of despair. Not a word did he utter, and the commuters were too busy with plans for ousting the stranger in the event of Jimson's appearance to think of aught else. Meanwhile the train began to move out of the station, and, as Jimson had failed to appear—it sometimes happened so with one of the party—Jones decided to invite the stranger to take a hand in the prospective game. Before he could speak, however, the man heaved another sigh, gazed beseechingly at the commuters and said—

"Gentlemen, far be it from me to intrude upon the preparations which you have made for indulgence in the noble game of whist, but I can remain silent no longer. I feel that I must speak and reveal the terrible secret which burns in my bosom like a white hot brand. Yes, I must tell all. The weakness grows upon me now, but ere I die listen to the story of the downfall of the village of my nativity, and when you have heard it let your sympathy go out to me, and perchance my troubled soul may find the respite and balm which it seeks. Listen!" The commuters listened.

"My name," continued the stranger, "is Harkins—H. Billington Harkins—and I live, or, rather, lived, in Backville, Conn. It is of this town that I intend to speak and the downfall of which makes me what I am—a misanthrope, a wanderer upon the face of the earth.

"Backville was a very old town, and its inhabitants had lived there for generation upon generation. A new family rarely moved into the town, and no one ever moved out of it except when he or she died. Backville was a very peculiar town. It had little or nothing to do with the rest of the world and considered itself sufficient unto itself.

Now, like all small towns, Backville had a town clock, had had it for 50 years, and in all that time the clock had never been known to deviate a fraction of a second from the exact time. Backville swore by that clock. It was the acme of all that was faithful and reliable. Indeed I may say that all the cardinal virtues clustered around that clock. When a citizen of Backville said that a person was as accurate or as perfect as the town clock, he could say no more; he had touched the heights of praise. Children were directed to emulate the goodly example of the town clock. The office of winder of the clock was the most important and withal th emost lucrative place in the gift of the town. The conditions of which I speak had existed for 40 years, and in every one of those years faith in the clock had increased until it finally became an object of worshipful adoration. You may readily understand how such might be the case.

"One morning, three years ago, the town awoke as usual and prepared for the day's work. It soon began to be rumored about, however, that something was the matter with the town. This rumor became an established fact when it was discovered that when every watch and clock in town pointed to nine o'clock the town clock, the reliable and faithful town clock, gave indubitable evidence that it was but seven o'clock. Of course there was but one thing to do. The town clock couldn't be wrong, so all watches and clocks were set back to 7 o'clock or taken to the jewelers' to be regulated. My watch was not. I was very proud of my timepiece and I let it alone in the interest of science, purely in the interest of science, gentlemen. I reasoned that my watch could not by the least possibility have gained an hour in a single night and the possibilities of the town clock losing an hour in the same space were equally remote. The only solution of the case which presented itself to my mind was that time had slipped back a peg and that the old clock had adjusted itself to the change. But the other inhabitants gave the case barely a thought. The old clock said 7 o'clock, therefore it was 7 o'clock, and life in Backville went on as usual.

"From my diary, in which I recorded the results of my researches with my watch, which I allowed to pursue its headlong course down the grooves of time, I found that when it recorded noon that day the town clock recorded 10 o'clock. The following morning, Dec. 2, I found that the town arose as usual at 7 o'clock, town clock time, 9 o'clock my time. Men went to their work in the stores and mills at 8 o'clock, town clock time, and quit work at 5 o'clock, town clock time, 7 o'clock my time. The next morning another hour was lost somewhere. When my watch recorded 1 o'clock, the morning of Dec. 4, the town clock recorded 10 o'clock, the night of Dec. 3. It was plainly apparent that a day was being lost somewhere, and the next afternoon, when the town clock struck 5, it was 3 o'clock by my watch.

"When the townspeople saw that it was dark at five o'clock, a great fear came over the town, and a public meeting was called. Explanations as to what might be the matter were solicited, and many theories were propounded. It was finally decided, however, that a great change in the solar system had occurred. This theory seemed plausible, and it was adopted as being the only solution of the phenomena. You see, Backville impeached the sun, but the town clock—that could not be at fault. Thus time went on, or rather back, and things went from bad to worse. Sometimes two hours were lost in one hour. Backville celebrated Christmas when, according to my watch, she should have celebrated Washington's birthday. Next year Fourth of July was celebrated with snow on the ground, while the Thanksgiving turkeys were eaten with the thermometer at 90 degrees in the shade.

"I began to see what the matter was—the town clock was at fault—but I feared to reveal my thoughts to my fellow townsmen. Meanwhile Backville, in its benighted faith in the town clock, was being dragged back through time, and I knew not where the end would be. It got so that no one could tell just when night was coming or when it would be daylight. Sometimes twilight was taken for early morning, and vice versa. And the money spent in adjusting clocks and watches amounted to a fortune in itself. Finally I resolved to tell all and die as a martyr, if necessary, for the salvation of my townsmen.

"'Gentlemen,' said I one day in public meeting, 'you are all wrong. You are joined to your old idol, and in your blindness you fail to see that the solar system is not at fault; your watches are not at fault. The town clock is at fault. Pluck it out of the steeple or repair it, otherwise we will die in the darkness of the seventeenth century, while the rest of the world is living in the twentieth century.'

"An hour later I left town. I did not depart as I would like to have departed, for I rode astride a rail borne by sundry fellow townsmen, and over my body was distributed a beautiful coat of tar and feathers. Since then, gentlemen, I have wandered about the earth a pariah, a ruined man. My constitution is weakened and my intellect shattered. I am now going back to Backville, which by this time is probably enveloped in the chaos of the tertiary period. If any pre-Adamites are living there, I will be killed for returning from banishment, but with my dying breath I shall whisper, 'The clock, the town clock, was slow.'"

"Yes, the town clock was slow," said the commuters, and the stranger fell calmly and peacefully asleep. — New York Evening Sun.

THE CAMERA IN WAR.

Boer Positions to be Located by Photographs From a Balloon.

London, Feb. 22.—Mingled with the intense human and political interest in England's war in South Africa is a scientific interest in the outcome of experiments being made in this war with the tele-photographic camera.

This camera is now being used in war between white men for the first time. Italy, Spain, Russia and Germany have all adopted it, but they have had no wars to test its use. The English government has not officially authorized its use, but several specially fitted instruments have been taken to the front privately.

Efforts will be made with these cameras to secure pictures of Boer armies in operation, photographed from balloons.

Tele-photography was first used in actual warfare in the Chino-Japanese war on the side of the Japanese. Its advantages for military purposes are great, and, particularly in Italy, much work has been done in this direction. It is possible to take accurate pictures, clearly showing the enemy's position, numbers, the character of the defenses, position of guns, etc., and this, it should be noted, at a distance of two or three miles if the atmosphere and other circumstances are favorable.

For balloon work it is especially suitable, as drawing a plan anything like accurate in a swaying balloon is beyond the powers of the cleverest draughtsman, while even the best trained eyes cannot retain the exact details of a position hastily viewed. In addition, the camera will often reveal points quite overlooked by the eye; a good instance of which was seen recently.

A cinematograph had been taken of certain rapids. When, in the evening, this was thrown on a screen, the spectators were surprised to see a body being tossed about in the waters, which had not been noticed at the time of taking the photograph. On a subsequent search being made the body was duly found. The twentieth part of a second will suffice to secure an accurate picture of what it would take an artist with the pencil an hour to draw.

Remarkable studies of birds and animal life have been taken, owing to the possibility of taking photographs at such distances as not to disturb the living object in its natural habits. Photographs of seafowl nesting in the most inaccessible spots have thus been secured, and, recently an osprey was caught (after four hours' watching waist deep in water) in the act of poising on its nest. Tele-photography is also very useful for landscape work, especially for distant mountain views and for obtaining details in architectural subjects.

The tele, or far-photographic, action is brought about by a specially designed lens, the invention of T. R. Dallmeyer, head of the well-known firm of opticians, being used in combination with various ordinary forms of lenses, according to the work to be done. Tele-photographic lenses can be used with any good camera; but, as great rigidity of apparatus and extremely accurate focusing are essential, the inventor of this lense has also designed a special form of camera particularly useful for naturalists and others wishing to photograph living or inanimate objects at great distances.

BOER FIGHTER NAMED.

Commander of Irish Brigade May Secure a Seat in Parliament.

London, Feb. 22.—John O'Donnell and Major John McBride, the latter commanding the Irish brigade in South Africa, were recently nominated to fill the vacancy in the House of Commons for South Mayo caused by the resignation Oct. 26, 1899, of Michael Davitt, Irish nationalist, as a protest against the Boer war.

The Globe this afternoon declares that if Major McBride is qualified for election to parliament he is also liable to be shot as a traitor, as soon as captured, as only British subjects are iligible for election to the House of Commons.

Heard at Lunch.

"But Brown, see here, weren't you a great sufferer from dyspepsia and indigestion?" "I should say I was," replied Brown, with a happy chuckle, "I often wished that I were dead, it seemed to me that any food, however plain and wholesome, that I put in my stomach, lay there like so many cold, hard stones. Then fermentation would set in, and sour liquids, whatever they are, would rise up in my throat and fairly choke me with their scalding. I finally got so that I dreaded meal times, and a dull, chronic pain was always present in my abdomen, as though a stick, sharpened at both ends, were keeping the sides of it apart."

"Well, how did you get rid of your disorder? I, myself, am troubled with indigestion, and I am afraid that the stuff the doctor prescribed isn't doing me much good." "Hutch, old man, simply Hutch, the greatest and most convenient cure ever put within the reach of suffering humanity. The directions say that 'one Hutch gives instant relief,' and that's the way I found it. I am now free from any trace of indigestion, always carry my Hutch with me, and I'm now ready for my luncheon—Try Hutch, old man."

THE PEOPLE'S UNBOUNDED EULOGY

Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder Has Had an Almost Universal Endorsation as the Grertest Healer of the Most Insidious and Common Disease of the Century.

Catarrh is a Menace to the Race--The Precursor of Much Suffering and the Fore-runner of Incurable Throat and Lung Troubles.

But This Great Remedy Cures and Prevents Colds, Drives out Catarrh Germs and Frees the Whole System from the Foulness Incident to Catarrh.

No remedy yet compounded for the healing of catarrh has received the unbounded eulogy from people in high positions, socially, publicly or professionally, as Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder.

Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder is a specific for catarrh. It gives almost instant relief, not only in the acute forms, but chronic cases of many years' standing, yield under it to persistent use. It will break up a cold in the head in almost quicker time than it takes to tell it. It is a pleasant, powerful and potent protection against the almost constant climatic changes to which this northern world is subject.

Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder is the permanent eradicator and perpetual exterminator of this most insidious and yet common foe of humanity generally. If you are a sufferer take counsel of the thousands to whom it has been a sovereign balm—the beacon to show the way to health and the haven of health.

Mrs. J. H. Harte, of 223 Church street, Toronto, in telling of her faith in and cure by this wonderful remedy, says: "I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder. For years I suffered intensely and constantly from catarrh in its worst form. I took everything I could purchase that promised such cure, without any permanent results until I tried Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder. The first application of it—and it's so simple to apply—gave me great relief. I persevered in the use of it for eight months, and to-day I am fully restored, not the slightest symptom of the malady remaining, and I am thankful to be able to give this testimony for so worthy a remedy after trying so many so-called catarrh cures, only to add disappointment to disappointment."

Have you a cough? Is the voice husky? Is the breath foul? Are you losing flesh? Do you ache all over? Do you take cold easily? Is the nose stopped up? Does your nose discharge? Do crusts form in the nose? Do you cough sometimes until you gag? Is there pain in the back of the head? Is there a pain across the eyes? Is there a tickling in the throat? Is your sense of smell leaving you? Are you losing the sense of taste? Is there a dropping in the throat? Is there a burning pain in the throat? Any and all of these symptoms indicate the presence of catarrh, and while some of them may seem but trivial, you cannot afford to treat them lightly, for, remember, dire consequences may result from neglect, for all victims of throat and lung troubles have been subject to catarrh.

Dr. Agnew's ointment puts out the fire from distressing skin troubles, such as Eczema, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Tetter, and will cure piles in from 3 to 5 nights.

Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart gives relief from the most violent spasms in heart disease in 30 minutes. It saves life.

Thursday night's entertainment was quite novel, well received and drew a large crowd, considering the storm. The fun opened by Guerin and Graham in step dancing in the centre of the rink to music furnished by Mr. Sandy Smith, which was well received. Then the hockey match between the Coon Town Swells and the Hardware teams were put on. The play during the first half was rather one-sided and at half time the coons led by 4 to 0. On resuming play it was seen that both teams made changes to make the game more even, and was shown so, for it was fast and hot, the coons winning by a score of 8 to 1. During half time Mr. Edg. Hartley gave an exhibition of figure and trick skating in a way equalled by few, each grace and daring. His spins, vines and one foot movements were neat in execution, and the cutting of heads of prominent men on the ice were marked out as if drawn by a pencil, also also his block specialties were very clever. The night's entertainment was very enjoyable and well appreciated. At the close of the evening's fun at the rink all the hockey players were invited by Mr. Edg. Hartley to an oyster supper served up by Mr. M. Connors of the City Hotel in first class style. No hockey in this game.

SAILED FOR AFRICA

Chill Turner Writes Farewell Letters on his Departure.

The following letters were received by Mr. J. J. Turner, from his son, who sailed for Africa with the second contingent last Wednesday—

Halifax, N.S., Feb. 20

Dear Parents,—I received the letter and photos to-day, and I can tell you I was pleased to hear from home. We loaded the horses up to-day, placing 636 horses on the Milwaukee, which is fitted o. k., the horses having every comfort, new halters, just for the sea trip and canvas slings, while the carpenter work is a wonder. The animals occupy four decks, so that some had to go to the lower deck down stairs, while others ascended to the upper deck. I am sending you a photo of the Milwaukee. She is 480 feet long, but she is even better than the photo. The Government is preparing every comfort for the voyage, even supplying us with slippers. The guns are mounted on the boat and are painted the khaki color. I wish you could see me in my khaki uniform, loaded for Boer, with revolver, bayonet and dagger, and cow boy's hat, just waiting to see a Boer. He will see his finish. I have written to very nearly every person since I arrived. There is a smoker in the Mason's hall to-night, but as the buttons are not very strong on my trousers, I shall sew them on instead of going.

I hope you are both well, also Reg, Webber and John and Mr. Babb. They must write. I close with love to all.

Good-bye and God bless you,

A. W. TURNER

P. S.—A little girl gave me a card at Campbelltown, wishing me good luck and God speed.

Halifax, N.S., Feb. 21, 1900

Dear Father,—I wish you would send me a wrist watch with my name on it to Africa, as the spring in this is broken, and it is not handy, as you must always unbutton. Also send me some of these cards and folders. We sail to-day, and all are very glad to hear that news. I am writing this at 6 a.m., preparing for parade. We all eat like horses. Well, good-bye, God bless you all.

GOT LOTS OF BRAIN WORK?

Use GRAPE-NUTS

"I find Grape-Nuts very helpful to a man troubled with the cares and worriment of business," says Louis Fink, Jr., of 60 S. 4th Street, Philadelphia.

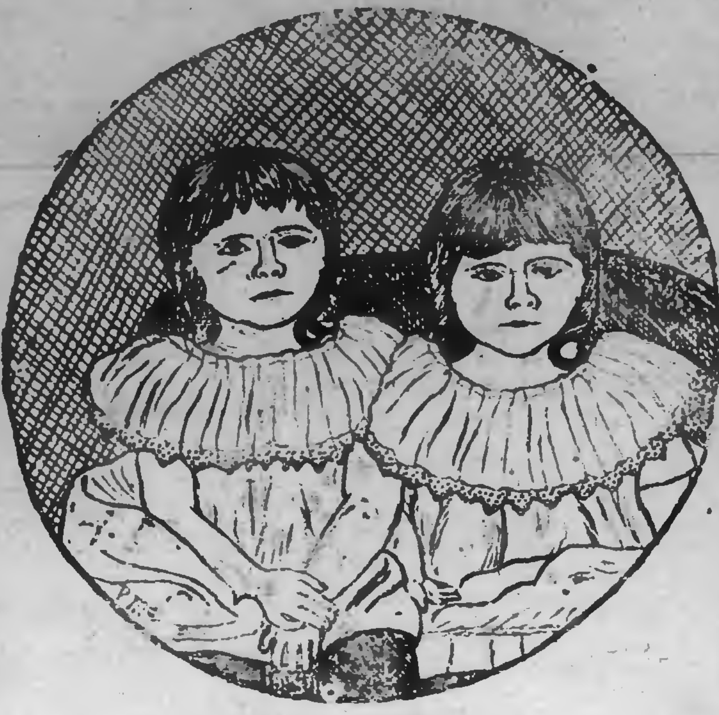
"At the time I commenced using the food I was weak from want of properly selected food. The help I received from the powerful food elements in Grape-Nuts was indeed wonderful. I have come to use the food regularly and do not think a breakfast complete without it.

"I suggest you mention in your advertisements that Grape-Nuts are nothing like Oatmeal, for many of my friends express themselves as weary of the mushes and such will find a delightful change in taste and results by using Grape-Nuts."

There's a reason why this food gives one the feeling of new vitality and vigor Actual use proves the proposition.

All grocers sell Grape-Nuts, and the pure-food factories of the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., at Battle Creek, Mich., produce them.

THE McCONNELL CHILDREN.



DAISY AND PEARL
Who were restored to their mother yesterday.

THE M'CONNELL CHILDREN.

Were Returned to Their Mother Yesterday Morning.

The McConnel children, of which so much has been heard, were disposed of yesterday by Police Magistrate Dumble. The Attorney General ordered the children to be brought before the court Mr. McConnell, the father of the children, who resides in the township of Hamilton, was present, and had as his solicitor, Mr. J. B. McCall, of Cobourg. Mrs. McConnell was also present, and was represented by Mr. A. P. Poussette, Q.C., while Mr. R. M. Dennistoun was present as solicitor of the Children's Aid Society.

The two little youngsters, which are twins, and health-looking children, were brought into court and made directly for their mother, who tenderly greeted them.

Mr. R. M. Dennistoun then addressed the court, going over the facts of the case, as far as the Children's Aid Society was concerned, and which are pretty well known to readers of the Times. He had no evidence to offer as to whether or not the children had received proper treatment before they were brought to the Shelter, and, further, they had not been brought there in the first place by the knowledge of the proper authorities of the Society.

Mr. J. B. McCall made a length address, dealing with the matter from his client's point of view The point he endeavored to establish was that the children were not taken from Mrs. McConnell to the Shelter as wards of the Children's Aid Society, and that Mr. Miller was at perfect liberty to give them over to Mr. McConnell, as he had done. The Attorney General having ordered the children to be taken back to the shelter, until the Magistrate had disposed of them, he considered that they should be returned by the Society to whom the Society first got them, which was, as he maintained, from Mr. McConnell.

Mr. Poussette pointed out that they had been taken from Mrs. McConnell by the Children's Aid Society. Mr. Miller having demanded them in the name of that institution, therefore it was to her that the Society should return them.

The Magistrate took the latter view of the matter, and the children were returned to Mrs. McConnell.

THE PATRIOTIC DANCE.

Brilliant Affair at the Opera House Last Night,

One of the most successful social events of the season was the dance given last night by the young ladies for the benefit of the wives and children of our soldiers. The successful function was admirably managed, and no expense was spared in making it a success.

The opera house was decorated most tastefully, the walls of the large hall being literally covered with flags and bunting. The work was done by Mr. J. J. Turner, whose ability in this direction is well known.

The spacious room presented a brilliant spectacle and was a thing of life and beauty.

The music was generously provided by Mr. Kendry, M.P., while Mr. J. J. McBain defrayed the cost of the decorations. The refreshments were served in the adjoining room, which was also charmingly decorated.

The promoters of the affair are to be congratulated on the success of their undertaking.

How a Bunch of Travellers Were Informed as to War News.

The other day a quartette of commercial men were discussing the relative merits of the Toronto morning newspapers as regards war news, when a prominent Peterborough citizen joined the party. He listened to them talk and after the argument had become good and hot, he handed out a copy of the Times of that day's issue, and pointing to the headlines, said—

"You are all wrong. Don't you see for yourselves that both the Globe and Mail copy the war despatches from the Times. There is the proof," saying which he showed the knights of the grip that the same reports exactly appeared in the Toronto papers as was in the Times. That settled it. The travellers separated firmly impressed with the importance of this S. f. J.

Port Hope and the Canal.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—Permit me to correct an error in your notice of the interview that representatives from Port Hope and Cobourg had with the Government — our respective claims were not "fought out" —the deputation was a joint one. All we asked was a thorough survey between Rice Lake and Lake Ontario before expending any money on the Trent River, and wherever the best and cheapest route could be found we wished the canal constructed. Yours sincerely,

GEN. CRONJE STILL IN THE MESHES

BRITISH CIRCLE CLOSING ON CRONJE AND HIS MEN

The Boer General Is Willing to Surrender But is Restrained by Young Men.

ROBERTS REPULSES BOERS' REINFORCEMENTS.

The Enemy Lost a Good Many Killed and Wounded and Nearly One Hundred Prisoners Including a Commandant and Three Field Cornets.

Sterkstroom, Feb. 25.

General Gatacre has issued a divisional order announcing the killing at Schoemans Farm yesterday of Capt Montmorency, commanding Montmorency's scouts and Lieut. Col. F. H. Hoskier, of the 3rd Middlesex Volunteer Artillery.

Paardeberg, Orange Free State, Feb. 23.

General Cronje's position is more hopeless than ever. Our guns dominate the sloping ascents from the river on all sides and by the rush of the Shropshires on Wednesday night up the river bed, the Boers lost 200 yards space in their cover.

Deserters say the British fire has been very deadly and affirm that General Cronje himself is willing to surrender but is overborne by the young Boers from the Transvaal.

There are women and children with the Boer force. General Roberts proposed to let them pass out of danger but this suggestion as well as the offer of medical aid has been rejected.

The kopje captured by the British on Wednesday when 50 prisoners were taken was a most important stragetical position. Its possession should enable us to repulse any Boer reinforcements from the eastward.

London, Feb. 25, 3.55 a.m.

The War Office publishes the following from Lord Roberts:

"Paardeberg, Feb. 24.—12.20 p.m. — Parties of Boers recently arrived from Natal attacked our outposts in force yesterday. They lost a good many killed and wounded and nearly one hundred prisoners including a commandant and three field cornets. Our casualties were four officers wounded, nine men killed, 24 wounded and two missing. On the 21st and 22nd one officer and 13 men were wounded.

Six men were wounded yesterday by hollow nosed mauser bullets. The nickle case is slit with four slits making the projectile of the most expansive and explosive nature possible. A wounded Boer brought to our hospital yesterday had sixty of the bullets in his pockets. During the advance to and at Kimberley the casualties were two officers killed, 13 wounded, 4 men killed 78 wounded.

Kimberley, Feb. 23.

It is reported that the Boers were in strength at Fourteen Streams to the north on Wednesday, having two guns and many wagons. They had destroyed the bridge over the Vaal River.

Paardeberg, Orange Free State, Friday, Feb. 23.

The British are gradually closing in on Gen. Cronje from all sides, and making his position more impossible than ever.

During the course of last night the Boers artillery poured in several rounds. There was a terrible rain and thunderstorm early in the evening.

The Canadians were heavily engaged in Sunday's fight, behaving most gallantly.

Paardeberg, Orange Free State, Saturday, Feb. 24.

The British took 30 prisioners as the result of yesterday's engagement.

A balloon ascended and discovered several new works, which the British guns shelled to-day.

London, Feb. 25, 2.50 p.m

Lord Roberts has sent the following despatch to the War Office—"Paardeberg, Saturday, Feb. 24.—Methuen reports that Barkley West was occupied by our troops on Feb. 22. The loyal inhabitants displayed great enthusiasm. The country west of the railway from Cape Town to Kimberley is gradually quieted down. A despatch from De Aar for Britstown and Douglas and Prieska says they will shortly be visited by our troops.

Methuen's account of the admirable manner in which the Kimberley hospital is managed made one desire to send some of our sick and wounded there."

Sterkstroom, Feb. 25.

A reconnaissance yesterday in force under Gen. Gatacre with guns found the Boers occupying a ridge three miles beyond Molteno, in the Stormberg direction.

Montmorency's scouts charged the Boers who crept around the scouts' flank, pouring in a deadly fire. The scouts were finally compelled to retire, having lost heavily. Fourteen men are missing.

MAGNIFICENT HEROISM.

London, Saturday, Feb. 24.—4 a. m.—The Standard editorially says that Commandant Cronje's resistance is an astonishing example of stubborn endurance. It is urged that the Boer leader deserves blame for wasting the lives of his soldiers, since h emust now know that the struggle is hopeless. It may be so, but the paper says—

"Even if w eshudder at the cruel sacrifice, we cannot refuse to admire its magnificent heroism. It gives us a new view of Boer determination."

The Daily Chronicle says—

"It is impossible to withhold a tribute of admiration for the iron resolution of a commander who fights a losing battle against such odds."

The paper, however, qualifies its tribute by recalling Commandant Cronje's conduct at the siege of Potchefstroom, where, it says, "his dauntless courage and skill were combined with th emost shameless trickery."

The Daily Telegraph says—

"We must experience almost as keenly as we do the feeling of pride and gladness at the masterful vigor of the British arms, a passionate admiration of these adversaries. Dogged and dauntless to a wonderful degree wree these men, who could submit to let their leader gather them together in the valley of the shadow of death and there await and confront the awful punishment prepared for them."

The Daily News says—

"Englishmen will feel something like pride in Cronje even as a foe. Hemmed in on all sides, circled with a chain of fire, his hastily-made trenches enfiladed by a stream of lead, he still elects to fight. It is magnificent courage."

The Times briefly characterizes Commandant Cronje's conduct as obstinacy.

BOER POSITION DESCRIBED.

New York, Feb. 24.—Philip Lauter Wessels, a merchant of Bloemfontein, Orange Free State, has arrived in New York to help the Boer cause. He comes on the advice of his Government, and is making his headquarters with Geo. W. Vansiclen, president of the American Boer Council.

Mr. Wessels was born a few miles below Kimberley and is married to a daughter of Hendrick Greenwald, owner of the Koedoes Rand farm, of 40,000 acres adjoining the Modder River and where Commandor Cronje with his men are fighting the force under Lord Roberts.

In an interview published to-day Mr. Wessels says:

"Commandant Cronje has about 10,000 men. As nearly as I can determine from the despatches he is now a few miles west of Koedoesrand. His position is not a very good one. The bed of the Modder River at that point is about 300 feet wide. The banks rise abruptly to a height of from 20 to 80 feet, and they are covered with a thick growth of willow and mimosa trees. At this time of year the river is almost dry. In its bed are great rocks and deep wells of water. While the Boers position is not a good one, it is not so bad as one might think. The high banks prevent the British from using their artillery to the best advantage, while the rocks afford excellent protection to the Boer marksmen. If Cronje could have reached the Koedoes rand his poition would be as strong as could be. It is from this hill that the farm of my father-in-law takes its name. I know every inch of it, and there is no stronger natural fortification in that part of the country. It is about four miles long and from three to four moiles wide. Its steep sides rise precepitiously with here and there a deep ravine. Its centre is a crater with deep ravines. It offers thousands of hiding places, and there is plenty of water."

BULLER IS PUSHING FORWARD.

London, Feb. 24.—A despatch to the Daily Telegraph from Pietermaritzburg, dated Thursday, says:—"Fighting is proceeding in the vicinity of Pieters this morning. General Buller's advance is being opposed by both big guns and rifle fire."

MINES ARE UNINJURED.

Kimberley, Feb. 24.—Gen. Methuen occupied the town on Tuesday last. Supplies are now arriving hourly, and the place has no necessity to economize provisions. The shelling by nine-pounders continued until last week, when the enemy mounted a 100 poun dgun at Kamferdam. The situation then became grave, as every part of the town was reached by shells. Many inhabitants are suffering from fires caused by the shells. The machinery of the De Beers mines was protected by great piles of timber. The only damage done to the De Beers property was to one machine and one electric belt, though the shells fell constantly around the works.

TO FIGHT FOR BOERS.

Lorenzo Marques, Feb. 23.—The French steamer Gironde has arrived here bringing the American and French military attaches bound for the Boer camp. She also had on board 150 heterogenous passengers, including 18 Montengrins, in their national costume, all bound for the Transvaal.

MORE CASUALTIES FROM BULLER.

London, Feb. 24.—The War Office received to-day from Gen. Buller a list of casualties resulting from the fighting of Feb. 22, as follows—

Killed—Lieut. the Hon. R. Cathcart, son of Lord Cathcart, of the Rifle Brigade; Lieuts. Coe and Parker, of the Lancashire regiment.

ROBERTS OBTAINS AMMUNITION.

London, Feb. 24.—The arrival of the British supply column at Paardeberg may have given Gen. Roberts the opportunity to press the attack on Cronje's laager, for doubtless he could not keep up the vigorous cannonade with which he started. The long wait may be due to a determination to starve out Gen. Cronje's gallant force.

Other late Paardeberg despatches say the Boer plight is still hopeless and that Lord Roberts is ready to meet all their reinforcements.

THE SITUATION AT COLENSO.

Colenso, Feb. 24.—General Buller continued his advance upon Ladysmith from the left on Wednesday. In the morning Thorneycroft's Horse crossed the drift at Colenso and occupied the kopjes to the north. At midday a pontoon was constructed ...... of Hlangwana, and a battery crossed with a portion of Warren's division. All the afternoon a heavy fire was directed against the wooden slopes of Grobler's Kloof, where the enemy was. They were gradually driven back. They replied with a fire from guns concealed on the heights north of Grobler's and with rifles. Our infantry occupied some low kopjes along the river, but made no attempt to ascend Grobler's. The British advance is not rapid. To all appearance the enemy is fighting a rear-guard action, but it is impossible to estimate their strength, as they are concealed in hilly country, which is capable of concealing thousands of men and affording extremely strong positions. This accounts for Buller's cautious advance. Although miles of wagons were seen trekking on the Dundee road, and one big laager behind Umbulwana is gone, the big guns firing both on us and Ladysmith remain. There is evidence of no general retirement. The enemy evidently evacuated the Colenso kopjes quickly. They left all belongings behind at Fort Wylie. Their trenches are the most carefully constructed yet seen. They begin at the very bank of the river, the lowest having loop holes. Above them are two layers of sandbags, enabling them to fire with perfect safety at the enemy on the other bank, and while crossing. At one end of the trench is a covered passage by which they may retire to the next trench. Carefully hidden, either by earthworks or bushes, are line after line of entrenchments. The railway bridge is completely wrecked. All the five spans and one stone pier being destroyed. The village itself was damaged by the Boers, who had broken the windows and taken or destroyed the furniture. Outside of the village lie the carcasses of horses, belonging to the 14th and 66th Field Batteries, which were taken at the battle of Colenso. Behind Colenso, and beginning at Grobler's Kloof, lies the eastern end of very high and broken country extending from Dorn Kloof eastward to the northern bend of the Tugela. This the Boer have made their stronghold for two months past, and it stretches north almost as far as Ladysmith. We now hold the south bank of the Tugela at Colenso, to within three miles of its junction with the Klip River. This should render a flanking movement easy.

FLOGGED FOR COWARDICE.

London, Feb. 24.—A Sterkstroom despatch of Feb. 23 says a British refugee from Heidelberg says that the Boers have admitted losing 500 men in the assault on Ladysmith on January 6, and that it was true that Gen. Joubert was no longer in command. He added that some Free Staters were publicly flogged for cowardice after the battle of Belmont.

London, Feb. 24.—Negotiations, it is said, are in progress for the formation of a naval reserve in Canada, the difficulty created by the requirements of six months' training in a man-of-war being on eof the conditions of service in the United Kingdom it is thought will be overcome.

The Marconi system of wireless telegraphy was tried in the naval manoeuvres and proved successful. As long as only one ship was signalling, signals were sucessful for sixty miles. Negotiations are in progress between the Government and Signor Marconi, but the terms are not decided.

STORMBERG BOERS MAY SUBMIT.

London, Feb. 24.—The retreat of Gen. Cronje seems to be having an effect on the Cape Boers, as a Dordrecht despatch dated Feb. 22 says they have opened negotiations for submission. Gen. Brabant is treating with them, and in deference to the wishes of the Governor of Cape Colony is offering lenient terms and in the meanwhil eceasing offensive operations.

A special despatch from Arundel under date of Feb. 23 says—

"The Boers have formed a strong force seven miles west of here. Gen. Clements has kept up a searching fire on their kopjes. We expect to take their position before sunset."

SOME RUMORS FROM DURBAN.

Durban, Feb. 23.—Evening.—The rumor again gains credence that Ladysmith has been relieved. It is also reported that Gen. Cronje has surrendered 3,000 men and that Gen. Kitchener wounded in the left arm. Crowds throng the streets singing and cheering because of supposed victories. Seventeen hundred Boers have been killed or wounded, the latter—it is reported—including Gen. Cronje.

FIFTEEN NEW WARSHIPS.

London, Feb. 24.—The naval estimates for 1900-1901 were issued yesterday. The net total is £27,522,000, which is an increase of £923,100 over the estimates for 1899-1900.

About one-half the increase is due to an addition of 4,240 men. The additional expenditure in connection with the war, which affects the present financial year, is over £1,000,000.

There were 25,712 men in the naval reserves on Dec. 31. It is proposed during the coming financial year to lay down the following—

Battleships	2
First class armored cruisers	6
Second class armored cruiser	1
Twin-screw sloops	2
Light draught gun boats	2
Torpedo boats	2

Taking this programme into consideration th efollowing vessels will be in course of construction during the year—

First class protected cruiser	1
Second class protected cruisers	2
Third class protected cruiser	1
Sloops	8
Light draught gun boats	2
Torpedo boats	4

LONDON TOWN BREATHES EASIER NOW!

Hand in Hand With Relief of Ladysmith Comes the Hourly Expected Relief of Ladysmith.

LORD ROBERTS REGARDED AS THE HERO OF THE HOUR.

Old Soldiers Who Answered the Queen's Call for More Men Informed That Arrangements Had Not Been Completed for Enlistment.

London, Feb. 24.—The fierce fighting that has made the week memorable in the history of Great Britain has, in spite of the heavy casualties that accompanied it, acted as an exhilarating tonic upon the nation. Hand in hand with the relief of Kimberley and the daily expected relief of Ladysmith has come the relief of London. With the fate of those beleaguered places off their minds, London has assumed a more cheerful tone. There is to be something of a season after all, and "Little Bobs" is the hero of the hour even at this stage of the war, which can scarcely be considered much more than initial from the British point of view. He would be granted every honor int the people's power to give if only public opinion and gratitude became operative. Almost every other man and every other circumstance he stands out from those grim happenings in South Africa clothed in the halo of victory.

Hailed as a Hero.

Loudly he is hailed as giving the lie to those who said that the pluck and brains that made Great Britain victorious in the Crimea, in India, and in Afghanistan had passed awa yfrom her. The circumstances of his hurried departure when he subordinated the greatest personal sorrow to the needs of the country, his feats on the battlefields of old, his tremendous personal magnetism, and his kindliness and simplicity are all brought into rapid review by means of conversation or the newspapers before the average Englishman until it is small wonder that the hero of Kandahar has reached that pinnace where his country would deny him nothing.

Gen. Kitchener's automatic way of doing things and his hardness of heart have been so much paraded before the public since he first achieved greatness that he has lost much of his popularity, and, while che possesses the national confidence to an almost unequalled extent, it is patent that the nation as a whole would rather that the opportunities fell to "Bobs" than to his iron-willed chief of staff.

Circumlocution Again.

A curious instance of the sybtem that previls in the War Office has occurred this week. Immediately after the Queen's proclamation appealing to the patriotism of her soldiers and asking them to re-enlist under the Government's new plan to strengthen the army was published there flocked to headquarters large numbers of men anxious to answer the Queen's request. They wrre all turned away because the War Office had not yet issued any detailed instructions regarding the acceptance of such offers nor formulated any specific plan for putting into action the generals proposals adotted by Parliament. The criticism current is that either the Queen's letter was premature or the War Office was dilatory. The latter is generally accepted as correct and not without bitter comment.

MOST BRILLIANT SOCIAL SEASON IN WASHINGTON

Will Close With the Marriage of a Daughter of the British Ambassador.

INVENTION TO REPULSE FOES WITH ELECTRICITY

An Ambitious Inventor Has Devised a Scheme to Introduce Electricity Into Warfare so That an Enemy Will be Paralyzed by a Shock.

Washington, D.C., Feb. 24, 1900.—The most brilliant social season in the recent history of Washington will close with the advent of Lent on February 28. Before the end of the present week, which will probably be the most interesting event of the season will take place when Robert Bromley, honorary attache of the British embassy will marry Miss Lilian Pauncefote, third daughter of Lord and Lady Pauncefote.

The ceremony takes place at St. John's Episcopal church at noon on Saturday, Bishop Satterlee of the diocese of Washington and Dr. Mackay Smith, rector of St. John's officiating. President and Mrs. McKinley, the members of the cabinet, the Supreme court, the diplomatic corps and other distinguished people have already accepted invitations. Miss Audrey Pauncefote, sister of the bride; Miss Esther Bromley, sister of the groom, and Miss Hetty Sargeant, of Boston, will be the bridesmaids, while the groom will be attended by his brother, Bromley-Wilson. The ushers will be the four unmarried secretaries and attaches of the British embassy.

The bride will wear ivory satin trimmed with old point lace, with a court train borne by Master Sidney Kent Legare, who will be dressed in the costume of a cavalier of the time of Charles I—white satin slashed with blue velvet and a hat with ostrich plumes. The bridesmaids will be attired in blue silk trimmed with white lace and chiffon and will carry bunches of Parma violets. A breakfast and reception will follow the ceremony at the British Embassy. The table is to be typically English.

The Hon. Lilian Pauncefote is exceedingly attractive. Sh eslight in figure, with soft golden-brown hair, blue eyes and a winsome and engaging manner. She has a charming voice, and, like her sisters, possessed of more than ordinary talent both in music and as a linguist. Mr. Bromley, is tall and good-looking and an immense favorite in Washington.

The bridal gifts which have been arriving at the Embassy for the last fortnight have come from England, India, Africa and all parts of the world. They make a display that would do credit to an empress. Mr. Bromley's gifts to his bride include a diamond necklace and a tiara, which are heirlooms in his family, and to each of the bridesmaids he will present a representation of a pheasant, his family crest, set in diamonds, with a gold bar bearing the motto of "Pensez Forte," which happens to appear on the escutcheon of both the Bromley and Pauncefote families. Two policemen have been detailed to watch the embassy building until after the wedding, on account of the immense value of the presents.

The British Ambassador and Lady Pauncefote gave two dinner parties last week. The first was in honor of Secretary of State and Mrs. Hay. Among the other guests were—The Italian Ambassador and the Baroness de Fava, the Russian Ambassador, the Mexican Ambassador and Senora Aspiroz, the Belgian Minister and the Countess de Lichtervelde, the Spanish Minister and the Duchess d' Arcos, Senator and Mrs. Lodge, Senator and Mrs. Wetmore, General and Mrs. Miles, Lady Bromley, Senator and Mrs. McMillan, Senator Wolcott, Hon. John A. Kasson, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Hitt. At the second there were present, among others; Chief Justice and Mrs. Fuller, Justice and Mrs. White, Lady Bromley, Secretary and Mrs. Gage, Postmaster General and Mrs. Smith.

Modern Warfare.

An ambitious inventor has offered the British government, through Col. Lee, the military attache here, an apparatus by which the army of the Boers may be entirely destroyed without endangering the lives and the limbs of the British soldiers. His plan is to introduce electricity into warfare, and arrange wires so that when the enemy attacks the mysterious current will be turned on and they will receive a shock that will paralyze them and enable them to be made prisoners without spilling blood. Both the process and the apparatus are kept secret, for fear the Boers will discover and counteract them, but the general principle is to give the entire Boer army an electric shock and then run in and capture them before they recover from it. Another suggestion offered to the British embassy consists of a contrivance similar to the little casks of brandy which are strapped upon the backs of the dogs that are sent out by the monks of St. Bernard for the rescue of travelers in the passes of the Alps. This inventor proposes that the British commander secure several thousand dogs, saddle them with these little contrivances, filled with dynamite instead of wine, and send them across into the trenches of the Boers. Attached to each keg of dynamite will be a time fuse, long enough to enable the dog to become fairly domesticated before it explodes. There is also an arrangement by which the charge will be exploded if any attempt is made to remove it from the dog's back. The inventor thinks that by the sacrifice of a few thousand dogs and a few hundred pounds of dynamite the Boers may be overcome.

Notes.

The United States Commissioner of Navigation has been officially advised that the Canadian government has authorized a refund to the owners of American steam vessels of tonnage dues levied since January 1, 1891, on American steamboats arriving in Ontario from United States ports. The dues in question were collected by the Canadian authorities under the steamboat inspection act of Canada.

The Secretary of the Treasury has formally announced that bills of health are no longer required for vessels proceeding from places in British Columbia or the Northwest Territory, Canada, directly to places in Alaska unless quarantinable diseases prevail at the port of departure.

FAREWELL PRESENTATION.

Mr. Dickson Davidson Presented With an Address and Locket

On Saturday night, in the midst of a howling storm of wind and snow, about fifty of his "creditors" assembled in the rink parlors to meet Mr. Dickson Davidson. They met him and also met other congenial spirits; and where curlers and devotees of other sports assemble there must of necessity be something to eat—also to drink, the latter a mere matter of form, of course. There was ginger ale and ginger beer and root beer and beef tea, with a little black coffee on the side. After a few light refreshments as above described were disposed of, Mr. A. H. Stratton read an address, in which was pointed out all "Dick's" little shortages idiosyncrasies and deficiences. His adventures and misadventures through the long years of the past were all brought vividly before the eyes of those assembled. The recounting of his many hair-breadth escapes from an untimely grave almost brought tears to his boyhood friends who had come together to bid him a long and sad farewell. "Dick bore up well under the ordeal, for only an occasional sob showed that his heart strings were being touched by a master hand. Accompanying the address was a beautiful gold locket, presented to him by his many chums in the different sporting organizations of the town.

Mr. W. G. Ferguson made a short speech eulogizing his vice-skip of many a hard fought game on the ice; Mr. Knapman told a few tales of the Colts out of school, and Messrs. Kenner, Stratton, Whiten and a few more of his friends gave short expressions to their feelings of regret. To bring the company back to that less sorrowful feeling which should ever go with the cup that cheers Mr. Bunton, "Billy" you know, rose in all the might and strength of his majestic mien and proceeded immediately to hand out for the edifaction of the company a varied assortment of the latest jokes which he had gathered together in his last trip with the Ticket Sellers Association—smiles chased away the tears and joke followed joke until roars of laughter deadened the sound of the despairing one's sobs. Short speeches from Messrs. R. S. Davidson, T. Cahill and D. D. Parker followed and the toast to the health and happiness of Mr. Dickson Davidson was drunk with three cheers and a tiger.

We must join his friends in wishing our friend Mr. Davidson a happy and prosperous career in the far west.

LORD ROSEBERRY'S REVELATION.

Not even the relief of Kimberley has counterbalanced in the British public mind the depressing effect of the disclosure made by Lord Roseberry in the House of Lords that, in December, the Foreign Office made overtures for an alliance to both Germany and the United States which overtures were repelled. No one has disputed, or will dispute, the authenticity of the revelation. It has long been the custom of the head of the British Government to make known important incidents to the official head of the Opposition. In Lord Salisbury's eyes, the latter place is occupied by his predecessor in the post of Premier, Lord Roseberry, notwithstanding the fact that Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman is the leader of the Liberals in the House of Commons.

Why should the information disclosed by the former Liberal Premier produce profound depression? Lord Roseberry himself showed that he regarded the unsuccessful request for an alliance made to the United States and Germany as an event of the utmost gravity. The overture could not have been prompted by fear that the Boers, single handed, would prove in the long run more than a match for the British Empire. It must have been prompted by the apprehension, believed to be well founded, that, soon or late, the British Government would be confronted with an intervention in favor of the Boers on the part of certain Continental powers. That Lord Roseberry is personally convinced of the existence of grounds for such an apprehension he made evident by rebuking the inefficiency of the proposed measures for increasing England's military resources, and by insisting on the necessity of mobilizing forthwith the greater part of the British Navy. He pointed out that the pacific assurances given by the Russian Ambassador in London were not easily reconcilable with the steps coincidently taken by the Russian Government to secure ascendancy in Persia, or with the concentration of a large body of troops on the borders of Afghanistan.

There are additional reasons for thinking that Great Britain may soon have need of allies, which must be known to Lord Roseberry, but which, according to the telegraphed abstract of his speech, he omitted to mention. These reasons have been twice set forth since the beginning of the New Year by the editor of the London National Review, whose command of diplomatic intelligence, usually confined to the Foreign Office, has been repeatedly demonstrated.

Why did Lord Salisbury, in December last, feel a pressing need of an alliance with Germany and the United States? Because he was aware that an attempt had been already made to organize on the Continent a coalition hostile to Great Britain, and that this attempt might be renewed should the Boers, single handed, prove unable to maintain their independence. It was pointed out by the National Review in its January number, and the assertion in this month is repeated, that, last October, Count Muravieff, the Russian Foreign Minister, suggested to M. Delcasse, the French Foreign Minister, that the Dual Alliance, and as many European powers as could be prevailed upon to cooperate, should associate themselves with the object of dealing with the Transvaal trouble independently of Great Britain.

The suggestion was not adopted by M. Delcasse, apparently because he was aware that M. De Witte, the Russian Minister of Finance, opposes a rupture with Great Britain at the present time, and, consequently M. Delcasse doubted Count Muravieff's authority to speak for his Government in so important an affair. For the moment, therefore, the scheme of an anti-British coalition had to be dropped. There is no doubt, however, that the Russian military and bureaucratic classes concur with Count Muravieff in thinking that their country should take advantage of England's present predicament, and the course since pursued in Persia and on the borders of Afghanistan bear witness to the power which they possess of putting pressure upon the Czar. Nicholas II cannot be more averse to a quarrel with England at this time than was his grandfather, Alexander II, in 1876-77, to a war with Turkey. Nevertheless, the last-named sovereign found himself irretrievably committed by the acts of his subordinates to hostile operations in the Balkan Peninsula. Neither is it open to question that, if the Waldeck-Rousseau Cabinet should be overthrown, and M. Delcasse should be succeeded in the Foreign Office by M. Hanotaux, the proposal made last October by Count Muravieff would meet with a different reception.

That the proposal of intervention will be renewed, should Lord Roberts quickly overrun the Transvaal, seems to be taken for granted by the editor of the National Review in his February number. He points out that a systematic peace propaganda has been started on the Continent, with the object of preserving the Transvaal as a fighting machine. The Continental enemies of England have been convinced by the strength and stubbornness of the resistance offered by the Boer republics that these would have been most valuable alleys to any European power at war with England. They regret, therefore, that, in the belief that the British were only bluffing, they encouraged the Boers to fight, and wish that they had advised them to await a more convenient season. Meanwhile, they must be rescued from the consequences of their rashness.

A similar view of the attitude of England's enemies on the Continent towards the Boers was put forth in the January number of the North American Review by Prof. Hans Delbruck, one of the leading intellectual lights of Berlin. According to the professor—"If the English, as seemed probable for a moment after the fight at Glencoe, had overrun the Boers without any great effort, I have little doubt that a Continental alliance against Greate Britain would have been soon affected." If, however, the Boers, considered as instruments of aggression against England, were worth saving four months ago, much more may they be thought to deserve interposition now, when they have proved their possession of great military ability.

The overtures for alliances revealed by Lord Rosebery bear witness to a belief that the danger of a Franco-Russian intervention in behalf of the Boers was by no means visionary a few months ago, and that even victory in South Africa will not preclude the possibility that England may be attacked elsewhere.

BEET SUGAR

There is no reason why the cultivation of beets for the manufacture of beet sugar should not be a profitable industry in Ontario. Many sections of the country are admirably adapted to the growth of beets with sufficient saccharine matter in them to be profitably made into sugar. In the United States a bounty has been given to develop this industry, and the results have been extremely satisfactory. The same has been the case in Germany. Experiments, we believe, have been made at the Government farms which prove that Ontario can grow sugar beets of the right quality. Our farmers should take the matter up and press upon the Government the necessity for some form of protection until the industry becomes sufficiently strong to stand on its own legs. There is to be a convention at the Walker House, Toronto, this week, for the purpose of organisation and the general consideration of the matter. Peterborough farmers should be represented at this meeting.

A Lindsay Hospital.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

In Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Zambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvellous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and heralded to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that to-day they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain, but magnificent edifices of the most modern type, beautiful botanical gardens, and the public improvements are evidences of the wonderful advance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial centre, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenue of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals lend an air of peace and tranquility, while the marks of civilisation and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustable veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders" whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest manifested in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before thought of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Africander whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman—born in the Cape Colony, having traveled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Zambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience, in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elisabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work—will present South Africa as it is to-day, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collection of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this county. Portfolios distibuted by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

WRITTEN IN BLOOD.

Strange Wills Made by British Soldiers Wounded in Battle.

Every British soldier has served out to him when he enlists a little volume containing among other things, three blank forms ready for will-making. Generally, a soldier pays no attention to this pocketbook and goes into battle with his will unmade. After he has been hit by a bullet and begins to realize that his chances of getting home are small a soldier begins to thing more carefully of the loved ones behind him.

As a result many queer and pathetic wills have been found upon the bodies of dead soldiers, and in every case the wishes of the testators have been respected.

The body of one soldier was found on the battlefield of Elandslaagte in the present Boer war who, before death, had scrawled with the end of a lead bullet on the inside of his helmet the words, "All to my wife."

When an English army invaded Afghanistan one soldier was caught while doing scout duty and shot down when none of his comrades was in sight. Weeks after his body was found lying before a tall rock, on which he had written in letters of blood "I want mother to have all." In both cases the war office held the wills to be valid and saw that the proper distribution of the proper was made.

In another case a wounded soldier wrote his will on the sole of his shoe. The shoe had been shot off.

SOME COVETED SCRAWLS.

Rare Autographs For Which Immense Prices Have Been Paid.

The most prized autographs in the world are those of Shakespeare. Only seven are claimed to exist, three signatures to his will (each with a different spelling), two to conveyances of property, one in the folio edition of his plays (doubtful) and one in a Tudor translation of Montaigne. This last is in the British museum and cost over 2,000 guineas.

One thousand guineas was the price given by the late Mr. Alfred Morrison of Carlton House terrace for an autograph letter written by Marie Stuart to the archbishop of Guise. This and two other letters (one to the pope and the other to the king of France) were written by the unfortunate queen of Scots on the morning of her execution. The letter to the French king was destroyed during the days of the terror, while that to the pope is still preserved at the Vatican.

The well known bookseller Bernard Quaritch gave £1,000 for an autograph of Columbus, which was exhibited at the World's fair at Chicago. A Chicago autograph dealer is said to have offered to give $100,000, or over £20,000, for a genuine autograph of Shakespeare if brought to him within a year of making his offer. It was a safe bluff, for since the tragic fate of Chatterton no forger has cared to tackle the quaint scrawl of the Bard of Avon.—Collier's Weekly.

TAKING THE REINS.

The world's record for fastest clipping of a horse is 14 minutes.

Arlington, 2:22¾, has trotted in 2:14 on a half mile track and may be Gold Leaf's first 2:10 performer.

Bishop Hero, 2:21, the Pacific coast veteran, is being driven on the roads at San Francisco by General Shafter.

J. Sutherland has bought 50 acres from A. H. Bernal at Pleasanton, Cal., and will build a track. He will also erect a large training barn and some 40 box stalls.

N. B. Wheeler, Cresco, Ia., reports a new record of 2:23½ for his pacer Fitzgerald, by Flask, 2:13¼, and that he was timed in 2:17½ in a race at Charles City, Ia., over a poor track.

The latest device to encourage high stepping in coach horses is a glass worn like goggles, the crystals being so formed that the ground appears nearer than it is. It is said to work all right.

A horse show will be held next year under the auspices of the French government in connection with the Paris exposition. Twelve prizes, worth $2,200, will be offered for American harness horses.

Ardine, 2:23¼, and Abby Kelly, 2:24½, are two more new ones for Pilot Medium reported by D. D. Streeter of Kalamazoo, Mich., former owner of Peter the Great (4), 2:07¼, the star of the family.

Porter Bairy, Pyatt, Ills., reports that his stallion Santamego, by Indicator, 2:23¼, son of Gold Dust, won the free for all at Grayville, Ills., in September in straight heats, reducing his record to 2:15¼.

F. D. Spotswood of Harrodsburg, Ky., has a 3-year-old trotting filly by Baron Wilkes, dam by Nutbreaker, that is a speed phenomenon. Oct. 1, after a very brief preparation, she trotted a three-quarter track in 2:20 and Oct. 26 turned the same track in 2:15¼; last half in 1:06¾.—Horse Review.

SIXTEEN YEARS AFTER.

Darkness and the customary crowd of camp loafers greeted the stage coach on its arrival at Monarch.

The first passenger to descend was a woman of 35 years of more. Though apparently about that age, her gait was light, her every movement graceful and easy, but vigorous. She was of medium stature and was dressed for traveling, even to a slouch fedora. She disdained the hotel porter's movement to relieve her of her valises and gave the stage driver a coin from her pocket, where it seemed to have reposed loosely. Upon the whole she bore herself mannishly.

Less than a fortnight later a newly gilt-lettered sign protruding from a window above the palace drug store became the talk of the camp. The sign read:

MISS DR. LEYOLA ADAMS,
Nurse and Physician.

The proverbial hospitality of a mining camp was not long in manifesting itself. Dr. Adams soon had a stream of social visitors. Everyone went to see her, from the marshal to the saloon loafer. All the women and girls called, and much ado was made over her. The men assured her they would "turn their trade her way," and the superintendents of several of the big mines invited her to become the mines' physician from motives of western gallantry.

From the interest she so quickly and spontaneously created it would not have taken much additional enthusiasm to have it declared that the men doctors should go. Someone did suggest this, upon the ground that one doctor and two undertakers were enough for Monarch, but another retorted that meant the "canning" of Dr. Basil Cutbbert, "the poor man's friend." The recollection of his many acts of kindness settled that vagrant idea decisively. Furthermore, when the proposition came to Dr. Adams' ears she forcefully discouraged it. She also protested against the zeal of the populace in continuing the reception to her day after day, as if she were there merely as a tourist instead of as a business woman. Not only that, but some of those whose enthusiasm would not down went so far as to have themselves examined for imagined ailments. They were willing to pay for their amusement, but she would not accept it and had to content herself with dismissing them with a good-natured scolding.

But all this was far from the purpose of her migration to Monarch. She had left the crowded east because there advancement and even the attaining of a foothold in her profession was too difficult and problematical. Hers was a retiring nature. For the practising of her profession she preferred a town to a city and a camp to a town. The opportunities, socially and professionally, were better. For these reasons she had settled in Monarch.

* * * * *

It was a subject of common remark that Dr. Adams' only apparent enemy was Mrs. Gerson, who conducted a millinery store. Mrs. Gerson was the only woman who had not assisted in the reception to Dr. Adams. She had not even at any time called on her. She had started to do so once, going over with her young daughter on a day when Dr. Adams' office was filled with callers, but it was noticed that she turned quickly away after appraising the room and its occupant. She excused herself to those who later questioned her that she was suddenly taken with a spell of dizziness.

But it was a known fact, and much commented upon that this vertigo had not lasted all the time since then, and yet in the course of two years she had not even so much as passed the time of day with the doctor. She had, furthermore, declined to attend the New Years ball to which all the camp turned out. It naturally occurred to Mrs. Gerson's friends that Dr. Adams' promised presence might have tended to keep her away, she had shown such a pronounced aversion to the doctor. They went so far as to question Dr. Adams whether she knew Mrs. Gerson. The doctor professed not to, though she said the face was familiar and all that. All that Mrs. Gerson would permit herself to say was: "I don't believe in woman doctors nohow."

It was plainly apparent that this was not altogether the cause of her intense aversion for Dr. Adams. It was in the nature of things to theorize that another reason existed, of which Dr. Adams probably knew nothing.

The observing women of Monarch could not help noticing how rapidly Mrs. Gerson had aged in the past two or three years. While it was true that she suffered from a chronic ailment before the excitement of Dr. Adams' arrival, her general health heretofore had been good. In this intervening short time in appearance she had aged fully a dozen years, and now was growing sickly and emanciated. No one seemed able to account for it.

Nothing of her antecedents prior to her residence in Monarch was known. She had removed to Monarch from a camp near by. Her husband was a miner. He had met his death while blasting near Monarch. Some said her daughter was by a former marriage, but the statement was generally taken as mere conjecture.

It was singular that despite Mrs. Gerson's dislike for Dr. Adams her daughter should be practically fond of her. Miss Gerson spent as much of her time in the doctor's office as she could spare from her mother's store. Dr. Adams reciprocated this affection. In her opinion she passed no hour better than when in the company of Miss Gerson, though she was scarcely 15.

There was one who vied with Miss Gerson for Dr. Adams' fellowship. This was Dr. Basil Cuthbert. Just as Dr. Adams had about concluded that the other physicians were going to show their displeasure at her arrival by ignoring her Dr. Cuthbert called. He was the first of the doctors to do this. He had postponed his visit to give the mob's enthusiasm time to wane.

Dr. Cuthbert was a childless widower. Up to the time Dr. Adams entered the field he enjoyed the most lucrative practice in the camp. Now this honor lay between him and Dr. Adams.

From the time of that first visit a friendship, bordering on attachment, arose between them. They were frequently at one another's office. And after they met in professional consultation.

Time of friendship and the fact that neither was young in years emboldened Dr. Cuthbert one day to propose marriage to Dr. Adams.

She told him she would "see about it."

* * * * *

Dr. Adams was at her office at an unusually late hour looking over her books. Without knocking, wild-eyed and breathless, Miss Gerson rushed in.

"Mother's dying!"

Half the camp knew of it before Dr. Adams and she had to force her way through a dense crowd standing in front of Mrs. Gerson's store.

She found that Dr. Cuthbert, Mrs. Gerson's physician, had preceded her. He was already making out the certificate of death.

It required but a cursory examination of Mrs. Gerson, and Dr. Adams solemnly nodded her approval of Dr. Cuthbert.

* * * * *

The undertaker's boy brought a note with an inclosure to Dr. Adams the following day. The note had been found on Mrs. Gerson. It was worn and faded and bore a date sixteen years back. It read:

"Dear Adaline,—If you prefer him to my friendship and he prefers you to me, elope—unite. Be devoted to him. He sacrifices his word of honor for you. But think of me neither in your success, for you may pity me, nor in your sorrow, for then you may envy me. Let me be to you as one you have never known. I forgive you both.

"Leyola Adams."

It would be expected of a woman so generous and kind as Dr. Adams that she adopt Miss Gerson. Her love for the young girl went further. It prompted her to hasten her acceptance of Dr. Cuthbert's offer.

THE WRITERS.

Michael Davitt, during his days in parliament, did nearly all his literary work in the house writing room, where silence is enforced, sitting invariably in the same seat.

Paul Bourget has announced his intention of paying a second visit to this country. He will come next spring and gather material for a novel dealing with American social life.

Theodor Mommsen, at the age of 82 years, has published a new work, "Roman Criminal Law," as a companion to his great "Roman Constitutional Law." It is a volume of 1,078 closely printed, large octavo pages.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson lately saw for the first time the statue of himself set up before the National theater in Christiania. He turned red in the face and demands that it be removed, as it is a libel on his personal appearance.

THE PARIS SHOW.

The Paris exposition catalogue will contain 100,000 names.

The parks of Milwaukee will be part of the exhibit of that city at the Paris exposition. A series of photographic views of the public parks of that city will be shown.

It took a bid of 275,000 francs to secure the privilege of letting out seats for the Paris exposition of 1900. For the 1889 exhibition the successful bid for the monopoly was 39,000 francs.

Governor Mount of Indiana is personally supervising an elaborate exhibit for his state at the Paris exposition. One of the features of this will be a series of large photographs to show the progress of the "good roads" movement in Indiana, where there are now 50,000 miles of graded and graveled highway.

PORT HOPE ROUSED.

The Guide Speaks of Efforts Made to Present Port Hope's Claim for Trent Canal.

The committee appointed to place the claims of our short cut to Lake Ontario for Trent Valley Canal, have constantly been met with the query, "Why have you allowed this to remain unknown to the public, why come at this late day to advocate your claims?" It is but fair to the committee and the public generally that some explanation be made.

There have been efforts made extending from 1833 until to-day, but unfortunately without avail. It was not until very recently that it was thought this end of the canal would be undertaken.

The most recent move was about eighteen years ago when a government engineer was sent to survey, make estimates, and report as to the advisability of building the canal this way. He carried out most faithfully the part he no doubt intended to perform, which was to knock Port Hope's aspirations higher than Gilroy's kite.

About a dozen citizens of Port Hope accompanied this learned and lightening calculator, drove out to Bewdley, the head of Rice Lake, admired the scenery, and drove back again. This engineer, although he did not use an instrument, nor did he leave the travelled road, so could not have even seen the proposed route of the canal, yet upon his return he made his report on this "survey." His figures will further show what we a farce we have to submit to. From Rice Lake to Port Hope $1,500,000. Hastings to Trenton, $834,000. To-day it is a well known fact that construction, damage to land, land, etc., will go above $5,000,000, instead of $834,000. So it is safe to presume that this engineer's "survey" of the Trent end was about as painstaking and reliable as of the Port Hope end.

After such treatment what could we do? Our representative was satisfied the Government was satisfied, and the engineer, with such preternatural abilities was more than satisfied for he had given Port Hope its quietus.

A gentleman in Port Hope made another effort to revive this matter, and to that end wrote a letter over a year ago to the Peterborough Review, which was published. Not forgetful of the former lack of success, our Board of Trade went quietly to work, and even the Guide was requested to publish nothing about the matter. Mr. Joseph S. Smith, a native of Port Hope, whose abilities as an engineer are well known and appreciated, chanced to be here on a visit and his services were secured to go over the ground, take the levels, etc. Mr. Smith gave every encouragement, and it was he who finally obtained a copy of Mr. Maingy's report of the survey of 1834, recently published in the Guide.

Then we had something tangible to work upon, and every means possible has since been taken to let the public know the facts of the case and acquaint the Government that a saving of two or three millions would be effected by adopting this short route—with a splendid harbor at its terminus. To quote the words of the 1834 report, which was made by Mr. Maingy, a gentleman of great ability and undoubted integrity:

"That the position of Port Hope is particularly favorably for the termination of such a work, must appear evident to every impartial observer; it is not only the shortest possible distance from Lake Ontario to Rice Lake, possessing a safe and commodious harbor but the communication from Lake Ontario to Rice Lake up to Lake Simcoe, can this route be completed for a sum not greater than is necessary, merely to open the navigation from the mouth of the Trent to Rice Lake. These are facts that cannot be refuted."

We have asked the Government that a resurvey be made and the matter thoroughly investigated before anything further be done, and we are sure the Government, under the circumstances cannot do otherwise before undertaking so vast an expenditure down the Trent.

An Unprofitable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the meaty portions from the shell.—

WONDERFUL CURES BY FAITH.

Michigan Man Who Has Healed 400 Cases by Laying on of Hands.

Niles City, Mich., Feb. 22.—John Griffit, a young laborer here, is attracting a great deal of attention by his marvelous powers of faith healing. It is said that up to date Griffit has treated over 400 cases, embracing nearly every variety of disease, and that he has effected a cure in each instance. He cannot explain his power, but he attributes it to a divine gift which he believes that he received when a child. He has visions and believes everything he dreams. He will undertake to cure only at certain times, at night time and in the new and full moon. Young Griffit is a bright-looking fellow, apparently quite intelligent. He invariably bestows his services free. No less wonderful than his curative feats is the fact that he can stop the circulation of the blood instantaneously, when the body will become cold as ice. With no apparent effort he can as speedily cause the blood to resume its natural course. He is not a member of any church and was never baptised in any faith. In case a vein is severed he can, without bandages of any form, stop the flow of blood instantly.

Never Met With Failure.

The young fellow is not familiar with the extent of his wonderful abilities, as he has never yet met with failure in his attempts to cure. Altogether he is an extraordinary character and is attracting widespread attention, especially in medical circles.

Griffit is 24 years old and was born in Miami County, Ind. At the age of 14 instinct told him that he possessed marvelous powers of healing, and his first case was that of a horse which was so badly afflicted with tumor of the neck that his father was about to kill the animal, when the boy interceded and commenced operations, and in a few days the animal was entirely well. His next case was that of a young woman suffering with goitre, which the boy cured in one week. His method is to lay hands on a patient and to pray.

IS MARS PEOPLED?

Such a Claim Advanced by a German Scientist.

"Is Mars inhabited?" has been asked very often during recent years and has engaged the serious attention of many astronomers and especially of M. Camille Flammarion, a noted French scientist and author.

Some new light is now thrown on this subject by Professor Ernst Haeckel, an eminent German philosopher, in a book entitled "World Problems. After pointing out that men have been studying the heavens for more than 4,500 years and have only been studying themselves for the last half century he says we may safely assume that the many fixed stars whose light requires thousands of years to reach us are suns and are surrounded by planets and worlds similar to those we know. We may also assume, he holds, that thousands of these planets have arrived at the same stage of development as our world, and it naturally follows that on them the same conditions of life prevail as on this earth, and there is no valid reason why human beings should not live there as they do here.

Professor Haeckel takes care to explain that there are doubtless many planets the temperature of which is such that life, as we understand the term, cannot be sustained on them. He thinks it very probable that there are types of animals and plants on some planets which are not to be found on the earth. According to him it is very likely that the biogenetic process exists on Mars, Venus and possibly some other planets of our system, as well as on planets of other solar systems, but plants on these planets have reached a higher stage of development than has been reached by animals and plants of this earth.

If we assume that Mars is inhabited—and Professor Haeckel seems pretty well satisfied that it is—we must assume, he holds, that the men and women whose home is on the planet are not such as we, but of a far higher type. They may resemble us exteriorly, but they are free from our physical defects and excel us in strength and gracefulness. It is in the intellectual sphere, however, that their superiority is most clearly shown. If there are human beings on these planets, says Prof. Haeckel, it is extremely probable that they far surpass ordinary men and women in intelligence.

The Band Concert.

The 57th Battalion Battalion band, under the proficient leadership of Mr. Glidden, gave another of their popular concerts in the market hall last night, to a crowded house. The music, as usual, was of a high order, the band having made considerable progress during the past few months. The audience was delighted, and showed their appreciation of the performance by enthusiastic applause as each number was rendered. Peterborough is proud of its band.

Dr. and Mrs. Ball were entertained by the members and adherents of St. Andrew's church last night. A more extended report will appear to-morrow.

ATTITUDE OF THE NATIONS.

New York, Feb. 22.—At the Southern Society dinner here last evening, Mr. Jno. Barrett, late Minister to Siam, said—"An important statement soon to be made in Congress will show that we have led the way in the attitude of nations in taking the strongest action possible for the preservation of the integrity of the Chinese Empire; that we have safeguarded our developing interests whether China remains intact or is divided, and that, while Great Britain, and Japan have accepted without reservation America's recommendations, Russia, Germany, France and Italy have hesitated only on the letter of terms, and not on the principle involved. This means then that freedom of trade a first outlined in the old Tientsin treaties is guaranteed by all the powers without discriminating duties, freight rates, inland taxes, throughout all China."

ADVERTISE IN THE MORNING TIMES.

A QUEER EXPLOSION.

HOW A MOUNTAIN LOCOMOTIVE CAME TO AN UNTIMELY END.

There Was Neither Fire in Her Furnace Nor Water in Her Boiler, and Yet She Managed to Blow Up in the Most Approved Style.

Mr. Henry Alquist, a prominent railroad man, relates the story of a curious wreck, the facts in which he will vouch for.

"It is such a remarkable thing," said Mr. Alquist to a reporter, "that I fear many will be inclined to brand it as 'pipe.' I have been railroading now for over 20 years, and never in all my varied experience have I seen such a unique and complete wreck as the one I speak of—that of engine 1,129 of the Rio Grande Western. Railroad men will tell you that locomotives seldom explode nowadays, but 1,129 did and in a very peculiar way.

"At the time this wreck occurred I was holding down the job of train dispatcher at Soldier Summit, Utah, and a tough old job it was. Never been there, I suppose? Well, Soldier Summit is a station on the top of one of the Wasatch divides, a bleak and lonely place, where the Rio Grande Western has a roundhouse and coal chute located. At the summit are long snowsheds covering the tracks. These sheds protect the line from the winter. And it is only due to this method that a train ever gets over the mountain.

"On both sides of the mountain the line winds down in a succession of winding curves to lessen the grade. Running off from the railway are switches, which, diverging from the grade, run up into the hills and gradually come to a dead level. These switchbacks, as they are called, are so constructed that they can be thrown from any point on the grade. And if a train breaks in two while ascending the steep grade the runaway cars can be switched on to one of these spurs, where the breakaway finally stops after it has run up the spur as far as the momentum attained in its descent will take it.

"All heavy trains have an extra locomotive before the grade is tackled. These are called helper engines and are kept in roundhouses at each side of the mountain with steam up.

"One night I got word from Clear Creek, a town in the western valley, that the 9:20 freight would be 30 minutes late on account of having to pull out a crippled engine, 1,129. She had burned out her flues and had to be hauled to Grand Junction for repairs.

"That night about 10 o'clock, after I had passed down the Salt Lake express, I heard the freight coughing up the long grade from Clear Creek. There was a snowstorm raging, and the wind howled around the station like the mischief. When the overdue 9:20 pulled into the shelter of the big snowsheds on the wind swept summit, the first thing I asked was, 'Where's the dead engine?'

"'Behind the doghouse!' shouted the 'con.' But as I held my lamp above my head I failed to see it. I was just about to call his attention to it when, during a lull in the storm, we plainly heard the familiar rattle of the rails as the runaway engine flew at lightning speed down the mountain. No. 1,129 had broken loose and was tearing down the grade to destruction.

"I jumped and pulled the lever which opened the spur switches. This I knew would prevent a smashup, as the engine would run up on the switchback and come to a stop. But I was too late. Almost at the same instant I threw the lever a terrific explosion was heard from far down the mountain. The runaway had exploded."

"I thought you said a moment ago, Mr. Alquist," interrupted The Scimitar man, "that the locomotive was a 'dead one?' If she had no fire under her boiler, how could she explode?"

"That was the only thing I couldn't understand myself," the railroad man replied. "I could easily see how the dead engine could break loose on that grade, and I could understand not hearing its descent during such a howling blizzard, but the explosion floored me. The only theory which in any way solved the mystery was that the old bottle was blown up by compressed air.

"You see, when the engine broke loose from the freight and started down the mountain the pistons in the cylinders began to act as air compressors. During the rough trip up her throttle probably jarred open, and as the speed increased with every revolution of her drivers her boiler soon filled with compressed air. It was not long before these flying pistons had worked up a pressure of nearly 500 pounds to the square inch, which came in faster than it could escape by the safety valve, and before the old machine reached Clear Creek her boiler let go."

Wanted to See the President.

The Washington Star says that a big, gawky country lad went to the White House the other day just as the president had gone out for a morning stroll.

"I wants ter see the president," he announced to the first man he met.

"Well, there goes the president now," said the man addressed, pointing to the president's retreating form.

"Dern my time!" the young man ejaculated. "He walks just like any other man," and the fellow struck out so that he could get close enough to see the president well.

Warwick castle is held by many to be the most beautiful seat in England. The large baronial hall is a magnificent room. It is decorated with the most perfect specimens of armor, furnished in a luxurious manner, and masses of flowers and large palms abound on every side.

SHAVING ACCIDENTS.

THE BARBER DISCUSSES THEM WITH THE MAN IN HIS CHAIR.

Chances to Cut Throats That Are Not Often Taken Advantage Of—Narrow Escapes From Serious Mishaps—A Father's Dream.

"Did it ever strike you," asked the little barber, "how easy it would be for the man that shaves you to kill you?"

The man in the chair sat up quickly and looked carefully at the barber, who was feeling the edge of the razor with one finger. The barber smiled to reassure his customer and said:

"It seems a queer question, I know, but it is a wonder to me that there are not a number of people killed in that way every year. It would be the easiest thing in the world for the barber as he wielded his razor to make one sweep with it and sever the jugular vein, and you would be dead almost on the instant. Suppose, for instance, that the barber should go insane. There would be nothing to prevent his doing such a thing, and you would have no warning nor any opportunity to save yourself.

"There is always a chance of a serious accident happening to the man in the chair. I have seen a number of such accidents and have a horror of even nicking the man I am shaving. In fact, such an occurrence makes me feel out of sorts for the rest of the day. It was only a few days ago that I almost had an accident that gave me a great fright and completely unnerved me. I was shaving a young man, and in passing from one side of the chair to the other a button of my waistcoat caught in his hair. It pulled a trifle, and he moved his head suddenly just as I went to put the blade to his face. I came within an ace of slashing him, and only a quick jump back saved him. The perspiration stood out on me, and I had to call one of the other men to finish shaving my customer.

"But the worst accident I ever saw in a barber shop occurred while I was working in a small town in the west. One of the patrons of the place was a business man whose 8-year-old daughter was lying at the point of death. Her father put in most of his time at her bedside. One afternoon while she was asleep he came in here to get shaved. He was so exhausted through lack of sleep that he fell asleep immediately after he had taken his seat in the chair next to the one behind which I was at work.

"He dreamed that some one had come into the place to tell him that his child had died. With a cry of alarm he started up just as the barber laid the razor against his neck. Into the flesh it sank. He was not yet thoroughly awake, and as he imagined that some one was holding him back from his child he threw out his hand to free himself, and his fingers closed over the blade of the razor. So dazed was he that he could not realize what had happened, but sat there in the chair, with the blood streaming from his throat and fingers.

"The man who had done the cutting was the first to act, although half crazed. He hurried for a doctor while we stanched the flow of blood the best we knew how. Even as the doctor was at work sewing up the wounds a messenger came to say that the little girl had died suddenly in the greatest agony, calling for her father just before she died. He was under the influence of ether at the time and did not know, but afterward, when he heard of the circumstances attending her death, he insisted that he had heard her call as he lay there asleep in the chair and that it was her cry that had caused him to make his sudden movement.

"For years after the accident he continued to shave in the same shop where it had occurred, and it was never mentioned. He carried a reminder of it for the remainder of his life. In addition to the scar on his throat, the fingers of his right hand were all drawn up and useless.

"Sudden movements while in the barber's chair are always apt to be attended with serious results, and I could recall dozens of instances where it has been only the merest chance that has prevented serious if not fatal mishaps. Nine times out of ten where the person getting shaved receives a nick and lays the blame on the barber he should thank the wielder of the razor that it was no worse. The probabilities are that it was quick action by the barber that prevented a bad cut. A slight nick often would have been a case for the doctor or coroner were it not for the watchfulness of the barber. Here yesterday I happened to draw blood from a young fellow's face near his ear, and he made a great fuss about it, until I showed him that it was only the sudden withdrawal of the razor which resulted in the slight nick that prevented him losing a good part of his ear. Then he was grateful and thanked me, besides promising to be more careful in the future.

"But there are other ways the barber has of getting even," continued the little barber after relathering one side of his customer's face. "There is no need of his slashing a man. He can inflict injuries that will make his victim decidedly uncomfortable, and at the same time the latter will not be aware of what is being done." What the barber meant by this last remark his victim did not ask.—New York Sun.

Didn't Laugh With the Rest.

Hopeless and Helpless.

The consequences of a diseased condition of the stomach and digestive and nutritive system are most disastrous to the whole body. One by one every organ may become involved. The misery is maddening. The most extreme cases of "stomach trouble" and the evils resulting from it have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It strengthens the stomach, purifies the blood and builds up the body with sound healthy flesh.

"I was taken with severe headache," writes Thomas A. Swarts, Box 103, Sub-Station C, Columbus, Ohio, then cramps in the stomach, and my food would not digest, then kidney and liver trouble, and my back got weak so I could scarcely get around. I just gave money to the doctors whenever I thought they would do me any good, but the more I doctored the worse I got until six years passed. I had become so poorly I could only walk in the house by the aid of chair, and I got so thin I had given up to die, thinking that I could not be cured. Then I saw one of my neighbor boys and he said, "Take my advice and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and make a new man out of yourself." The first bottle helped me so I thought I would get another, and after I had taken eight bottles in about six weeks I was weighed and found I had gained twenty-seven (27) pounds. I have done more hard work in the past eleven months than I did in two years before, and I am as stout and healthy to-day, I think, as I ever was."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure biliousness.

How Wealth is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorest classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

Away Too Low.

The Times issued a poster on Saturday signed by the Town Clerk, on the authority of the Board of Works requesting the citizens to shovel the snow from the sidewalks in front of their walks. The council apparently realizes that the new walks are away too low, and are consequently sure to be submerged with water when the thaw sets in. All the shovelling you can do, gentlemen, will not raise the walks. They are bound to be under water when the spring freshet begins.

FAREWELL TO DR. BELL.

An Address from the Congregation of St. Andrew's Church.

Lack of space prevented our giving the details in our Saturday issue of the pleasant gathering in St. Andrew's church to meet Dr. and Mr. Bell before they leave to take up their residence in Toronto, where the doctor has accepted an appointment as assistant physician in the asylum. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Wood, of St. Paul's church.

Rev. J. G. Potter, the pastor, presided as chairman and in doing so made happy reference to the ausec of the gathering—a desire on the part of many friends in St. Andrew's to meet Dr. and Mrs. Bell, who have so long been identified with the church, before their departure and express their feelings towards them.

Short addresses making reference to Dr. Bell and Mrs. Bell were made by Messrs. R. E. Wood, Geo. Edmison, T. C. Elliott, W.John McClelland, Alex Campbell, on behalf of the Session, and Peter Kerr, representing the Young Men's Guild. Mr. F. A. Walden, secretary of the Board of Managers, then read the following address—

Lieut.-Col. R. W. Bell, M.D.

Dear Sir,—On the eve of your departure for Toronto to take up the important work for which you have been very fitly chosen, the members and adherents of St. Andrew's church take this opportunity of doing you honor and of manifesting their interest in your welfare. We most heartily congratulate you on your appointment and feel proud that you are so worthy to fulfill the requirements of the duties imposed upon you.

We, nevertheless, must express our most profound regret that on this occasion you are compelled to sever your connection with us. No one will be more missed than yourself, for in the varied experiences and incidents of the church's history, you have been ever constant in your devotion to her interests. For upwards of 30 years you have been identified in the management of the affairs of the church. For a number of years in the capacity of secretary-treasurer you labored most zealously without any emoluments of office, and latterly as chairman of the Board of Managers you have manifested such a personal and faithful interest that you have easily won the esteem, admiration and respect of all who have labored with you. We are fully aware that all of this has demanded much of your time, thought and energy, which you have always given so cheerfully even when in discharge of your duty, it meant much personal loss. It will, however, be a source of pleasure to know that to your constancy, abiding interest and persistent policy the present prosperous condition of the church is largely due.

We wish therefore to convey to you as we herein do, our heartiest appreciation, and most grateful thanks for the long years of earnest and valuable service you have rendered the congregation. You have not been without your laurels in other departments of life. In military, society and public circles you have bee placed in the chair of honor, and your life both public and private has always reflected great credit upon St. Andrew's church, for which we are devotedly thankful.

We all join in wishing you all success in your new sphere of service for which you are so eminently qualified, and we do trust that for many years to come you may find circling around you ties of friendship as strong as those you now leave, and stronger, if possible.

To Mrs. Bell, whose public benevolence is also so well known, and her most unostentatious yet fervent Christian spirit so much felt, w ealso extend our best wishes. Our earnest prayer to God is that you may both long be spared to enjoy the blessings of life and to continue the practical expression of your Christian character.

We look forward with bright expectations to the privilege an dpleasure of your presence with us from time to time.

On behalf of the congregation,

JAMES G. POTTER,
Minister

Elders—William Fowler, Alexander Stewart, Jas. Petrie, John Mathieson, Wm Stevens, Alexander Campbell, Session Clerk.

Managers—Andrew McFarlane, J. D. Tully, R. W. McWilliams, Robert Rae, T. C. Elliott, F. A. Walden, Secretary Treasurer.

This address will be embossed and illuminated.

Dr. Bell made a felling reply, in which he referred to the honor done him and expressed his sorrow at parting with friends with whom he had been associated for twenty-three years. On behalf of himself and Mrs. Bell he thanked them for their kindness.

During the evening Miss Faulkner rendered solos in a delightful manner, and refreshments were served by the ladies. A most enjoyable social time was spent.

Chance for Expert Canoeists.

Lt.-Col. J. Z. Rogers, of the Peterborough Canoe Co., received a letter from a Chicago Co., a few days ago, asking if he can recommend "two expert canoeists, Indians preferred, who can work a canoe with or without paddles, do 'upset' work and altogether make an interesting act." The company has several parks and wish to make the water display an occasional feature. The company is willing to pay about $10 per week to each man and expenses, railway fare included, from June 1st to September 1st. Any canoeist who desires to close with this summer engagement can communicate with Col. Rogers or the Times.

WHAT A BREAK DOWN MEANS

A Type-Setting Machine Goes on Strike and the Editor of this G. F. J. Suffers.

We have been forced to disappoint our subscribers in many of the country towns and villages served by the early mail through one of our type-setting machines getting out of order. On Saturday last the Times was two hours late, with the result that we had many complaints, of which the following are samples:

Lakefield, Feb. 24.

Editor Times—No Times this a.m. although the train arrived on time. Would it help matters if your numerous subscribers here sent you an alarm clock or a piece of string for your finger?

J. F. LILLICRAP.

Editor Times,—No paper this morning. What does it mean? We all look for the Times as we do our meals. Try and get up out of bed a little earlier.

Editor Times,—We all take the Times here, and when it fails to appear, as it did this morning, their is weeping and wailing, with a few not very complimentary remarks thrown in concerning yourself. For heavens sake, prod your mailing clerk up;

Lakefield, Nov. 24.

Editor Times,—No paper again this morning and many disappointed.

M RAY, Asst. Postmaster.

The above is a fair sample of the life we endure when anything goes wrong with our machinery. The Times is now regarded by the people of all the towns and villages in this district as a part of their very being. For the benefit of our friends we may say that we have placed an order for a third type-setting machine, which when it arrives will enable us to get the paper out in time. In the meantime we hope to catch the early mails.

PERSONALS.

Mr. A. D. Lawnmore, leader of the Cobourg band, was in town Saturday.

Mr. W. H. Graham, of Kingston, spent Sunday with his brother-in-law Ald. Denne.

Mrs. W. L. Innes, of Simcoe, is spending a short time with her parents, at "Glenmorrison."

The many friends in Peterborough of Mr. Geo. W. Sequin, who filled the position of bookkeeper for Messrs. Corry & Laverduere, canal contractors, will be pleased to learn that he has been appointed collector of taxes for Ottawa city. During Mr. Sequin's residence here he has made many warm friends. The salary attached to the office of collector is, we believe, about $1800 per annum. The Times extends its congratulations.

ALASKA WORKER.

Gained 44 Lbs. by Leaving off Coffee and Taking Postum Food Coffee.

Some people in Alaska have work to do. A widow woman, Mrs. Adda Crossley, of Juneau, says she has been doing the cooking for eight men through the winter, and during the summer for fifteen more. She went to Alaska an invalid, and had been in poor health four or five years before going. It seems that her sickness was caused and kept up by the use of coffee. When she finally discovered the real cause, she abandoned coffee, and finding Postum Cereal Coffee in the stores, took up its use.

She says; "I commenced using it once a day for two months, then twice a day. I only weighed 80 pounds when I started and could hardly get up and down the stairway. After leaving off coffee and beginning the use of Postum I took up the work for eight men. I improved steadily, and in December last weighed 124 pounds, which is more than I have weighed for 20 years. My face is round and ruddy. Friends say if it was not for my gray hair I would pass for 30 very easily. There is no doubt that the words on the famous trademark, 'It makes red blood,' are true."

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

The excursionists to Ottawa returned Saturday.

The door receipts at the band cincert on Friday night amounted to $65.20.

Don't forget the hockey match to-night. It is the first game of the finals.

Hon. J. R. Stratton will give a dinner to the members of the House and others on Wednesday evening.

In spite of the terribly heavy state of the country roads Saturday's market was one of the largest of the season .

There will be a social evening for men in the school room of All Saints' this evening under the auspices of the men's union.

The funeral of the late Miss Detcher who died in Port Hope, took place yesterday from the residence of Mrs. Geo. Cairns, to the Little Lake cemetery.

While in Halifax a few days ago Mr. R. J. Stewart made the Norwood boys who have gone to South Africa with the second contingent members of the Canadian Order of Foresters.

The Times received a letter for publication in regard to the apathy of the Chief of Police in the matter of the cocking main. The letter bears no signature and therefore cannot appear.

Mr. John Lawnmower, of Cobourg, who took part in the 57th Battalion band concert on Friday evening, has secured employment with the Canadian General Electric Co. Mr. Lawnmower is a decided acquisition to the band.

The Times invites inspection of its mailing lists by intending advertisers. It has a circulation amongst people who are able to buy and pay for what they get, that it has no cause to be ashamed of. Everybody reads the Times.

On Sunday morning last Mr. G. J. Galvin, of Lakefield, met with a severe accident. He was on his way to church when he slipped and fell on his right shoulder, dislocating it. Dr. D. Fraser was called in and reduced the dislocation and Mr. Galvin is now getting along nicely.

Our George street contemporary works off the following—"Some of the Boers will have a Chill Turner, too, when the first squadron of the Canadian Mounted Infantry gets to the front in South Africa." When Mr. Turner sees this in cold print he will probably write our contemporary—"Yokome out here and you will have a chill that will take away your breath."

Lindsay Post—'Rah for Lindsay birds! A very quiet cocking main was pulled off last night in a barn in South Ops, a few miles south-east of the town. The match was between Lindsay and Toronto parties for $100 a side and the bets on the mains. Sports from Toronto, Oshawa, Whitby, Oakville, Orillia, etc., were present and a lot of money changed hands. The Lindsay birds conquered and the visitors lost wads of money. No doubt about it—we're a sporty people.

Trent Canal Deputation.

The Globe's Ottawa correspondent says: One of the largest deputations that has ever struck Ottawa interviewed the Government this morning regarding the Trent Valley Canal. The 150 gentlemen present came from points along the line of the proposed canal from the Georgian Bay to Trenton. They protested against the selection of the Port Hope-Rice Lake alternative route, which was suggested by a deputation which interviewed the Government last week. In regard to the above, the Times thinks it is hardly correct. We believe the deputation was to Ottawa all right, but it only represented the lower section of the canal. It is a debatable point as to whether the route by way of Port Hope is not the best.

An Accident

An accident to one of our typesetting machines during Friday night kept the paper two hours late on Saturday morning. We have ordered a third machine, so that we will not be obliged to disappoint our readers in future.

Church Notes.

Rev. Mr. Shorey preached the anniversary sermons in the Eastern Methodist church, Napanee, yesterday.

Rev. Mr. Kilgour, of Napanee, occupied the pulpit of the George street Methodist church yesterday morning and evening.

Rev. Dr. Torrance was sufficiently recovered from his recent indisposition to be able to conduct services in St. Paul's church yesterday.

Editor Morning Times .

Sir,—Please answer the following—

1. Who was responsible for the grade or levels of the granolithic walks put down last summer?
2. Did the town pay for cleaning up the streets on which pavements were laid after the contractors got through with their work?
3. What does the Town Engineer put his time in at during the winter months?
4. What is the salary of the Chief of Police?

Peterborough, Feb. 24, 1900.

Reply—(1)—The Town Engineer. (2)—The contract specified that the streets were to be left in good condition after the paving was done as the contractors found them. The condition was never, we believe, enforced by the Engineer, who kept al arge force of men and teams following the contractors levelling and cleaning up the streets. (3) We don't know. THE CANADA BUSINESS COLLEGE

CHATHAM, ONT.

Canada's greatest school of SHORTHAND and BUSINESS training, still holds a very strong lead over its contemporaries.

No other evidence of this claim need be offered than the following, which shows how widely this justly popular school is patronized.

117 Cities, Towns and Villages in Canada, United States and Newfoundland represented in the attendance during the year to date.

39 Counties in Ontario, six of the United States, together with five from Manitoba and Alberta, have sent their representatives. They came from the Atlantic on the east to the Pacific on the west. Distance proves no hindrance to those who are determined to attend the best.

The present is an excellent time of year to make a start. Pupils are admitted at any time. For catalogue, address.

LIVELY LAKEFIELD.

Latest Budget of War News from Peterborough's Northern Suburb.

The Patriotic concert, arranged by Court Lakefield, No. 43, C.O.F. to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of their existence, was held in the Town Hall on Thursday evening.

The Hall was nicely decorated with quantities of flags and bunting, a special feature being a large number of mounted deers' head, the badge of the order, dressed with Forestric colors of red, white and green; prominent at the back of the stage was a noble moose head. Despite the heavy storm of the day a large crowd gathered in the hall and showed their appreciation of the programme by encoring every single item of the various performers. Special mention must be made of Miss Hendren and Messrs Gamsby of Orono, and T. H. Benson, though, as remarked above, the efforts of all who appeared on the platform were thoroughly appreciated and liberally applauded. After payment of all expenses the net proceeds, which will probably be about $25, will be forwarded to the Patriotic Fund.

Shortly after the commencement of the above mentioned concert an alarm of fire was sent in from the Smith side of the river, where Mr. Arthur Robson's house had been noticed burning; the house was a frame one and the fire had obtained a firm hold before being noticed, having originated above the kitchen. Nothing could be done to save the building but many willing hands removed the contents in short order, and the loss on the furniture, etc., will be very trifling: the insurance of between $300 and $400 was in the Commercial Union Co., and Mr. Robson's loss will amount to some $600 over and above this sum.

The Ladies Working Association has been very busy and a large consignment of over three hundred articles has been completed in ten days and is now on the way to headquarters of the Red Cross in Toronto for shipment per S.S. Monterey.

Weekly meetings will continue to be held for the continuance of the good work. In this connection attention is drawn to the lecture on the Red Cross Society by the Rev. G. Warren to be given next Tuesday in the Town Hall. A collection will be taken but admission is free.

THE RUMORS OF RELIEF OF LADYSMITH AGAIN PROVE TO BE UNTRUE

BOERS ASSEMBLING TO OPPOSE ROBERTS.

A Large Boer Army Concentrating Near Bloemfontien to Oppose British.

BRITISH REGIMENTS SHOW GREAT GALLANTRY.

The Idea That the Boers Are Raising the Relief of Ladysmith is Premature, the Advance Being Pursued in the Face of Stubborn Resistence.

London, Feb. 27.

A despatch to the Daily Chronicle from Paardeberg, dated Friday, Feb. 23 says:—"Gen. Cronje's attempt to mount guns was frustrated by our artillery."

London, Feb. 27

Mr. Winston Churchill, in a despatch to the Morning Post from Frere Camp, dated Sunday, says: "The idea that the Boers are raising the seige of Ladysmith is premature. The advance is being pursued in the face of the most stubborn opposition and of heavy losses. President Kruger's grandson is among the Boers killed."

Mr. Churchill then proceeds to describe heavy fighting last Friday in which the Enniskillings approached within 500 yards of the summit of a rocky Boer position and then gallantly charged in the face of a hail of bullets. He says: "After repeated attempts, however, and having lost severely they recognized that they were unable to preqail. Nevertheless they refused to retreat but laid down on the slope behind a shelter of wall The Connaughts and the Dublin Fusiliers were sent to their support but the light faded and the night closed in before the main attack had developed."

London, Feb. 27.

The Times has the following from Pietermaritzburg, dated Friday, Feb. 23: "The Dublin Fusiliers have again distinguished themselves by volunteering to take Grobbler's Kloot, which they did. This gallant battalion, which began the campaign eight hundred and fifty strong can to-day be said to muster on parade between 100 and 200 of its original members."

London, Fec. 27, 4.20 a.m.

The Boers are assembling an army near Bloemfontein with which to dispute the invasion of Lord Roberts. This intelligence comes from Pretoria by way of Lorenzo Marques. The commandos are descriced as 'hastening from all quarters of the two republics.'

No estimate is made of their numbers, but the withdrawal of the Boers from most of the places where they have been in contact with the British except the district near Ladysmith may raise the resisting force to 30,000 men. This figure assumes that the Boers have between 50,000 and 70,000 men in the field.

The gathering of this army across the path of Lord Roberts gives significance to General Cronje's standfast defence. He has engaged the corps of Lord Roberts for ten days now and whether he is relieved or not he has given time for the dispersed Boer factions to get together and to prepare positions to receive the British advance when Cronie is overcome and Lord Roberts moves forward. It is difficult to conceive that the Boers are strong enough to take the offensive and to rescue General Cronie from his precarious situation.

The War Office had nothing after midnight to indicate his collapse and he may hold out for a few days.

REPULSED WITH HEAVY LOSS.

Pretoria, Feb. 23.—A special despatch from Colesberg, dated Feb. 22, says that Commandant Delarey moved out and occupied a position east and south of Arundel, where the British were encamped. At sunrise the British attacked the Boers with cannon, infantry and cavalry, the Boers replying. Late in the evening, when the Boers were attacked in their rear by a force presumably from Naauwpoort, rendering the Boer position untenable, the British attempted to storm the Boer cannon, but were repulsed with heavy loss. The Boer casualties, as far as known were two men wounded.

NEARLY IN TOUCH WITH WHITE.

Colenso, Feb. 24.—Buller's advance began on Thursday. The country is extremely difficult, and the advance slow and costly. The British are attacking a series of entrenched kopjes in a steep broken and wooded country full of gullies. The enemy is taking full advantage of the ground to maintain a ceaseless fire on our front and flanks. It is probable that they are making a rapid retirement to their second line of defence. The advance by Wynne's brigade on Thursday, and Hildyard's on Friday, west of the railway, was met by a flank fire from the Railway Hill, but was not checked. Buller is now within two miles of being in touch with Ladysmith, but this is the hardest part, and we must expect very severe fighting.

MORE CASUALTIES FOR BULLER.

London, Feb. 26.—General Buller, in a despatch from Colenso, dated Sunday, February 25, reports the British casualties on February 20 were 17 killed and 90 wounded, among the Somersets and Dorsets, and that on February 22 and 23 twelve officers were wounded.

MILITIA REACH THE CAPE.

London, Feb. 26.—The military critic of The Morning Leader says—

"The militia are now arriving at the Cape, and they will be able to release the regulars on the lines of communication, who can be pushed to Roberts, Clements' and Gatacre's aid.

"Buller burrows forward, but the enemy around Ladysmith is not yet in a hurry to be gone.

"It is rumored that Buller and Roberts are waiting to strike the final blow simultaneously on Majuba."

RETREATED ON LADYGREY.

London, Feb. 26.—In Cape the British arms are steadily advancing. Barkly East is now in their possession, according to a despatch from that district, the Boers evacuating the place, retreating on Ladygrey, and wiring President Steyn for reinforcements to prevent their surrender.

The Pretoria Government proclaimed February 26 and February 27 days of thanksgiving and prayer, presumably in memory of the battle of Majuba Hill.

A special despatch from Kimberley says its inhabitants have planned to erect a statue to Cecil Rhodes in recognition of his services during the siege.

OURSELVES

We have to apologise to our readers for the delay in getting out the paper this morning, caused by the fire last night. The smoke drove our staff from the building, and the supply of gas for our type setting machines was cut off, as well as the electric light. It will take a day or two to get our premises in order again, so we ask our readers to bear with us in the meantime.

FIRE NOTICE.

The George Matthews Company, Limited, will be open for business to-day in the store formerly occupied by Ward & Hall, George street.

New Names On The Death Roll.

Ottawa, Feb. 26.—The Militia Department has received word that two of the Canadians wounded in the engagement at Paardeberg, on Sunday week, have since died. Their names are Captain Arnold, of Winnipeg, and Private McCreary.

CRONJE SURRENDERS!

London, Feb. 27.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts: Paardeberg, Feb. 27.—General Cronie has surrendered unconditionally and is now a prisoner in our camp.

London, Feb. 27.—London is wild with excitement over the surrender of Cronje's army. Thousands of people are on the streets singing patriotic songs.

The surrender of Gen. Cronje's force relieve the strain in London, which was becoming acute and General Roberts can now turn his attention to Joubert.

London, Feb. 27.—The force under General Cronje numbered 8,000 men, and about 3,000 non-combatants. The fire of the British was awful, over 1,000 dead and many wounded being recorded.

VICTORIOUS COLTS.

They Win First Half of the Finals with Straffords by a Score of 6 to 3.

The first half much-talked of game between the Straffords and the Colts for the championship of Ontario in the junior class was played in the rink last night. The crowd was large considering the cold night, and the game was half an hour late in starting. This we believe was not the fault of the officials but on account of the goal nets. These institutions were put up for the first time in Peterborough and we hope that all clubs in the O.H.A. will prize them hereafter, as a lot of disputes will be saved. "Pick" Lillie refereed the game in a very efficient manner and we believe gave satisfaction to both teams.

The puck was faced at 9.05, and in two minutes the first yell went up as King shot a goal from the side, but two minutes later Stratford tallied one on a fluky lift from centre. It took King six minutes to score the second game for Peterborough from a pass from Whitcroft, who by the way played a "horse of a game" all through, and two minutes later he brought it again from centre, dodging four men in succession, and with a wicked shot tallied the third goal for Peterborough. During the next 10 or 12 minutes the puck flew up and down the ice but most of the time in close proximity to Stratford goal. Half time ended with score 3—1 in favor of Peterborough.

Three minutes after the whistle sounded for the second half Stratford put the puck through, but it only took Morgan two minutes to even things up, and Whitcroft followed his example by shooting another in 3 minutes. A face of in front of Peterborough's goal a minute later gave Stratford a chance to yell, with their second goal in this half. After a lot of hard work on the part of both teams in which close checking was the feature, King passed to Whitcroft who scored the last game of the night, the total result being 6 goals to 3 in favor of the Colts. This is a good lead with which to go to Stratford on Thursday night and with a fair field and no favor our Colts should be champions for the year 1900.

The Canadian General Electric Co.

A deputation from the Board of Trade waited upon the Council in reference to offering further inducements to the Canadian General Electric Co., to erect their contemplated new buildings in Peterborough instead of at Toronto. Mr. T. E. Bradburn presented the following resolution carried at the Board of Trade's last meeting—

Moved by Mr. D. W. Dumble, seconded by Mr. H. LeBrun,—Whereas the Council of the Board of Trade have been given to understand that the Canadian General Electric Company are contemplating the erection of a new building, which has become necessary from the increase of their business, and that it has not yet been decided whether the same is to be erected at Peterborough or Toronto, and they believe that the same might be secured to the town of Peterborough by granting to the said company some inducements and that in negotiations which have taken place between the Town and the Company, the only matter remaining in question between them is as to the right of the Company to place poles on the streets of the town for the transmission of electric power from their proposed power house at Nassau to their works.

The Council of the Board of Trade strongly urge upon the Town Council that an earnest endeavor should be made to arrange this matter in a way satisfactory to the Company so as to make the securing here of the new building a certainty, and they would recommend that the said Company should be granted pole rights on the streets of the town free of charge so long as they continue to manufacture at their present works and have their power house at Nassau, providing, however, that if the said Company should hereafter supply power to others than themselves they should be charged the same pole rental as other companies, and that said Company will allow their poles to be used on the request of the Council by others carrying electric power on fair terms as to sharing first cost and cost of maintenance, and that a committee to attend the meeting of the Town Council this evening to urge this matter on them be appointed, and that the following be the committee:—Peter Hamilton, J. W. Garvin, D. W. Dumble, J. H. Burnham, W H Hill and T. E. Bradburn.—Carried.

Peterborough, Feb. 26, 1900.

Messrs. Peter Hamilton and D. W. Dumble addressed council and urged the expediency of granting the privileges embodied in the foregoing resolution. We could not afford they urged to risk the loss of the company's proposed concession.

Mr. J. W. Garvin and Mr. W. H. Hill also expressed themselves strongly in favor of the resolution and looked forward to a very large increase in the number of Peterborough citizens by reason of the proposed extension of their premises.

The Mayor replied that he would do everything he can, not only to help the General Electric Co., but also any other business concern contemplating locating here. He felt sure also of the unanimous support of council in this matter.

REPORTS.

Finance.

Ald. T. H. G. Denne, presented the following report:

Gentlemen:—Your Finance Committee beg leave to report as follows:

1. That the salary of Mr. F. W. Miller, Relief Officer, be $125 a year, the increase of $25.00 a year to date from January last.

2. In reference to the complaint of Mr. John Green, as the Canadian Pacific Railway paid the greater part of the amounts paid to the other parties your committee recommend that when the deputation from this Council is in Toronto to interview the Government regarding the Chemong Lake bridge they also see Mr. Leonard, of the C.P.R. in regard to Mr. Green's claim.

3. Your Committee recommend that no action be taken on the application of Mr. S. E. Firman for assistance to go to Colorado.

4. Your Committee recommend that the Board of Education demand for this year be paid as requested by the Board.

5. Your committee examined the bonds given by the Town officials and found them satisfactory.

6. Your committee recommend payment of accounts referred to them for certification thereto.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Ald. Denne wished to amend clause two by recommending that Mr. Green be paid $150 in settlement of his long standing claim—the same amount as awarded Mr. Lepiante for similar damages.

Ald. Dawson favored giving Mr. Green the same proportion of the $150 given Mr. Lepiante and Mr. Harper—$25—and let Mr. Green fight with the C.P.R. and the Matthew's Co., for their share of the damages.

Ald. Rogers moved, seconded by Ald. Dawson,—That Mr. Green's claim be referred back to Finance Committee with power to settle with Mr. Green on the same basis that other claims were settled with, on a favorable report from the Town solicitor on the matter. Also that it is understood that the deputation going to Toronto on Wednesday, wait upon Mr. Leonard of the C.P.R. in regard to said claim.

The report was then adopted after clause two had been struck out.

Property Committee.

Ald. Clinkscale presented the following:

Gentlemen,—Your Property and Market Committee beg leave to report as follows:—

1. Your Committee as instructed enquired into the amount of insurance held by the Council and find it to be as follows:

On the Town's interest in the Court House, etc	$6000
On the hose tower $500, and hose in the tower $500	1000
On band hall, furniture, music and instruments	800
On the town clock	500
On the Smith street bridge	2000
On the steam fire engine against explosion	1000

On enquiring the Secretary of the Town Trust Commissioners informs us that the Commissioners hold the following insurance on the Town property:

On the Market Block Building, $16,645; fixtures, $200; plate glass, $1,155. Total $18,000.

On the Fire Hall, Town Offices, etc. building, $7,250; heating apparatus, $750, total $8,000. Grand total $27,000.

2. Your Committee recommend that the hour at which grocers, etc., may purchase on the market be changed to 10 o'clock in the forenoon and that a by-law be prepared for this purpose.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Ald. Rogers moved that clause two come into force at expiration of present season—Carried.

Ald. Dawson strongly opposed the change of hour at which hucksters may purchase on the market. He thought the hour at which citizens would thus have to attend would be too early and thus seriously affect the markets patronage.

Ald. Denne and Sawers were afraid that a change in market regulations would prove injurious.

Ald. Oke said that upon enquiry he had not heard one dissenting voice against the proposed change, which he felt sure would prove beneficial to all concerned.

Finally it was moved in amendment that instead of changing the hour to 10 o'clock, the by-law be left as it is—Carried.

Report was then carried as amended on the following vote:

Ayes—Ald. Weir, Sawers, Dawson, C. R. Oke, Robinson, Denne, Corkery.

Nays—Ald. Rogers, Clinkscale and Oke.

Reports of Board of Works, Manufacturing Committee and Committee on Appointments are unavoidably left over until to-morrow's issue.

Exemption to Electric Company.

Council then went into committee of the whole on the second reading of a by-law to grant additional exemption to the Canadian Electric Company.

In the matter of pole privileges for conveyance of power from Warsaw to the Company's works, Ald. Davison moved, that they be given a life franchise free of tax, for the erection and maintenance of poles on Smith and Monaghan road, providing they manufacture in Peterborough.

Ald. Rogers did not see why the Edison works should be exempted in the matter of street privileges and more than other companies. In fact an institution conveying power along public streets for its own, is not so much entitled to privileges as one conveying power for the public's benefit.

Committee here rose and by-law was referred back to manufacturers committee to reconsider the clause providing for pole franchise. All other clauses were apparently satisfactory to council.

After considerable other business was transacted, which is unavoidably left out, the council then adjourned.

CHINA HALL AND THE MATTHEWS CO. BURNED

The Most Disastrous Fire That Has Occurred in Town for Many Years.

OVER TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS DAMAGE

China Hall and the Matthews Establishment Together With Offices Above Totally Destroyed by Fire Early This Morning—Other Losses.

One of the most serious conflagrations that has taken place in years, occurred in Peterborough last night, when the stores belonging to the Macfarlane Co., Ltd., were totally destroyed. The buildings were the property of Mr. T. Bradburn, and were valued at $11,000.

The fire is said to have begun in the basement of China Hall, and is supposed to have originated from the furnace. Mr. Wilson, when seen by the Times, at four o'clock this morning stated that he could not account how the fire originated, and was by no means sure that it started in his basement. He was of opinion that it began in the basement next door. Be that as it may, it was first seen about one o'clock through clouds of smoke emerging from the windows. In the rear of China Hall basement was stored a number of barrels of coal oil, which, when they became ignited, soon caused the entire building to be enveloped. The elevator afforded easy means for the flames to ascend, and in an incredibly short space of time the upper storeys were a seething mass of flames.

The fire brigade were quickly on spot, and five streams were turned on the burning building. It was soon discovered that the Matthews store was also doomed, and the work of removing the stock from it was begun. The fire rapidly extended to this building. For a time it looked as though the entire block was doomed The brick wall dividing the Matthew's Co., premises from the fine store of Mr. Robert Neil, stayed the flames however, and prevented a more serious conflagration. A line of hose was taken up the hallway to the roof of the Times' building, and a stream turned on with good effect.

The following are the losses, so far as ascertained:

T. Bradburn, buildings, $11,000, covered by insurance.

The Matthews Company moved the stock to the empty store, formerly occupied by Warde & Hall.

Much sympathy will be felt for Mr. Wilson who is a heavy loser.

The hose which was brought up on the roof from the stairway between the Times office and Palace restaurant burst, the result being that Messrs. LeBrun & Fletcher's fine premises sustained severe injury by water coming through the ceilings drowning the sleeping apartments, and restaurant below. The loss will total several hundred dollars.

The Macfarlane Wilson Co., $10,000. Insured for $6,000 and $1,000 on fixtures.

The Matthews Company's loss is not known, as considerable of their stock was saved. It will probably amount to $2,000 or more.

Dr. Morrow, dentist, all his instruments and furniture. Partly insured.

R. E. Wood, law office, books and furniture. No insurance.

The top flat over China Hall was occupied by an Orange lodge and the furniture in it was a total loss.

R. Neil, through smoke and water, suffered a slight loss—probably about $1,000

The Times Printing Co. also suffered in the same way, to the extent of probably $250. The first effect of the fire was the cutting off of the light, which prevented our night staff from getting out the morning paper on time. As we go to press the fire is burning, but under control.

J. J. Lundy, office and furniture; total loss. No insurance.

NOTES.

Geo. Evans, one of the firemen, received a severe cut. He was shoved violently against a plate glass window, which broke, cutting him so severely on the cheek that several stitches had to be put in.

The brigade worked heroically and put up a desperate fight.

The night was bitterly cold, the thermometer registering about 20 degrees below zero.

The alarm was sounded by P. C. Adams.

FIRE NOTICE.

The George Matthews Company, Limited, will be open for business to-day in the store formerly occupied by Ward & Hall, George street.

Morning Times

NO INTERFERENCE.

President Kruger, it is said, has received assurances from powerful friends that Great Britain will never be allowed to rob the Transvaal and the Orange Free State of their independence. President Kruger is out in his calculation if he thinks that Britain will be deterred from her proper course by the intervention of any "powerful friends" of the Transvaal. The British Government unless it is possessed with an amount of stupidity which passes the bounds of belief, will never again allow these two republics to attain a position in which they can be a menace to British supremacy in South Africa. Great Britain will not be vindictive—the mistake she has usually made in dealing with a conquered nation is to go to the extreme of generosity in order not to be accused of even the semblance of unfairness or injustice. But the lesson she has learned in the case of the Transvaal will probably strike home, and hereafter she will deal out justice, fair and substantial, but not weakened by the sentimental ideas of those who are too prone to take up the weaker cause, simply because it is the weaker, without considering its merits.

If Britain grants to these republics the privilege of being members of a confederacy of South African colonies with a central Government at Cape Town, each member of the confederacy having power to deal with purely local affairs, as is the case in Canada, she will have done more than justice. But she will make a fatal blunder if she allows the Boer language to be used in the schools, the courts, or the legislature. There should be no such thing as a dual language tolerated in South Africa. It would be a means of keeping up the antagonism between the races. Once the Anglo-Saxon language becomes the common speech, the antagonism between the two races will die out; but not till then. If we may trust the utterances of Mr. Chamberlain, there need be no fear that Great Britain will ever grant an independent government to either of these republics.

Hush, My Baby.

Hush, my baby, though fierce blows the storm
No harm can come to thee,
Though chill is the blast, at my breast, snug and warm,
I hold thee, my lamb to me.
Oh! wild is the wail of the winds, like the agonizing
Of spirits in mad despair,
But hush, my baby, though wild be their moaning
You're safe from their anger here.

Hush, my baby, your father is sleeping
From storm and wind secure,
And whisperings tell me the Lord, He is keeping
A watch o'er my angel pure.
Oh weird is the song of the night, like the groaning
And dirge of the wild "banshee,"
But, hush, my baby, here close to my bosom
No evil shall come to thee.

Hush, my baby, my poor heart is aching
With sorrow and pain for you;
I know not the cause of the trouble that's making
My darling suffer anguish too.
The roar of the winds and their shrieks cannot harm
My birdie so dear to me,
So, hush, my baby, your mamma's poor arms
All dangers shall ward from thee.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

In Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Zambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvellous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and heralded to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that to-day they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain, but magnificent edifices of the most modern type, beautiful botanical gardens, and the public improvements are evidences of the wonderful advance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial centre, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenue of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals lend an air of peace and tranquility, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustable veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders" whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest manifested in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before thought of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Africander whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman—born in the Cape Colony, having traveled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Zambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience, in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work—will present South Africa as it is to-day, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collection of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this county. Portfolios distibuted by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE.

In All the World There is Not Such Another Body of Daring Men.

Probably one of the most effective bodies of men in the world are the mounted police of northwestern Canada. Throughout a territory seven times greater than the whole of France law and order are maintained by a corps of only some 800 men, officially known as the northwest mounted police of Canada, but familiarly known as the "riders of the plains." The corps combines the features of a military force with those of a constabulary. Its duties are as varied as the country patrolled. Essentially the riders are soldiers, but they act as magistrates, sheriffs, detectives, town constables, customs officers, license inspectors, fire wardens court clerks, crown timber agents, health officers, hide inspectors, game wardens, relief officers, crown prosecutors, food inspectors and mail carriers.

They follow the mountain trails. By railroad train or steamboat they go from town to village. They follow the shores of the lake and river. They penetrate the snow mantled forests and to make accessable some new-found Eldorado they cut their way through the unexplored wilderness. Like the meshes of a gigantic net their patrol trails cover a country that measures 1,000 miles from east to west and 2,000 miles from north to south. In fact, one patrol alone—that from Fort Resolution, on Great Slave lake, thence to Fort Sipson on the Mckenzie river, and return by Lesser Slave lake—covers a distance of 2,172 miles. The patroling party runs the greater part of the distance on snowshoes, and covers the remainder with conoe and paddle. To give an idea of the tremendous distance traveled by members of the force there is an instance of an officer who, in the course of his regular duties as assistant commissioner, during but a single year traveled a total distance of 15,181 miles, 10,461 of which were by rail, 1,900 miles by water, 3,620 miles with horses, and 200 miles on snowshoes. By a splendid system of connecting patrols almost every settler in the Northwest Territory is periodically visited by the police.

It would be difficult to find in any corps in the world an assemblage of characters more varied than that to be met with in the ranks of the northwest mounted police. On the past and present pay rolls may be read the names of novelists, "broncho busters," lords, "river drivers," artists, bushwhackers, lawyers, dog drivers, honorables, packers, bank clerks, sailors, government clerks, fishermen, Oxford and Cambridge graduates, sons of admirals, generals, bishops and statesmen; former officers of the militia and volunteers of Canada and Great Britain, as former officers of England, France and Germany. About 70 per cent. of the men are gentlemen by birth as well as education. Some of them have a private income in addition to their pay. Fully five per cent. once served in the imperial army of Great Britain, some having seen service in Egypt, India, Africa and Afghanistan. The police claim to be the best educated and wealthiest force in the world.

EASY LIFE IN NICARAGUA.

When the Family Is Broke, the Wife Digs a Little Gold.

"When I was in the Olancho district, in Nicaragua," said a visitor who is largely interested in mining in Central America, "I had an opportunity of seeing how the lazy natives tap nature's till when they need some small change.

"Near our camp by the river was a hut occupied by a typical Honduranian family, consisting of husband and wife, grandfather and grandmother and a dozen or so of assorted children. The only one of the crowd who did anything except rest and smoke was the wife. At intervals of perhaps a week she would sally out with the family tinpan, erstwhile used for cooking, and proceed to an old placer digging on the river bank. There she would squat, throw a few gourdfuls of dirt into the pan, fill it with water and begin the usual circular motion of gold washing.

"She was very skillful and would keep a little sheet of dirty water spraying over the edge like a miniature cataract. When the water was exhausted, a few spoonfuls of sand would be left in the bottom of the pan, and, spreading it out thin with a bit of stick, she would go over it grain by grain, looking for 'color.' Whenever she saw a speck of gold she moistened the stick on her tongue and picked up the particle by adhesion. Each bit of the precious metal was stored away in a quill, plugged with clay at the ends, and I have known her to take out as much as a quarter of an ounce in the course of one day.

"Usually her limit was about $2, and when she got that she stopped. Then the head of the house would arise languidly and start for the nearest store, 12 miles away. Sometimes he would trade the whole amount for whisky; but, as a rule, he brought back tobacco, salt, meal or calico.

"There are hundreds of native families who live in exactly that manner in Olancho. Sometimes the woman will be lucky enough to strike a rich pocket that will yield a dollar or more a pan, but they never dream of washing it out at once and getting a stake. It simply means that they can secure their usual amount with less work."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

NO "PROPERTY" ESCAPES.

Some Queer Things to Be Seen In a Chinese Theater.

Over the audience rests a settled, immovable stillness, unbroken even by a sigh. No expression referable to sorrow, sympathy, joy or tears lightens the blank, dead wall of the faces. The Chinaman is impregnable. Only once do his eyes change, and that is while the property man is on the stage, and he is never off it.

The Chinese property man sees his duty to the management and puts it into practical effect. No "property" shall escape him. He gathers all things by the way. When the Chinese Romeo slays Tybalt, the property man steps on to the stage, gathers up Tybalt's sword, cap and cloak and things and walks off with them. He would enter Macbeth's banquet hall while that weak kneed monarch was exercising Banquo's ghost, gather up the goblets and plates in one arm and Macbeth's chair with the other and carry them away. He would pluck the roses from Elaine's breast; he would take the dagger from Juliet's dead hand; he would interrupt Hamlet's soliloquy in the churchyard with a request for Yorick's skull, and he would interpose in the murder of Desdemona to remove the pillows from her bed.—Saqui Smith in Leslie's Weekly.

London's Great Clock.

Whatever complaints may be made against the tone of Big Ben, the famous London clock—and musicians say it is a terribly bad "E," at any rate—every one will acknowledge that the clock in the house of commons tower is a wonderful timekeeper, not varying a second in time all the year through. The mechanism for setting in motion the massive hammer which brings out the tone of Big Ben's 16 ton bell is very interesting. The striking machinery is driven by weights of about a ton and a half, which hang on a shaft 174 feet deep, and it is so arranged that after the chimes are over the hammer falls on the big bell within one second of Greenwich mean time.

Dew.

Teacher—How do you account for the phenomenon of dew?

Boy—Well, you see, the earth revolves on its axis every 24 hours, and in consequence of this tremendous pace it perspires freely.—London Tit-Bits.

SHAVING ACCIDENTS.

THE BARBER DISCUSSES THEM WITH THE MAN IN HIS CHAIR.

Chances to Cut Throats That Are Not Often Taken Advantage Of—Narrow Escapes From Serious Mishaps—A Father's Dream.

"Did it ever strike you," asked the little barber, "how easy it would be for the man that shaves you to kill you?"

The man in the chair sat up quickly and looked carefully at the barber, who was feeling the edge of the razor with one finger. The barber smiled to reassure his customer and said:

"It seems a queer question, I know, but it is a wonder to me that there are not a number of people killed in that way every year. It would be the easiest thing in the world for the barber as he wielded his razor to make one sweep with it and sever the jugular vein, and you would be dead almost on the instant. Suppose, for instance, that the barber should go insane. There would be nothing to prevent his doing such a thing, and you would have no warning nor any opportunity to save yourself.

"There is always a chance of a serious accident happening to the man in the chair. I have seen a number of such accidents and have a horror of even nicking the man I am shaving. In fact, such an occurrence makes me feel out of sorts for the rest of the day. It was only a few days ago that I almost had an accident that gave me a great fright and completely unnerved me. I was shaving a young man, and in passing from one side of the chair to the other a button of my waistcoat caught in his hair. It pulled a trifle, and he moved his head suddenly just as I went to put the blade to his face. I came within an ace of slashing him, and only a quick jump back saved him. The perspiration stood out on me, and I had to call one of the other men to finish shaving my customer.

"But the worst accident I ever saw in a barber shop occurred while I was working in a small town in the west. One of the patrons of the place was a business man whose 8-year-old daughter was lying at the point of death. Her father put in most of his time at her bedside. One afternoon while she was asleep he came in here to get shaved. He was so exhausted through lack of sleep that he fell asleep immediately after he had taken his seat in the chair next to the one behind which I was at work.

"He dreamed that some one had come into the place to tell him that his child had died. With a cry of alarm he started up just as the barber laid the razor against his neck. Into the flesh it sank. He was not yet thoroughly awake, and as he imagined that some one was holding him back from his child he threw out his hand to free himself, and his fingers closed over the blade of the razor. So dazed was he that he could not realize what had happened, but sat there in the chair, with the blood streaming from his throat and fingers.

"The man who had done the cutting was the first to act, although half crazed. He hurried for a doctor while we stanched the flow of blood the best we knew how. Even as the doctor was at work sewing up the wounds a messenger came to say that the little girl had died suddenly in the greatest agony, calling for her father just before she died. He was under the influence of ether at the time and did not know, but afterward, when he heard of the circumstances attending her death, he insisted that he had heard her call as he lay there asleep in the chair and that it was her cry that had caused him to make his sudden movement.

"For years after the accident he continued to shave in the same shop where it had occurred, and it was never mentioned. He carried a reminder of it for the remainder of his life. In addition to the scar on his throat, the fingers of his right hand were all drawn up and useless.

"Sudden movements while in the barber's chair are always apt to be attended with serious results, and I could recall dozens of instances where it has been only the merest chance that has prevented serious if not fatal mishaps. Nine times out of ten where the person getting shaved receives a nick and lays the blame on the barber he should thank the wielder of the razor that it was no worse. The probabilities are that it was quick action by the barber that prevented a bad cut. A slight nick often would have been a case for the doctor or coroner were it not for the watchfulness of the barber. Here yesterday I happened to draw blood from a young fellow's face near his ear, and he made a great fuss about it until I showed him that it was only the sudden withdrawal of the razor which resulted in the slight nick that prevented him losing a good part of his ear. Then he was grateful and thanked me, besides promising to be more careful in the future.

"But there are other ways the barber has of getting even," continued the little barber after relathering one side of his customer's face. "There is no need of his slashing a man. He can inflict injuries that will make his victim decidedly uncomfortable, and at the same time the latter will not be aware of what is being done." What the barber meant by this last remark his victim did not ask.—New York Sun.

THE WAR WITH THE BOERS.

That Topic Overshadows Everything Else in London.

London, Feb. 27.—The one topic in London, says a returned American, is the war with the Boers. Like a plague or a pall it has settled over London to the exclusion of all else, and is as all pervading as a London fog. But while gloom has come to the people in consequence of the numerous defeats that have overtaken the English forces in South Africa, there is apparent a settled determination to win this fight, let it cost what it may—let the hazard be never so great. To no one class is this feeling confined. It is found in the costermonger and in the peer alike, only in the latter it is the more determined, since he sees further and realized that defeat in South Africa now means not only defeat to English arms, hard and nauseating dose though that may be to swallow, but, above and beyond, it means that with the loss of the Transvaal fight may come the loss of empire itself and the relegation of England to a lower rank among nations than she has ever occupied since Sir Francis Drake and his compeers, aided by the elements, harried the Invincible Armada to destruction. That England will fight to the end—be that end what it may—there is no manner of doubt, and if no other power is brought in there can also be no doubt that England must ultimately prevail.

A BELATED AVOWAL.

"You know I like you, Barbara! I've always liked you," stammered John Leighton awkwardly, leaning against the window sill and looking in with a shy, embarrassed smile. "I've never seen my way clear to telling you before—but—but—I've made the last payment on that old account this morning, Barbara! I can start fair after this."

The woman to whom he spoke stepped back and turned a cooling flatiron to the stove before she answered. Seen under favorable conditions her face must have been an attractive one. Today, however, her hair was twisted into a solid knot above the collar of an unbecoming brown calico; her eyes showed traces of tears, and the dropping corners of her mouth rendered her expression both stern and sorrowful.

"Yes, John, I know you've always liked me," she spoke in a hard, resolute tone, "just as I know that you like old Towser, and the horses and cows at home, and pleasant weather in haying time, and a good price for your apples in the fall. You're used to me, and you have a fashion of liking what you see around every day."

Her listener flushed hotly, opened his lips, then closed them again, as if he found it difficult to utter what was in his mind.

"I feel like telling you just once, John," went on the voice at the ironing table, "how much you've cared for me in reality. It began when I was 18, you remember—with plenty of others to choose from. I was a pretty girl in those days, too, as there's no harm in saying now, when all the prettiness has faded." John Leighton's honest eyes rested upon her in astonishment, but hers was bent upon her work. "You paid me lots of attention at first, but you never really said—anything. I kept expecting that you would, through week after week, and month after month; and I set my whole heart upon you, John, 15 years ago! It's a long time to be kept waiting upon uncertainties, isn't it? No; don't interrupt me. For at least half of these years I've wanted to have my say once. Now I'm going to.

"You needn't look at me so reproachfully, either. I understood all along that your mother had queer turns, and wasn't exactly right in her mind, and everybody said she was scared almost to death for fear you'd bring a wife home. But didn't you know how you could trust me to wait, John—and hold to you steady through it all?

"What did you say? That was just it—you didn't want to stand between me and something better. I showed so many signs of wanting something better, didn't I?" She smothered a sudden sob—"and a girl has no pride to be hurt, of course, when folks keep asking her when it's going to be, and she knows in her own heart that there is no 'it,' let alone the 'when.'"

She flung a handful of drops at random across the sleeves of a garment that she had been drying while she talked. Her cheeks were scarlet now, her eyes shining. "You needn't look so ashamed of me," she flashed out excitedly. "I know you're thinking I'm too bold to live, but I shouldn't be saying all this John Leighton, if the house wasn't let and my trunks all packed ready to go out of it to-morrow. When this ironing's finished—and I've taken up a little root of myrtle from the burying ground—I'm through here. Don't upset that flower pot, John, there's no need of jumping 'round as if something had stung you, as I am."

"Barbara—aren't you forgetting about my brother, and the shame——

"What did that amount to, anyway. It wasn't you that forged the check—besides, I never can see that it's any man's duty to put on every yoke that a whole family see fit to whittle out for him. You were foolish to let it go that, 'twas your signature; $800 is a pretty big sum for a farmer to save up and pay out for somebody else, as you have. But I never cared so much for you in my life as I did the night you told me about it—and when you got through the telling you took up your hat and went home, without so much as a good-by."

The man who stood outside the window had bowed his head. More than one thread of silver gleamed in his hair as the sunlight fell upon it; his face was grave and pale. "Barbara," he began, with a curious choking in his voice, "I've always——"

She did not seem to hear him. "I did expect you'd speak John, when father died and I was left all alone here; I can own it now as honestly as if I'd died too, you see. Something has died in me lately; my heart, perhaps, or the old happy feeling, and there's nothing left but the numbness and the ache."

A sigh that was almost a groan came from her listener, but he made no attempt to speak.

"I used to think there never were two people better suited to live together than we were"—for the first time her voice trembled. "We're both plucky and fond of work; a good laugh now and then suits one of us just as well as it does the other; we like books, too, and we're about the only ones in the neighborhood who realize that there can be a little strip of world outside of what's in sight from Montrose Hill. As to disposition, I'm quick, I know, but I don't hold my temper; and you—why, you haven't any temper to hold."

"I don't know about that." John twirled his straw hat upon his fingers, and made the admission with slow sincerity. "I can be pretty spunky when I get started, but I've always liked you too much for——"

"Oh, well, it does not make any difference now! The end has come at last—both to the wishing and the worrying." She had dried her wet fingers upon her apron, and stood erect with tightly folded arms. "You've let duty, and what you were foolish enough to call disgrace, stand between us like a great iron fence. You've played at being dumb so long that you're almost dumb in reality at last; and I'm nothing but a homely, disagreeable old cross-patch in these days, whatever I may have been once. I'm going to live in Springfield after this, out of sight of the old home where I used to be so happy. When you go by here on your way to the postoffice perhaps you'll remember the times we've talked together down by the cinnamon rose bush in the garden, and forgive me for being so hateful to you this last morning. It's almost killed me to blame you, John; but—somehow—I can't help it." Her voice yielded upon the words to a sudden storm of sobs that shook her from head to foot.

The straw hat fell unheeded to the ground. The owner made two steps to the open door, two more to the kitchen and clasped her, heedless of resistance, in his arms. His eyes, misty with sympathy and love, sought her eagerly; his heart beat with strong throbs of tenderness—but his lips shaped only the familiar words, "You know I like you, Barbara! I've always liked you."

BOSSY.

Bossy is a kind old cow.
She dreams beneath the apple bough
And swings her tail and rings her bell
While roaming up and down the dell.

I see her through the pasture bars
Eat all the pretty daisy stars,
Then gently toss her head on high
To watch the clouds that dot the sky.

When night makes all the meadow black,
She lets the chickens on her back
Fall fast asleep, and sleep until
The sun comes peeping o'er the hill.

—S. E. Monkittrick in Woman's Home Companion.

THOSE BOER LADIES.

By Middle Life They Are Almost Too Fat to Walk.

The Boer woman is very little like the trim, handsome Dutchwoman of her ancestral Holland. She is seldom pretty. Her complexion is her principal charm, and she guards this carefully whenever she goes out. She is never seen outdoors without a great peaked bonnet on her head, her visits to church being made behind an almost oriental seclusion of veils. This is necessary to preserve the pink and white of her skin, for the climate would otherwise soon tan it to the color of sole leather. Her eyes are small and set close together, and her features are irregular. Her cheeks are broad and flat, and her hair is naturally light in color, although time and weather soon bleach it from its early straw color. At a very early age she loses all her teeth, for she is constantly chewing sweet cakes and confectionery.

A European woman would replace the molars that nature has deprived her of with well mounted works of art, but the Boer woman does not do this. She thinks it would be impious thus to try to duplicate the work of the Creator. Her figure is thick and almost waistless. While still a young woman she begins to grow fat, and by the time middle life is reached she is often so unwieldy that the only exercise she is able to take is to waddle cumbrously from one armchair to another. She is clad in a loose, scantily made gown, devoid of trimming and apparently waistless. The day garments of the Boers are also their nightclothes, so the gown is generally wrinkled.

JAPAN READY FOR WAR.

Her Wonderful Advance in the Art of Fighting in 31 Years.

London, Feb. 27.—The growth of Japan in the art of warfare is one of the world's surprises. Thirty-one years ago that country's navy consisted of two vessels, neither of them of any consequence; to-day in the fighting efficiency the navy of Japan is unexcelled. Even the numbers of the Japanese navy now stand eighth on the list of navies of the world, and in another two years' time will probably stand fifth, may be even fourth, but at all events fifth, unless some very great efforts are made [illegible]. However, the ships of the Japanese navy may be described as being the most [illegible] they are designed for the particular work [illegible] and for no other. The Japanese know that their battles will be fought near home, and that consequently they need not have very large spaces for carrying coal, and thus the space which would otherwise be filled by bunkers can be devoted to more guns and more projectiles, which, as we know by recent naval warfare, is the chief point. The ship that can pump the greatest weight of metal into another ship in the shortest time will be the victor.

The Japanese army is also an efficient force. The men are admirably trained and their operations are like machine work. Everything is in readiness for them should they be called into the field to-morrow. There is not a thing lacking that could add to their efficiency or comfort.

ADVERTISE IN THE MORNING TIMES.

A QUEER SENSATION.

HOW IT FEELS TO BE HELD UP AT THE POINT OF A REVOLVER.

Curious Phenomenon That Causes Each Man in a Roomful to Believe That a Weapon Is Pointed Straight at His Own Head.

"If you will take my word for a little experience I had recently, perhaps I can make clear to you how it is possible for three bad men to hold up a roomful of fairly brave men and get away safely with their money," said a merchant from the state of Washington who was a guest at the Lotos club one night recently. "I was in such a hold up not long ago, and I have ceased jeering at fellows who have been through similar experiences. I was one of 70 men who were held up in a big gambling hall, and as I am not a regular patron of such places I kept quiet about it at home. The gambling house is one of the best known in the west, and on the night of the hold up it was filled with a representative crowd. A search would have disclosed the fact undoubtedly that many of the men present were armed. No trouble in recent years has occurred in this place, and there was no reason to anticipate any. It was nearly midnight when the door opened and three men, masked and each holding two revolvers, entered the room.

"'Hands up, quick!' shouted the foremost man.

"I was sitting at a faro table when I heard this command, and as I looked up I found a revolver pointing straight at my head. When I compared notes with the other seventy odd men later, I found that each one had the same experience. There were only six revolvers, and yet each man in the room was willing to swear that one of them was pointed at his head all the time. The crowd was simply paralyzed with fright. For two or three seconds not a man moved. Then over in one corner a Leadville sport brought his hand around to reach his hip pocket.

"'Stop that or I'll shoot,' said one of the masked men, covering him with his revolver. 'Hands up, now; quick! We mean business.'

"Every man in that room did hold his hands up. There was no hesitation then. It was my first experience in that kind of game, but it was not until I was able to take my hands down that I realized how tiresome the operation was. There we stood, each man with his hands stretched high above his head, held up in a room on a busy street when an outcry would bring help at once. It was a pretty sure thing, however, that no one would make the outcry. The three masked men had eyes for every move, and their revolvers pointed all ways at once. It is easy for a man who has not been through such an experience to suggest that if several men had only made a break these fellows would have run. I can honestly say that the barrel of the revolver into which I looked seemed to me to be as large as a sewer pipe. I even thought that I could see the end of the bullet, and I was awfully afraid that the man who held the revolver might get nervous and shoot me by accident. I tried to look pleasant to appease him. All this had taken perhaps a minute and a half when the spokesman shouted to us:

"'Line up against that wall with your backs to me, and the man who takes his hands down will get shot. Quick now, gentlemen, if you please. Obey orders, and you won't get hurt.'

"We lined up as directed like a lot of schoolboys.

"'Now then, my friend here will relieve you of your valuables without your assistance,' said the spokesman. 'Don't move, because there are two dead shots behind you. Keep quiet, and it will soon be over.'

"It was a very cool piece of work, I can assure you. One of the three went straight down the row, taking each man's watch and money. He didn't get as much as he expected, and as near as we could estimate later the total haul was under $5,000. There was over $100,000 in the safe which the robbers overlooked. When we had been cleaned out, the spokesman said:

"'Now, gentlemen, we are sorry to inconvenience you further, but we shall have to request you to stand just as you are for five minutes more. Don't cut the time short, or you will get hurt.'

"The side door opened at this instant, and we heard the order 'Hands up, Chink, or you are a dead man!' It was one of our Chinese servants who was returning with a tray filled with drinks. He promptly dropped his tray, smashing all the glasses and threw up his hands. We heard no other sound for five minutes. Each man counted the seconds to make sure that he shouldn't take down his hands ahead of time. The proprietor was the first man to move. As soon as he felt that it was safe he turned and found the robbers gone. He picked up a heavy chair and threw it through the window. It carried the sash with it, and the crash that followed attracted general attention in the street below. The proprietor stuck his head out of the window and profanely shouted such details of the hold up as might put the people in the street on the track of the robbers. It was useless, however. The fellows walked out quietly, took off their masks and disappeared without leaving any clew. We all piled out of the place to aid the search. When we found out that a chase was hopeless, most of us came back to the gambling room to talk it over. When we entered the place, we found the Chink standing in the ruins of his glasses with his hands still above his head. The proprietor told him to take his hands down. The Chink wouldn't do it, and two men who pulled his arms to his side had all they could do to hold him. He had looked in the big barrel of one of those small revolvers, and he hadn't forgotten it.

"Now this was an actual experience, and some of your New York papers had accounts of it. If I were mixed up in an affair of that sort again, I would raise my arms just as quickly. It was expediency and not a yellow streak that made that crowd act as it did."

Never Caught Alive.

In Lake Derwentwater, in England, there is a species of fish called vendace, which are never caught alive. They are said to frequent the deeper parts of the lake and are never met with in the rivers. One or two dead specimens of the breed which have been found in the lake are treasured as curiosities.

Fertile Peru.

Though in the torrid zone, Peru possesses such diversity of elevations and climatic peculiarities as to be able to produce almost any product known to man.

HUMAN BRAIN CELLS.

THEY REFUSE TO WORK UNDER TOO HIGH A PRESSURE.

Put on Too Much Steam and These Minute Organisms Go on Strike. Why Men Go Crazy or Become Absentminded.

Keeping pace with scientific thought and progress certain problems which in the past have been shelved for want of light being thrown upon them have been taken up again one by one to undergo further examination by the aid of improved science.

The newest revelation in this direction tends to the science of the mind and includes the following problems:

Why does a man act queerly when he is intoxicated?

Why is a man absentminded on occasions?

Why does a man sometimes become violently insane, often a dangerous, raving lunatic?

Such questions as these have puzzled our immediate fathers, who have hardly ever satisfactorily explained them away or indeed thrown much reliable light upon them. The human brain is composed of cells, and each cell is a simple bit of nerve substance, from one end of which, like an octopus, spring a number of tentacles, while from another part arises an arm different from them and of great length. The long arm is intended for transmitting impressions from one portion of the brain system to another, it being made to touch the tentacles or short arms of the next one to it, the latter in its turn effecting contact with a third cell, and so on.

Thus a message is conveyed and the mind gets its news. The entire brain is made up of these cells, whose number is legion and whose full strength is grouped in systems, these systems in turn being arranged in communities, the communities in clusters and finally the clusters in constellations, by which divisions they are known to physiologists.

So long as the mind is in a healthy condition each little cell, or brain octopus, attends to its business faithfully and gives no trouble, but as man generally is an animal who usually refuses to live the life spanned out by nature and adopts instead the life laid down by the modern artificial process of living, instituted forsooth by civilization, mental disturbances frequently arise through the brain becoming abused in various ways, from overwork and alcohol principally.

Your octopuslike brain cell is a living little thing, and it can endure a great deal of abuse from you, but if you should go a little too far it rebels and refuses to work any longer by breaking contact with its companion cells, which it can do by withdrawing its long arm and getting itself out of circuit. But this rebellion is conducted by whole groups of cells acting together in full harmony.

Now, the object of this "strike" is simply to avoid overwork, for each tiny cell has stored within its minute space only a certain amount of energy, but if you put on the high pressure this is easily consumed by the operation of the brain, and the organism breaks down from exhaustion. Now, take the first of the problems just stated. When a person takes too much to drink, the cells in those patches of the brain that are responsible for the conduct of muscular movement become affected and the man staggers.

When the dose is very large, the cells, which, although stupefied, have tried to keep their master on his legs, now cease working, and the man sleeps like one dead. Finally, if more than enough of alcoholic drink be taken, the effect on the cells is to paralyze them, and the unfortunate man dies.

There is some relation between extraordinary activity of the mind and insanity. Geniuses are apt to exhibit symptoms of mental alienation, and, singular to relate, their children are usually inferior to those of average men.

For instance, not to go out of England for example, Cromwell was a hypochondriac and had visions. Dean Swift inherited insanity and was himself not a little mad. Shelley was called by his friends "Mad Shelley." Charles Lamb went crazy. Johnson was another hypochondriac, Coleridge was a morbid maniac, Milton was of a morbid turn of mind, nearly approaching insanity (modern ideas of hades are largely formed on the description evolved by his diseased imagination), and Byron said he was visited by ghosts.

This mental alienation occurring in the foregoing cases shows that certain specific groups of brain cells have come under the baneful influence of the guiding spirit called talent or genius, which has used up all the energy stored in each cell and each group of cells, to the detriment of the whole, with the result that their ceasing work has brought about various types of insanity as depicted or, to phrase it more softly, induced disturbance of the mental equilibrium.

The remaining problem is absentmindedness. This is produced by a temporary disjunction of certain groups of cells. A man becomes so absorbed in his study of some particular subject and lends his whole mind to thought that the hard thinking disorganizes the groups of cells employed in the process of reflection, their tentacles being turned all one way, to the detriment of mental action generally, and so the man with the tentacles of his brain cells turned in the one direction passes along the streets lost to all observation or mental inception and does all manner of queer things because he is not conscious of what he is doing.—Pearson's Magazine.

Some Ready Made Law.

Bourke Cockran studied law under Judge Theodore L. Dwight. One day the professor asked a question which seemed easy, but was really difficult. With his magnificent voice Cockran answered the best he could, adding as a saving clause, "Such, I take it, is the common law."

The good old doctor gleamed benignantly through his spectacles. "That would be all right, sir, if you had made it uncommon law."—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

Appeal to Ladies.

A lady writes the Times as follows—It is hoped there will be a large and enthusiastic meeting of ladies to-morrow afternoon, Feb. 27th, at half-past three, in the Y. M. C. A. building, to discuss and arrange the making up and sending out of a bail to our own 20 Peterborough men in South Africa, and through them others might receive the benefit of our efforts.

The Price of New-papers.

The Times is informed that all the leading daily newspapers have decided to increase the subscription price of the papers from 20 to 50 per cent. This will, of course, include the Toronto papers. There will be no more one cent papers in the future. This is in consequence of a recent increase in the price of paper by manufacturers. The Times will probably be forced to follow suit, so that parties who are not subscribers should order the paper at once.

Wedding Bells.

At the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Geo. S. Boyler, Ashburnham, Locks Road, on Monday, Feb. 26th, 1900, by the Rev. J. H. Moore, Ph.B., pastor of the Mark street Methodist church, Mr. Nicholas J. Swan, of Zion township of Otonabee, to Miss Carrie Hellen, the fifth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Boyler. The bridegroom was assisted by Mr. Maxwell E. Weir, of Peterborough, and the bride was supported by her sister, Miss Emma Matilda Boyler. The bride was handsomely attired in a fawn colored dress trimmed with pink silk ribbon. The happy couple will take up housekeeping in Otonabee, 13th concession, lot 16. Their many friends join in congratulation.

LeBrun's New Cutter.

Mr. Myles Frosten, having severed his connection with Messrs. LeBrun & Co's establishment, the firm have engaged Mr. Joseph McClung, of Chicago, who will take charge of the firm's large tailoring business in the future. Mr. McClung has already entered upon his duties. The firm are bound to maintain the high reputation it has always had for good, stylish work.

A Case for the Police.

The attention of this paper has been called to the disgraceful conduct of a well-known young man. On Saturday evening last he followed a lady to and fro until she was obliged to take refuge in a store. Of course the storekeeper, upon hearing what was the matter, wanted to go out and polish the villain's coat-tails, but was, after some difficulty, persuaded to spare him. Should the young man repeat the offense his name will be handed to the public.

A PROSPEROUS INSTITUTION.

Many of the people of Eastern Ontario take special interest in the British America Assurance Company because of the fact that Hon. George A. Cox, who is personally known to almost every individual in this district, is the honored President of the institution, and also because considerable stock, we understand, is held by our people. It is with pleasure, therefore, that we publish the annual report which appears in this issue. It will be seen that the Copany has had a very successful year. There has been a very satisfactory growth in the premium income in both Fire and Marine branches, the Canadian Fire business showing exceptionally favorable results. The net profits for the year amounted to $62,036.89, which has been sufficient to pay the usual half-yearly dividends at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, and, after writing off an amount to cover depreciation in office furniture and securities, to provide for an addition of nearly $7,000 to the Reserve Fund which now amounts to $577,687.04. The Reserve to cover the estimated liability on unexpired policies has been increased to meet the additional amount of risk, and is more than an ample provision, according to the Company's experience, to meet losses that will accrue upon policies in force at the end of the year.

In view of the increased business of the Company, and the contemplated enlargement of its field of operations, the Directors deem the present an opportune time to increase the Capital Stock, as contemplated in its Act of Incorporation, to $1,000,000. A by-law was accordingly passed providing for an increase of capital to one million dollars by the allotment of $250,000 new stock to shareholders, in the proportion of one share to every three shares held by them..

The report is well worthy of perusal, showing as it does that the affairs of this progressive institution are in safe hands.

Editor Morning Times:

Dear Sir,—On my way east, on Friday last, I stopped off at your bright little town and attended the concert given by your most excellent band, which is certainly a credit to your city. On my return to-day I could not resist sending a line to your journal with regard to an incident which occurred at the above mentioned concert. When the band opened by playing "God Save the Queen," only about a quarter of the audience rose to their feet. I can't imagine that it was intended for any disrespect to her Majesty, but presume it was an oversight.

COMPANY

ANNUAL MEETING

The sixty-sixth Annual Meeting of the Shareholders of this Company was held at its offices in Toronto at noon on Friday last, the 23rd inst.

The President, Hon. Geo. A. Cox, occupied the chair and Mr. P. H. Sims, who was appointed to act as secretary, read the following

ANNUAL REPORT.

The Directors have pleasure in presenting the sixty-sixth Annual Report, embracing the financial statements of the Company to the 31st December, 1899.

There has been a satisfactory growth in the premium income for the year in both the fire and marine branches. The Canadian fire business has shown exceptionably favorable results and there has been a moderate profit on the marine business written during the year. In the United States, however, this Company, has, in common with all others doing business there, suffered from the unusually heavy fire losses that have occurred in several of the larger cities.

The net profit on the year's transactions ($62,036.89), has been sufficient to pay the usual half-yearly dividends, at the rate of 7 per cent, per annum, and, after writing off an amount to cover depreciation in office furniture and securities, to provide for an addition of nearly $7,000 to the Reserve Fund, which now amounts to $577,687.04. The reserve to cover the estimated liability on unexpired policies has been increased to meet the additional amount at risk, and is more than an ample provision, according to the Company's experience, to meet losses that will accrue upon policies in force at the end of the year.

In view of the increased business of the Company and the contemplated enlargement of its field of operations, the Directors deem the present an opportune time to increase the capital stock, as contemplated in its act of incorporation, to $1,000,000. A bylaw will be submitted to the meeting to authorize the issue of $250,000 additional stock, to be alloted pro rata to present shareholders at a premium of 15 per cent.

SUMMARY OF FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

Total cash income	$1,622,349 88
Total expenditure, including appropriation for losses under adjustment.	1,560,312 99
[illegible]	$ 62,036 89
Dividends declared	$ 52,500 00
Total assets	$1,472,536 05
Total liabilities	145,449 01
Surplus to policy-holders	$1,327,087 04

The President, in moving the adoption of the report, said that it was gratifying to be able to refer to the satisfactory growth during the year in the income of the Company, which, after deducting amounts paid for reinsurance, showed net premium receipts of upwards of one and a half million dollars. The most encouraging features in connection with the past years transactions were the steady and continued growth of the Canadian fire business and the very moderate losses which have been sustained in the Dominion. While the general experience of companies doing business in this country had been favorable, owing to the losses having been considerably below the average of preceding years, the experience of this company had been exceptionably so. From reports of the business in Canada that have been published, it appears that the average ratio of losses to premiums of all companies reporting to the Dominion Government had been 56 per cent. The British America was 46 per cent. In the United States, on the other hand, the general experience, as well as that of this Company, had been much less satisfactory, the fire loss having been far in excess of those of average years, and the loss resulting from the Company's operations in that field had materially reduced the total profit of the year. In the marine branch he was pleased to say that the results of the past year had been such as to justify the action of the Directors in continuing the business of this department, notwithstanding the adverse experiences of previous years, and, so far as can be judged from the present outlook as to rates and general conditions of marine underwriting, the prospects for the present year appeared encouraging in this branch. The President also referred to the establishment of business connections at points beyond the limits of Canada and the United States, where favorable openings might present themselves.

The Report was adopted, and a by-law was passed providing for an increase of capital stock of the Company to one million dollars, by the allotment of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars new stock to shareholders in the proportion of one share to every three shares held by them.

The following gentlemen were re-elected to serve as Directors for the ensuing year—Hon. Geo. A. Cox, J. J. Kenny, Hon. S. C. Wood, Thomas Long, John Hoskin, Q.C., LL.D., H. M. Pellatt, R. Jaffray, A. Myers and E. W. Cox.

At a meeting of the Board held subsequently Mr. Geo. A. Cox was re-elected President and Mr. J. J. Kenny Vice-President.

'OUR BOYS AGAIN FOREMOST IN BATTLE AND MEET WITH HEAVY LOSS

LORD ROBERTS THE HERO OF THE HOUR!

From John o'Groat's to Lands End There Was Great Singing and Rejoicing.

TRANSVAALERS WILL FIGHT TO THE BITTER END.

Trsnsvaalers Are Certain to Continue the Fight With Undiminished Valor, But It Is Not so Certain About Free Staters, Who Are Tiring.

Sterkspruit, Feb. 26

Boer reports say that the British under Gen. Brabant, have occupied Jamestown, Cape Colony.

London, Feb. 28, 4.30 a.m

From John o'Groates to Lands End there has been singing to-day for the Queen and a universal singing of the National Anthem. This with mutual congratulations is the Briton's way of celebrating the most cheerful day of the war.

Already he is taking stock of the situation and measuring the future. There is no disposition to overestimate the success. The Government entertains no illusion. As announced in the House of Commons, 18,000 additional troops will be sent out and the effective will be kept near 200,000.

Lord Roberts has done more than to capture 4,000 Boers and a few guns. He is within striking distance of one of the Boer capitals, and is master of a large district of the Free State. He has given a shock to Boer confidence and immeasurably restored the spirits of his own troops. In capturing Cronje he has taken a leader whose presence alone was worth thousands to the Boer cause.

The best opinion here is that the Transvaalers are certain to continue the fight with undiminished valor, but it is not so certain about the Free Staters.

Sir Redvers Buller is having a hard time in Natal. It is evident now after a fortnight's fighting, that he was misled when he wired that there was only a weak rear guard between him and Ladysmith. Apparently some of the hardest fighting of the war took place at the end of last week, as an armistice was agreed upon to allow attendance upon the wounded and burial of the dead. Both sides must have lost heavily.

At any moment, however, news may come of Gen. Buller's success.

Cape Town, Feb. 28.

The Canadian troops who arrived on the Allan Line steamer Pomeranian were welcomed by Major Bunbury Williams, military secretary to Sir Alfred Milner.

The Daily News says: "To the Canadians belongs the honor of hastening the inevitable. It would be rash however to suppose the Boers will sue for peace or that all our difficulties are removed."

London, Feb. 28.

It is understood that the Queen and the Prince of Wales have received a telegram of generous congratulation from Emperor William on the victory of Paardeberg. King Humbert and Queen Margareta also wired congratulations to the Queen.

BATTLE AMONG THE HILLS.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—The Record publishes a despatch from its correspondent at Colenso Camp. It is dated Feb. 23 and reads: The battle among the hills north of the Tugela continues, the British steadily fighting their way forward. Last night—Thursday—General Wynne's brigade took the kopje west of the general line of the British advance. The infantry rushed the Boers fired for a few minutes into the darkness and then got among the enemy with their bayonets. The Boers fled.

At 1.30 p.m. to-day, Feb. 23, the British advanced through a heavy rifle fire from the kopjes in front. The field batteries and the heavy guns were moved forward and continued shelling the farthermost range.

At sundown the British had gained possession of two more low hills, but the Boers were making a strong stand in opposition to further advance.

Wednesday afternoon the British main force crossed the river on a pontoon bridge, and in the evening the Somersetshire Light Infantry went feeling for the enemy along Ladysmith road, intending to force fighting. In a short while the British found the enemy, found his strength considerable and retired.

Made a Determined Stand.

Thursday the Boers made a determined stand on the high range of hills three miles north of Colenso, and on the east side of Grobler's Kloof, through which runs the road to Ladysmith.

The British infantry Gen. Wynne's brigade leading, and General Norcott's following close advanced at 1 p.m. over the succeeding runs of the kopje toward the Boer position.

The Boers opened with shrapnel which repeatedly burst between their lines and the British. The British howitzers, field guns and naval guns meanwhile shelled the hills opposite, to cover the advance movement. Gen. Wynne's brigade reached the kopjes south of Ondernook spruit, a tributary of the Tugela river, only to be met with a hot rifle fire from the Boers occupying the high range to the left. The British rushed down the slope, splashed through the water of the spruit or creek, waist deep, to cover opposite. They breathed a moment, then rushed over to the next row, then over to the next.

British Advance Under Fire.

Then the Boers opened up a rifle fire from the steep kopjes which are the eastern continuation of the high range. Under this flank fire, in addition to the fire from the front, the British advanced, responding with their rifles and also with a battery of field artillery, which had been moved forward to the row of kopjes third from the rear of the firing line. All the British guns were placed in a wide half-circle, and while the firing from many hills continued, an incessant bombardment of the opposing range with lyddite and schrapnel was kept up. So fierce was the cannonade that sometimes two and three shells together would burst along the slope of the enemy's position, sending up their bulging, bursting puffs of smoke.

The fighting lasted until dark, the British having gained and held several rows of kopjes, which are the foothills of the higher range.

WORST OF CAMPAIGN OVER.

London, Feb. 27.—The general feeling here is that the worst of the campaign is over, and that even if the war continues the British will not have to encounter such difficulties as they have had to face up to the present time.

GENERAL CRONJE'S RETREAT

Story of the Running Fight and Final Stand of the Boers.

Gen. Cronje first cam einto prominence in connection with the present Boer war when on Dec. 13 General Lord Methuen reported from Modder River that he had attacked the Boer force barring his path to Kimberley two days before and had met with a serious reverse, suffering heavy losses in killed and wounded. Gen. Cronj ecommanded the victorious Boer army an dthe nam eof the battle was Magersfontein.

After that the Boer general held Gen. Methuen and 15,000 men at bay for over two months. The Boer force ocupied the hills north of the Modder River. Their position was almost impregnable and Cronj eknew it. He refrained from taking the aggressive and simply waited for the British to attack and be defeated again. He waited and watched, but in vain. Methuen had felt his strength once and he was not to be tempted. The British general made sundry incursions into the surrounding territory, but he never strayed far from his base at the Modder River. He also waited—but not in vain.

Generals Roberts and Kitchener arrived in Africa, and shortly afterwards—on Feb. 14—it was officially announced that the British cavalry division under Gen. French on Monday, Feb. 12, had seized the crossing of the Riet River at Dekel's drift, on the east bank, on which the sixth and seventh divisions encamped. This was the first intimation the British public received of the daring plan by which General Roberts hoped to relieve Kimberley. With General French's subsequent three days' raid with his ten thousand cavalrymen through the Orange Free State and around General Cronje's flank, an dhis triumphal entry into the besieged Kimberley on Feb. 15, everyone is familiar. Then the rapid pushing forward of Roberts' infantry in French's support compelled Cronje to either retreat with all haste or to remain and be surrounded. He chose the former alternative and commenced to retreat on Thursday, Feb. 51. Methuen advanced and occupied the deserted ridge of Magersfontein an dnot a shot was fired. Cronje performed the remarkable feat of slipping through the British columns and kept up a running fight until Sunday, the 18th, when he was brought to bay at 1the Koodoo's Rand drift, thirty-five miles from Magersfontein.

BULLER KNOWS WHAT HE IS AT.

London, Feb. 27.—A letter has been received from a man in the First Dragoons, now in South Africa, confirming the report that a supply transport reached Ladysmith during the engagement at Spion Kop. He says the Dragoons were the escourt of the transport, which was seven miles long, and adds—

"That is why Buller engaged the enemy at Spion Kop. Old Buller knows what he is doing, and all are willing to follow him, in spite of his reverses."

BELIEVED TO BE INVINCIBLE.

Cronje's Followers Almost Worshipped Their Gallant Leader.

London, Feb. 27.—J. B. Robinson, the African millionaire miner and Rhodes' rival, said yesterday—"I hav eknown Cronje long and intinmately, and wish I could shake his hand and tell him how much I, in common with every Englishman, admire the courage he has shown. He may be our foe, but England is generous enough to recognize the good qualities of the men fighting against her.

"Cronje and his men have certainly revealed a heroism never surpassed in the history of our race. Surrounded by an army of 45,000 men, with 101 guns continually pouring shells on their position, they have stood at bay for days. It is only what those of us who knew the man expected of Cronje.

"No Boer has such an infulence over his followers. They believe him invincible. They almost worship him. The slighest sign of shrinking from anyone under him brings a few words from the general that cuts like whipcords and brace up the waverer like a moral tonic."

"He made for the spot where he was entrenched for two reasons—First, he wanted to be as near Blomfontein as possible, because his relief would come from there; next, he was aware that the situation was the best fitted for defence. It was in the bend of the river, and that means much of shelter. The South African rivers are not loke English rivers. Here the waters come up to the top of the banks; in South Africa the steep sides mount up ten, twenty or thirty feet above the water. In these banks caves could easily be made in which men and stores could b eplaced.

"Picture a little man, quiet looking, and at first glance almost insignificant. When you forst come into contact with him you might be inclined to dismiss him as an ordinary man, but a few words from him show you by their grasp and their decisiveness that these first impressions are wrong. As you look longer at him his type of face seems familiar. In a flash it comes to you that this is the kind of head seen in the paintings of the old Dutch masters."

FIRST TRAIN FROM KIMBERLEY.

Cape Town, Feb. 27.—Refugees from Kimberley report that when Lord Kitchener gave Gen. Cronje his option of surrendering or fighting, the Boer leader having asked for an armistice, Cronje replied—"I've got some guns, some men and some ammunition, and I am alive. Why should I surrender?"

The first train out of Kimberley was packed from end to end when it reached Cape Town. There was no demonstration at the railway station here."

The accounts of Boer progress given by the fugitives are hopelessly inconsistent. Most of them, however, assert that Kimberley was full of Boer spies throughout the four months' siege.

HOW CRONJE REPLIED.

Boer General's Answer to Kitchener's Summons to Surrender.

Cape Town, Feb. 26.—Refugees from Kimberley report that when Lord Kitchener gave Gen. Cronje his option of surrendering or fighting, the Boer leader having asked for an armistic, Cronje replied:

"I've got home guns, some men and some ammunition, and I am alive. Why should I surrender?"

POWELL'S UNHOLY PRACTICES.

Boers at Mafeking Open Fire When the British Dance.

Mafeking, Feb. 12.—The British movements towards the brickfields are successful. They now occupy the kilns from which the enemy sniped them at the beginning of the week. Their gradual advance has caused the Boers to construct trenches on the southeastern front,, facing our sharpshooters. This is a great obstruction to our works, so that both sides have scored. Capt. Girdwood, who held a position in the commissarit, and Councillor Daid were killed by a shell on the morning of the day when the garrison ball was to be given. The dance was in consequence postponed until last night. The news of our method of Sabbatarian enjoyment caused the Boers to open fire when the dance began. Commandant Snyman has written to say that we seem unwilling to observe Sunday, and in consequence he will open fire when we indulge in such unholy practices, and that implies all the sports with which the beleaguered garrison attempt to vary the monotony of the weeks of siege. The position of the Boers' big gun has again been shifted to an emplacement due west, but has not yet got the range of the town. From the old emplacement the casualties and damage to buildings were very heavy.

Cobourg and the Canal.

The Cobourg Post says—The deputation that visited Ottawa returned to town on Saturday morning last, apparently well pleased with their interview with the Minister of Public Works. Although the Minister did not assure the deputation that the terminus of the Trent Valley Canal would be at Cobourg, he did promise to give the claims advanced "his serious consideration." Of course old politicians know what that means, and probably that will be the last we will ever hear of it.

Mr. Tarte's declaration that he expected to live to see the Premier of Canada sitting at the Council board of the Empire, discussing its interests has received a quicker response than anybody expected in the suggestion made on behalf of the Imperial Government, that the colonies would probably be asked to confer upon the method of reconstructing the army.

A DASHING ADVANCE MADE BY CANADIANS!

The Rush of Candian Regiment Resulted in British Gaining Ground on the Boers.

ROBERTS PRAISES HIS "COLONIAL COMRADES."

Canadians, Supported by the Gordon Highlanders, Entrenched Themselves Close to the Boer Lines Just Before Cronje Surrendered.

London, Feb. 27.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts:

"Paardeberg, eleven o'clock, Tuesday morning, from information furnished daily to me by the intelligence department it became apparent that Gen. Cronje's force was becoming more depressed and that the discontent of the troops and the discord among the leaders were rapidly increasing. This feeling was doubtless accentuated by the disappointment caused when the Boer reinforcements which tried to relieve Gen. Cronje were defeated by our troops on Feb. 23.

"I resolved, therefore, to bring pressure to bear upon the enemy. Each night the trenches were pushed forward to the enemy's laager so as to gradually contract his position, and at the same time I bombarded it heavily with artillery which was yesterday materially aided by the arrival of four six-inch howitzers which I had ordered up from De Aar.

"In carrying out these measures a captive balloon gave great assistance by keeping us informed of the dispositions and movements of the enemy. At 3 a.m. to-day a most dashing advance was made by the Canadian regiment and some engineers supported by the 1st Gordon Highlanders and 2nd Shropshires, resulting in our gaining a point some 600 yards nearer the enemy and within about eighty yards of his trenches, where our men entrenched themselves and maintained their positions till morning—a gallant deed worthy of our colonial comrades and which I am glad to say was attended by comparatively slight loss.

"This apparently clinched matters, for at daylight to-day a letter signed by Gen. Cronje, in which he stated that he surrendered unconditionally, was brought to our outposts under a flag of truce."

In my reply I told General Cronje he must present himself at my camp and that his force must come out of their laager after laying down their arms. By 7 a.m. I received General Cronje, and despatched a telegram to you announcing the fact. In the course of conversation he asked for kind treatment at our hands, and also that his wife, grandson, private secretary, adjutant, and servants might accompany him wherever he might be sent. I reassured him and told him that his request would be complied with. I informed him that a general officer would be sent with him to Cape Town, to ensure his being treated with proper respect en route. He will start this afternoon under charge of Major-General Prettyman, who will hand him over to the general commanding at Cape Town.

The prisoners were formed into commandos under our own officers. They will also leave here to-day,, reaching the Modder River to-morrow, where they will be railed to Cape Town in detachments."

Cheered the Canadians.

The above despatch was read in both the House of Lords and the House of Commons to-day. The reference to the Canadians evoked immense and prolonged cheering.

The enthusiasm exhibited in Parliament over Lord Roberts' graphic details of the surrender of Gen. Cronje spread quickly to the streets. Crowds of people again gathered about the War Office end other bulletin places in spite of the rain that was falling at the time and which has been falling since morning. Frequent cheers were given for "Bobs," who is the hero of the hour.

One old soldier became so excited in recounting the details of the victory that he fell dead.

General Jubilation.

In the more frequented parts of the metropolis flags were few and far between, and in Pall Mall, where the War Office is situated there was not a bit of bunting flying, while only one flag flew over the strand. But in the east end of London there were many small flags waving from the windows of squalid dwellings, and as the evening fell Londoners gave themselves up to unrestrained rejoicing.

On all sides the gallantry of the Canadians was much commented upon.

Cable despatches poured in from the colonies and the settlements announcing that the rejoicing in those parts of the world over Lord Roberts victory was no less enthusiastic than in Great Britain itself. Bombay and Gibraltar, for instance, reported masses of bunting and cheering crowds filling their streets.

It is reported that Lady Roberts the wife of Field Marshall Lord Roberts, will soon start to join her husband.

WHAT THE LORD MAYOR THINKS.

Chief Magistrate of London Believes the War Will Soon End.

London, Feb. 27.—No one who did not know of General Cronje's surrender would suspect from the appearance oof the town that London was celebrating the chief victory of the war.

Not a flag was flying, and in front of the places were bulletins were displayed to the public scarcely more than a dozen people would stop at a time to read the news. Outside of the War Office there was the same absence of crowds, due doubtless to the drizzling rain.

In the War Office lobbies when a clerk posted the news of the surrender quite a crowd was waiting, and the tidings were hailed with considerable enthusiasm. In an incredibly short space of time the news had spread to all parts of London. At the Mansion House the posted news was read with great excitement by the crowds of business men hurrying to their offices and cries of "Bravo, Roberts!" and "Majuba!" were heard.

The Lord Mayor of London said to the cokrrespondent of the Associated Press that while the surrender of Gen. Cronje had been a foregone conclusion the news was received with a great sense of relief, and the result of the capitulation, he thought, would be the rapid conclusion of hostilities.

At the Stock Exchange there was much excitement and cheering, but this quickly subsided when the house opened. Stocks opened with an upward tendency, but no material improvement in prices, and consols were slightly weaker.

FOUR THOUSAND PRISONERS.

London, Feb. 27.—4.25 p.m.—It is now announced that Lord Roberts has notified the War Office that the number of Boer prisoners approximates four thousand, of which about 1,500 are citizens of the Orange Free State. The remainder are citizens of the Transvaal.

THE GUNS CAPTURED.

London, Feb. 27, 4.25 p.m.—Twenty-nine Transvaal officers were captured and 18 Free State officers.

The guns captured from the Transvaal forces wer ethree 75 centimetre Krupps, one 9-pounder and one Maxim gun.

From the Free Staters the British captured one 75-centimetre Krupp and one Maxim gun.

MILNER TO CANADA.

Ottawa, Feb. 27.—Lord Minto received Oto-day the following cable from Sir Alfred Milner—

Cape Town, Feb. 27, 1900.—Cronje surrendered at daylight. Congratulate you on noble share taken by troops from your colony. (Sgd.) Milner.

MADE HER MAJESTY HAPPY.

The Surrender of Cronje Welcomed All Over England.

London, Feb. 27.—The Glasgow and Liverpool Stock Exchanges were greatly excited over the surrender of Cronje. The members sang "God Save the Queen" repeatedly, and cheered for "Little Bobs."

Flags were liberally displayed on the municipal and public buildings in all the large towns.

Windsor was very jubilant at the news, which the Queen disseminated immediately after it reached her, and the inhabitants seized the occasion of her Majesty driving through the town on her way to take the train for a visit to the wounded South African soldiers at the Netely hospital to give vent to their delight. The Queen who was looking remarkably well, showed evident signs of deep satisfaction, smiling continually and bowing in response to the congratulatory cheers greeting her on all sides. Her Majesty took quantities of flowers to distribute to the wounded.

All the garrison towns and naval ports received the news with the liveliest satisfaction.

New Electric Railway Scheme.

Beaverton Express—Apropos to our article on the projected Electric Railway System now being advocated for Toronto, one branch of which is intended to pass through Kimberley, we learn the objective point is Balsam lake by way of Gamebridge and the Portage Road. This will be good news to the people of Bolsover and Centre Eldon, who are at the mercy of the belated Coboconk mixed. Beaverton will be brought within two hours or less of Toronto and a large hotel for summer use will likely be built on the shore of Balsam lake. The next few years will see a revolution in the travel system in this section as well as in many other things.

When Great Britain learns a lesson she learns it for good. The army is to be reconstructed along democratic lines, and instead of waiting until the war is over, the announcement was made while yet the country knew the necessity of it.

Morning Times

THE BOER LOSSES.

The Boer reports of battles with the British usually give a fairly accurate statement of the British losses. It would of course be impossible for them to do much more than guess the British losses as a rule, but on several occasions the Boer reports published before the British War Office had a list of the casualties were very near to the truth as regards the British losses. Have their reports about their own losses been as nearly accurate? There is reason to believe that they have not. The Boers very seldom acknowledge a casualty list of more than four. The natives have told stories of great slaughter among the Boers. The stories of natives cannot usually be depended upon, but these statements have been to a certain extent corroborated by Boer prisoners. However, the strongest evidence comes from a Russian doctor named Maartin, who left Africa on the same ship with Mr. Macrum, the American consul at Pretoria. He was in the Boer service as a medical man at a number of points, where fighting was going on. He tells a most interesting story and his picture of the Boers is not very complimentary to them. A number of Uitlander doctors have been pressed into the service to attend the sick and wounded Boers. They have a pretty hard time of it, according to Dr. Maartin. For instance, Dr. Dunlop, a Scotchman, began to make ambulance rules which the Boers did not like. A Boer came into camp overheated, worn-out and suffering from sunstroke. The Boer in his frenzy poured cold water over his own head with the result that he died suddenly. Dr. Dunlop was blamed for this by the other Boers and he received 25 lashes as punishment. "I saw it myself," says Dr. Maartin, "and I was so afraid of similar treatment that I tried to run away, but two bullets came whistling about my head, and I was caught by the pickets and brought back to camp." Dr. Maartin was tied to the shaft of a wagon and kept there in the terrible heat until the commandant came, when he was released on promising to serve them as a doctor. On another occasion, he found two English prisoners who had been with the British armored train. He bandaged their wounds and while doing so spoke English to them. The Boers overheard him and were so angry that they sentenced him to sit for five hours on a manton and to have his diet confined to "mealie pap" for that day.

Dr. Maartin describes a sanguinary battle which he says took place between 80 Free Staters and about the the same number of Transvaalers after the battle of Elandslaagte, nine Transvaalers and fifteen Free Staters being killed and thirty wounded. The cause of this battle was that the Free Staters claimed that their allies had put them in the front of the battle with the British, keeping in the background themselves. He was in Pretoria when Winston Churchill was there, and says he assisted Churchill to escape in the following way: He arranged to have a man disguised as a woman peddler visit the place where the prisoners were confined. In the bottom of the peddler's basket were razor, soap and brush, with which Churchill shaved himself. Then, changing clothes with the pedler, he made his escape. The man whom Dr. Maartin employed for this purpose afterward remained about the grounds until he was ordered out.

All this is interesting, but the important part of Dr. Maartin's statement is that which relates to the casualties among the Boers. He was shifted from camp to camp to look after the sick and wounded, so that he had excellent opportunities of gaining information in every section where there was fighting. He says the Boers suffered severely in all the engagements with the British, during the time he was with them, and expresses the opinion that for every two the British have lost during the war the Boers have lost three.

Dr. Maartin told his tale to the Western Morning News, of Plymouth, England, where he went after parting at Paris with Mr. Macrum, the American consul.

His story is very circumstantial in all its details, and if it is not true he has an imagination worthy of de Rougemont. It may be asked why didn't Winston Churchill have something to say about Dr. Maartin, but the doctor's reply is ready. He explains that he made Churchill promise to say nothing about him in the newspapers, as it might injure him at Pretoria if it were known that he assisted the Englishman to escape, but now that he is out of the Transvaal himself he does not mind telling about it.

Assuming that Dr. Maartin's statement is correct, the Boers must have been very greatly weakened even before Lord Roberts began active operations. They had all their forces in the field and losses that would only stimulate the British to greater exertions would prove almost disastrous to the Boers, who could not call for reinforcements.

COOLIES WITH THE BRITISH.

The Latter Have 8,000 of Them at the Front in Natal.

The stretcher bearers employed by the British in Natal are Indian coolies. These are mostly indentured Indians from Bombay and Calcutta. They are brought over from India by the owners of large tea and sugar plantations and are there indentured for a term of years, working for small wages, but saving all they earn. After his time has expired, the average coolie becomes a peddler of vegetables and fruits, or a gardener in a private family, while the better class who have had some education, obtain employment as waiters in hotels and garrisons. Many of the Natal coolies have been trained for military service and have become proficient in the usual duties of camp life, which are always so irksome to Tommy Atkins when there is any fighting to be done.

The British forces in Natal have nearly 8,000 Indian coolies at the front, who are employed in several different branches of camp and military service. They perform all the heavy labor, such as handling the baggage and stores; while the mess cooks have quite a number at their disposal. As stretcher bearers they have shown much bravery and patience in going into the field, sometimes being in the thick of the battle, and carrying off the wounded while shot and shell from the enemy's guns drop all around them.

Unlike the natives of Natal, the coolies work in silence; and, on the battlefield, when going the rounds to pick up the wounded, they calmly and stoically perform their duties and march away with their burden without uttering a word. Very little food suffices to sustain an Indian coolie. Boiled rice is the chief article of food into which is mixed the pure Indian curry powder—of which they are so fond—with sometimes a little fatty meat. The heat of the Natal climate does not affect the Indians at all; and for this reason they have proved themselves a valuable adjunct to the British forces in the field.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

In Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Zambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvellous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and heralded to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that to-day they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain, but magnificent edifices of the most modern type, beautiful botanical gardens, and the public improvements are evidences of the wonderful advance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial centre, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenue of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals lend an air of peace and tranquility, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustable veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders" whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest manifested in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before thought of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Africander whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman—born in the Cape Colony, having traveled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Zambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience, in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work—will present South Africa as it is to-day, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collection of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this county. Portfolios distibuted by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

Strong and clear, above all the other noises of the war, rises the voice of Winston Spenser Churchill, establishing a reputation as a military authority, and a statesman, by calling for more men. Spenser Wilkinson calls back to him across the pond, with explanations and advice on tactics. Lord Roberts, in Africa, and Lord Wolseley in London are not saying much.

The relief of Ladysmith became a mere matter of days when Lord Roberts puts General Cronje to flight, but it would probably be better to leave Ladysmith unrelieved than to free the big Boer army which surrounds it. General Buller has skillfully kept that army in play for some time, but if it gets away now and cooperates in the defence of Bloemfontein, the war may be indefinitely prolonged.

Once Bloemfontein falls into the hands of the British it may be expected that the Orange Free Staters will lose considerable interest in the war.

A PICKPOCKET'S RUSE.

The Trick by Which He Once Got a Woman's Purse.

Jack Piggott, the noted pickpocket, used to tell a funny story about the difficulty he had in picking the pocket of a fashionably dressed woman who was looking in at the window of Shreve's jewelry store. It illustrates the hardships that the light fingered gentry are forced to endure in the pursuit of their profession and when first related was considered amusing not only by Piggott, but by the many to whom he confided his experience.

It was a cold winter evening, and the lady on whose purse Piggott had designs stood looking at the holiday finery so temptingly displayed. Piggott said that he tried all the arts known to his craft for the extraction of the wallet, but all in vain, until, as a last resort, he fished a toothpick from his pocket and, reaching around, tickled the lady's ear. Instinctively she raised her hand to brush away the invading insect or whatever it might be and in so doing let go of her pocketbook that she was carrying in the pocket of her coat.

It was only an instant, but it was long enough for the expert pickpocket to get in his work, and when she put her hand back her money was gone, and in the crowd around her she could not identify the pale faced, fashionably dressed young man at her side as the person who had robbed her, and if she had accused him there would have been no proof against him, as the swag was at once passed to a pal who stood ready to receive it and run. Piggott was not even arrested for that crime, and the lady's ludicrous outcries furnished material for mirth long after.—San Francisco Bulletin.

BOSSY.

Bossy is a kind old cow.
She dreams beneath the apple bough
And swings her tail and rings her bell
While roaming up and down the dell.

I see her through the pasture bars
Eat all the pretty daisy stars,
Then gently toss her head on high
To watch the clouds that dot the sky.

When night makes all the meadow black,
She lets the chickens on her back
Fall fast asleep, and sleep until
The sun comes peeping o'er the hill.

—[illegible] in Woman's Home Companion.

THOSE BOER LADIES.

By Middle Life They Are Almost Too Fat to Walk.

The Boer woman is very little like the trim, handsome Dutchwoman of her ancestral Holland. She is seldom pretty. Her complexion is her principal charm, and she guards this carefully whenever she goes out. She is never seen outdoors without a great peaked bonnet on her head, her visits to church being made behind an almost oriental seclusion of veils. This is necessary to preserve the pink and white of her skin, for the climate would otherwise soon tan it to the color of sole leather. Her eyes are small and set close together, and her features are irregular. Her cheeks are broad and flat, and her hair is naturally light in color, although time and weather soon bleach it from its early straw color. At a very early age she loses all her teeth, for she is constantly chewing sweet cakes and confectionery.

A European woman would replace the molars that nature has deprived her of with well mounted works of art, but the Boer woman does not do this. She thinks it would be impious thus to try to duplicate the work of the Creator. Her figure is thick and almost waistless. While still a young woman she begins to grow fat, and by the time middle life is reached she is often so unwieldy that the only exercise she is able to take is to waddle cumbrously from one armchair to another. She is clad in a loose, scantily made gown, devoid of trimming and apparently waistless. The day garments of the Boers are also their nightclothes, so the gown is generally wrinkled.

Once Bloemfontein falls into the hands of the British it may be expected that the Orange Free Staters will lose considerable interest in the war.

MYSTERIOUS OCCURRENCE.

The Remarkable Alpine Experience of a King's Messenger.

At a critical moment of international complication which occurred a good many years ago it was found necessary to send a king's messenger across one of the Alpine passes charged with dispatches the importance of which was so great that they practically involved the issue of peace or war. It was in the depth of winter, and in those days, even under the most ordinary circumstances, a journey across Europe meant no trifling undertaking. The first part of the journey was safely accomplished in postchaise as far as the foot of the pass, where a transfer to a sleigh was necessary. Here, on inquiring at the posting inn for horses and a sleigh, the messenger found to his dismay that none was to be had. "Impossible, monsieur, to go forward this night." Toward evening, however, a private carriage arrived, occupied by one traveler, with a sleigh, several spare horses and plenty of servants—evidently the equipage of a personage of distinction. The traveler halted at the posting inn and after a short parley determined to enter and have dinner, the journey across the pass to be continued at nightfall, when a clear moon might be expected.

Under these circumstances the king's messenger and the other traveler naturally dined together and entered into friendly conversation, with the result that an offer of a place in the traveler's sleigh was gladly accepted by the former. At nightfall the journey across the pass was commenced, the messenger carrying in his hand a small dispatch bag containing his dispatches. The route wound up and up the mountain side, all being soon covered deep in snow. The horses seemed fresh and high mettled and were urged at full speed by the driver. Suddenly, at a turn of the road, a man jumped out from a rock. The horses seemed to shy, and in less time than it takes to tell the sleigh was rolling over and over in the snow, with its occupants tossed hither and thither. Some moments elapsed before the half stunned messenger came to his senses, and when he did so the first thing which struck his astonished eyes was the sleigh tearing back down the pass at breakneck speed. No human being was to be seen beside him, his late companions and, worse still, his bag of dispatches, which had escaped from his grasp in the tumble, having vanished like magic. Nothing remained but to plod wearily through the snow back to the inn, where all that he could ascertain was that the strange traveler was unknown to the landlord and that he had returned by the way he had come with his own horses, explaining that there had been an accident. Neither the mysterious traveler nor the bag of dispatches was ever traced, nor has the full history of the adventure ever come to light up to the present day.—Quarterly Review.

Monkey and Mirror.

I saw a performing monkey the other day. He went through many tricks very successfully. Toward the end of the performance he was ordered to put on his cocked hat before a hand mirror, which he did. He was next told to set it straight, and he tried on his general's headgear repeatedly at different angles, causing much laughter. When all was over and the organ man, his helpers and the two monkeys were preparing to depart, I saw that "the general" had possessed himself of the little mirror and was studying his own countenance with great delight! He had placed the glass on top of the barrel organ, and he bent over it again and again, grimacing energetically. He afterward picked up his mirror and contemplated himself earnestly and contentedly at different angles. His face had been profoundly sad, like the faces of most monkeys I have seen, but now the wrinkles smoothed themselves out, and he nearly smiled.—London Standard.

They Keep One Eye Shut.

A recent traveler in Mexico, who visited the mines there during his journey, says that he was much astonished at seeing the men who carry the ore come out of the mine, each with one eye shut.

The foreman, noting his surprise, explained the matter. He said the candles belonging to the taraters (who drill and blast) do not give sufficient light in the drifts, where it is consequently quite dark, but where, nevertheless, the taraters can well enough not to run their heads against the rocks, but, on emerging into daylight, they would be blinded did they not take precautionary measures.

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft, at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light they drop the eyelid of one eye and keep this down while they are discharging their ore and until they have redescended the shaft.

When they are again in the dark they open the eye kept hitherto in reserve and at once see everything distinctly, [illegible]

Boers Great Pioneers.

The Boer is the ideal pioneer. From the days of the great trek, in 1837, and even before that he opened up countries hitherto unexplored by a white man. A great deal of fuss has been made of mighty travelers, English and foreign, who have traversed Africa, to the vast pecuniary benefit of their publishers and with no small meed of fame to themselves, but there was scarcely one of the old voortrekkers and hunters of the forties and fifties who did not accomplish feats of endurance, pluck and lengthy travel which were ten times as trying.—London Mail.

ADVERTISE IN THE MORNING TIMES.

THE FAMINE IN INDIA.

ONE OF THE WORST VISITATIONS OF MODERN TIMES.

Its Withering Breath Extends Over Nearly Half a Million Square Miles and Affects 61,000,000 People.

London, Feb. 27.—War has diverted attention from the state of affairs existing in India, where at least three million and a half people, or a population about equal to that of Greater New York, are being fed daily solely by the government, and one of the worst famines of modern times is sweeping off its victims. The true famine district in India covers an area of 30,000 square miles, and contains a population of 40,000,000 people, or just about the population of the British isles. There is also an area of 145,000 square miles containing a population of 21,000,000, where general scarcity prevails, and where there is much distress. The government of India has issued a circular in which the present famine is called "unprecedented," and it is said that "if the present rate of progression is maintained the crowds receiving relief will far exceed the records of any previous famine, and will strain not only the finances but the administrative resources of the government."

A Horrible Condition

The 3,500,000 people now drawing rations from the government have been obliged to quit their burnt-up fields and seek the means of life at the relief works which have been established. The famine was caused by the failure of the rains, and unless something unlooked for happens, the number of stricken will increase rapidly, for no ordinary rainfall can save the spring harvests or cover with crops a land baked into brick. There are whole districts where even drinking water is not to be had, and in some places the natives are selling their bullocks, worth 60 rupees, for 1 rupee. All except a small remnant of these poor beasts must perish of thirst and starvation, and large tracts which in ordinary years export cotton and wheat will this year produce only bones and hides. It is estimated that something like 50,000,000 people will have to get through the next six months without the crops upon which they depend for their food. The Indian Government has faced this fact and so far all who have come to the relief works have been fed.

Fighting Against Fate.

But all do not come in time. Before an Indian peasant will quit his beloved home for the relief works there is a period of struggle and long drawn out misery which leaves him so enfeebled that he falls an easy prey to disease, or drops in sight of the relief which he finally seeks.

The present famine, like all the recent ones, is felt heaviest in the central provinces of India. These provinces long formed the great unoccupied space of Central India, the refuge of the remnants of the oldest peoples of the country, who have retreated before the march of more developed races. After the extension of the railroad system of India a great increase took place in the population of this region by immigration from the more crowded tracts around them. These immigrants were almost entirely of the landless class, whom the rapid increase of population in the valley of the Ganges had pushed out. The poorest and least thrifty classes from other districts flocked to the central provinces, and although in good seasons they are better off in their new homes, they never lay up a reserve to fall back upon, and when the rains fail and the land bakes they are the first to throw themselves on the charity of the government. Even in the early stages of the present famine 12 per cent. of the whole population of Central India went to the relief works. Though in the stricken districts in India today the earth is turned into hot baked brick and the sky is a dome of burning copper under which all green things are shrivelled up, and the thirsty sun drinks up the streams and the springs will not flow, there are other districts where are prosperity and abundance.

Must Face it Alone

It seems as if India would have to face this famine alone. In a recent speech the Viceroy said that in the famine of 1897 the attention of England, almost of Europe, was turned upon suffering India, hundreds of thousands of pounds were contributed by generous hearts and eager hands and the whole external world assisted in the alleviation of Indian distress. Now, he continued, India has to suffer and struggle alone, not because England or the empire or humanity at large has become less sympathetic or more niggardly, but because the thoughts of all England and of almost all Englishmen throughout the world are fixed upon the war in South Africa and upon that alone. On these grounds Lord Curzon encouraged those whom he addressed to trust to their own resources and to look steadily in the face of the responsibilities which the visitation must entail upon them, and which it is their duty to encounter.

Some of the worst famines of modern times were the famine in Ireland in 1846-7, in which 1,000,000 people perished; the Indian famine of 1866, which claimed 1,450,000 victims; the Indian famine in 1877, in which 500,000 people perished, and the great famine in China in 1878, in which 9,500,000 are said to have died.

Aggravating the Offense.

"You are charged, young man," the magistrate said, not unkindly, "with scaring the complaining witness nearly out of his senses by putting him through some mock ceremony of initiation. I can make allowance for exuberance of spirits among college students, but sometimes this exuberance is carried too far."

"It was this way, your honor," exclaimed the youth who appeared to be the spokesman—"we were out for a little lark, and we caught a jay."

"The fine will be $2 and costs each," said his honor, his face hardening.—Chicago Tribune.

HUMAN BRAIN CELLS.

THEY REFUSE TO WORK UNDER TOO HIGH A PRESSURE.

Put on Too Much Steam and These Minute Organisms Go on Strike. Why Men Go Crazy or Become Absentminded.

Keeping pace with scientific thought and progress certain problems which in the past have been shelved for want of light being thrown upon them have been taken up again one by one to undergo further examination by the aid of improved science.

The newest revelation in this direction tends to the science of the mind and includes the following problems:

Why does a man act queerly when he is intoxicated?

Why is a man absentminded on occasions?

Why does a man sometimes become violently insane, often a dangerous, raving lunatic?

Such questions as these have puzzled our immediate fathers, who have hardly ever satisfactorily explained them away or indeed thrown much reliable light upon them. The human brain is composed of cells, and each cell is a simple bit of nerve substance, from one end of which, like an octopus, spring a number of tentacles, while from another part arises an arm different from them and of great length. The long arm is intended for transmitting impressions from one portion of the brain system to another, it being made to touch the tentacles or short arms of the next one to it, the latter in its turn effecting contact with a third cell, and so on.

Thus a message is conveyed and the mind gets its news. The entire brain is made up of these cells, whose number is legion and whose full strength is grouped in systems, these systems in turn being arranged in communities, the communities in clusters and finally the clusters in constellations, by which divisions they are known to physiologists.

So long as the mind is in a healthy condition each little cell, or brain octopus, attends to its business faithfully and gives no trouble, but as man generally is an animal who usually refuses to live the life spanned out by nature and adopts instead the life laid down by the modern artificial process of living, instituted forsooth by civilization, mental disturbances frequently arise through the brain becoming abused in various ways, from overwork and alcohol principally.

Your octopuslike brain cell is a living little thing, and it can endure a great deal of abuse from you, but if you should go a little too far it rebels and refuses to work any longer by breaking contact with its companion cells, which it can do by withdrawing its long arm and getting itself out of circuit. But this rebellion is conducted by whole groups of cells acting together in full harmony.

Now, the object of this "strike" is simply to avoid overwork, for each tiny cell has stored within its minute space only a certain amount of energy, but if you put on the high pressure this is easily consumed by the operation of the brain, and the organism breaks down from exhaustion. Now, take the first of the problems just stated. When a person takes too much to drink, the cells in those patches of the brain that are responsible for the conduct of muscular movement become affected and the man staggers.

When the dose is very large, the cells, which, although stupefied, have tried to keep their master on his legs, now cease working, and the man sleeps like one dead. Finally, if more than enough of alcoholic drink be taken, the effect on the cells is to paralyze them, and the unfortunate man dies.

There is some relation between extraordinary activity of the mind and insanity. Geniuses are apt to exhibit symptoms of mental alienation, and, singular to relate, their children are usually inferior to those of average men.

For instance, not to go out of England for example, Cromwell was a hypochondriac and had visions, Dean Swift inherited insanity and was himself not a little mad, Shelley was called by his friends "Mad Shelley," Charles Lamb went crazy, Johnson was another hypochondriac, Coleridge was a morbid maniac, Milton was of a morbid turn of mind, nearly approaching insanity (modern ideas of hades are largely formed on the description evolved by his diseased imagination), and Byron said he was visited by ghosts.

This mental alienation occurring in the foregoing cases shows that certain specific groups of brain cells have come under the baneful influence of the guiding spirit called talent or genius, which has used up all the energy stored in each cell and each group of cells, to the detriment of the whole, with the result that their ceasing work has brought about various types of insanity as depicted or, to phrase it more softly, induced disturbance of the mental equilibrium.

The remaining problem is absentmindedness. This is produced by a temporary disjunction of certain groups of cells. A man becomes so absorbed in his study of some particular subject and leads his whole mind to thought that the hard thinking disorganizes the groups of cells employed in the process of reflection, their tentacles being turned all one way, to the detriment of mental action generally, and so the man with the tentacles of his brain cells turned in the one direction passes along the streets lost to all observation or mental inception and does all manner of queer things because he is not conscious of what he is doing.—[illegible] Magazine.

Dizziness

is a very common consequence of indigestion and torpid liver. Sometimes there are spots before the eyes and hot flashes. At other times a sensation as of vertigo occurs, at once suffocating and blinding. It is a waste of time to attempt to cure this condition by ordinary means or medicines. The stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition must be restored to healthy activity, the blood must be purified, the liver cleansed and strengthened, before a cure can be hoped for. This is the work done by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a medicine specially beneficial in diseases of the stomach, blood and liver. It strengthens the stomach, purifies the blood, cleanses the clogged liver, and promotes the health of every organ of the body.

"My wife was greatly troubled with indigestion, torpid liver, dizziness, and also irregular periods," writes Mr. W. A. Preston, of Shuqualak, Noxubee Co., Miss. "We tried many different remedies, but none of them gave perfect relief until we were induced by a lady to try your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' 'Favorite Prescription,' and 'Pleasant Pellets.' These medicines did more good than anything we ever tried for those complaints. We have used four bottles of your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' one of 'Favorite Prescription,' and two vials of your 'Pellets.' These medicines have done the work we desired, and I do heartily recommend them to all similar sufferers."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets assist the action of the "Discovery."

THE FAMINE IN INDIA.

ONE OF THE WORST VISITATIONS OF MODERN TIMES.

Its Withering Breath Extends Over Nearly Half a Million Square Miles and Affects 61,000,000 People.

London, Feb. 27.—War has diverted attention from the state of affairs existing in India, where at least three million and a half people, or a population about equal to that of Greater New York, are being fed daily solely by the government, and one of the worst famines of modern times is sweeping off its victims. The true famine district in India covers an area of 30,000 square miles, and contains a population of 40,000,000 people, or just about the population of the British isles. There is also an area of 145,000 square miles containing a population of 21,000,000, where general scarcity prevails, and where there is much distress. The government of India has issued a circular in which the present famine is called "unprecedented," and it is said that "if the present rate of progression is maintained the crowds receiving relief will far exceed the records of any previous famine, and will strain not only the finances but the administrative resources of the government."

A Horrible Condition.

The 3,500,000 people now drawing rations from the government have been obliged to quit their burnt-up fields and seek the means of life at the relief works which have been established. The famine was caused by the failure of the rains, and unless something unlooked for happens, the number of stricken will increase rapidly, for no ordinary rainfall can save the spring harvests or cover with crops a land baked into brick. There are whole districts where even drinking water is not to be had, and in some places the natives are selling their bullocks, worth 40 rupees, for 1 rupee. All except a small remnant of these poor beasts must perish of thirst and starvation, and large tracts which in ordinary years export cotton and wheat will this year produce only bones and hides. It is estimated that something like 50,000,000 people will have to get through the next six months without the crops upon which they depend for their food. The Indian Government has faced this fact and so far all who have come to the relief works have been fed.

Fighting Against Fate.

But all do not come in time. Before an Indian peasant will quit his beloved home for the relief works there is a period of struggle and long drawn out misery which leaves him so enfeebled that he falls an easy prey to disease, or drops in sight of the relief which he finally seeks.

The present famine, like all the recent ones, is felt heaviest in the central provinces of India. These provinces long formed the great unoccupied space of Central India, the refuge of the remnants of the oldest peoples of the country, who have retreated before the march of more developed races. After the extension of the railroad system of India a great increase took place in the population of this region by immigration from the more crowded tracts around them. These immigrants were almost entirely of the landless class, whom the rapid increase of population in the valley of the Ganges had pushed out. The poorest and most thrifty classes from other districts flocked to the central provinces, and although in good seasons they are better off in their new homes, they never lay up a reserve to fall back upon, and when the rains fail and the land bakes they are the first to throw themselves on the charity of the government. Even in the early stages of the present famine 12 per cent. of the whole population of Central India went to the relief works. Though in the stricken districts in India to-day the earth is turned into hot baked brick and the sky is a dome of burning copper under which all green things are shrivelled up, and the thirsty sun drinks up the streams and the springs will not flow, there are other districts where are prosperity and abundance.

Must Face it Alone

It seems as if India would have to face this famine alone. In a recent speech the viceroy said that in the famine of 1897 the attention of England, almost of Europe, was turned upon suffering India, hundreds of thousands of pounds were contributed by generous hearts and eager hands and the whole external world assisted in the alleviation of Indian distress. Now, he continued, India has to suffer and struggle alone, not because England or the empire or humanity at large has become less sympathetic or more niggardly, but because the thoughts of all England and of almost all Englishmen throughout the world are fixed upon the war in South Africa and upon that alone. On these grounds Lord Carson encouraged those whom he addressed to trust to their own resources and to look steadily in the face of the responsibilities which the visitation must entail upon them, and which it is their duty to encounter.

Some of the worst famines of modern times were the famine in Ireland in 1846-7, in which 1,000,000 people perished; the Indian famine of 1866, which claimed 1,450,000 victims; the Indian famine in 1877, in which 500,000 people perished, and the great famine in China, in 1878, in which 9,500,000 are said to have died.

Aggravating the Offense.

"You are charged, young man," the magistrate said, not unkindly, "with scaring the complaining witness nearly out of his senses by putting him through some mock ceremony of initiation. I can make allowance for exuberance of spirits among college students, but sometimes this exuberance is carried too far."

"It was this way, your honor," exclaimed the youth who appeared to be the spokesman—"we were out for a little lark, and we caught a jay."

"The fine will be $2 and costs each," said his honor, his face hardening.—Chicago Tribune.

HUMAN BRAIN CELLS.

THEY REFUSE TO WORK UNDER TOO HIGH A PRESSURE.

Put on Too Much Steam and These Minute Organisms Go on Strike. Why Men Go Crazy or Become Absentminded.

Keeping pace with scientific thought and progress certain problems which in the past have been shelved for want of light being thrown upon them have been taken up again one by one to undergo further examination by the aid of improved science.

The newest revelation in this direction tends to the science of the mind and includes the following problems:

Why does a man act queerly when he is intoxicated?

Why is a man absentminded on occasions?

Why does a man sometimes become violently insane, often a dangerous, raving lunatic?

Such questions as these have puzzled our immediate fathers, who have hardly ever satisfactorily explained them away or indeed thrown much reliable light upon them. The human brain is composed of cells, and each cell is a simple bit of nerve substance, from one end of which, like an octopus, spring a number of tentacles, while from another part arises an arm different from them and of great length. The long arm is intended for transmitting impressions from one portion of the brain system to another, it being made to touch the tentacles or short arms of the next one to it, the latter in its turn effecting contact with a third cell, and so on.

Thus a message is conveyed and the mind gets its news. The entire brain is made up of these cells, whose number is legion and whose full strength is grouped in systems, these systems in turn being arranged in communities, the communities in clusters and finally the clusters in constellations, by which divisions they are known to physiologists.

So long as the mind is in a healthy condition each little cell, or brain octopus, attends to its business faithfully and gives no trouble, but as man generally is an animal who usually refuses to live the life spanned out by nature and adopts instead the life laid down by the modern artificial process of living, instituted forsooth by civilization, mental disturbances frequently arise through the brain becoming abused in various ways, from overwork and alcohol principally.

Your octopuslike brain cell is a living little thing, and it can endure a great deal of abuse from you, but if you should go a little too far it rebels and refuses to work any longer by breaking contact with its companion cells, which it can do by withdrawing its long arm and getting itself out of circuit. But this rebellion is conducted by whole groups of cells acting together in full harmony.

Now, the object of this "strike" is simply to avoid overwork, for each tiny cell has stored within its minute space only a certain amount of energy, but if you put on the high pressure this is easily consumed by the operation of the brain, and the organism breaks down from exhaustion. Now, take the first of the problems just stated. When a person takes too much to drink, the cells in those patches of the brain that are responsible for the conduct of muscular movement become affected and the man staggers.

When the dose is very large, the cells, which, although stupefied, have tried to keep their master on his legs, now cease working, and the man sleeps like one dead. Finally, if more than enough of alcoholic drink be taken, the effect on the cells is to paralyze them, and the unfortunate man dies.

There is some relation between extraordinary activity of the mind and insanity. Geniuses are apt to exhibit symptoms of mental alienation, and, singular to relate, their children are usually inferior to those of average men.

For instance, not to go out of England for example, Cromwell was a hypochondriac and had visions, Dean Swift inherited insanity and was himself not a little mad, Shelley was called by his friends "Mad Shelley," Charles Lamb went crazy, Johnson was another hypochondriac, Coleridge was a morbid maniac, Milton was of a morbid turn of mind, nearly approaching insanity (modern ideas of hades are largely formed on the description evolved by his diseased imagination), and Byron said he was visited by ghosts.

This mental alienation occurring in the foregoing cases shows that certain specific groups of brain cells have come under the baneful influence of the guiding spirit called talent or genius, which has used up all the energy stored in each cell and each group of cells, to the detriment of the whole, with the result that their ceasing work has brought about various types of insanity as depicted or, to phrase it more softly, induced disturbance of the mental equilibrium.

The remaining problem is absentmindedness. This is produced by a temporary disjunction of certain groups of cells. A man becomes so absorbed in his study of some particular subject and lends his whole mind to thought that the hard thinking disorganizes the groups of cells employed in the process of reflection, their tentacles being turned all one way, to the detriment of mental action generally, and so the man with the tentacles of his brain cells turned in the one direction passes along the streets lost to all observation or mental inception and does all manner of queer things because he is not conscious of what he is doing.—Pearson's Magazine.

Dizziness

Is a very common consequence of indigestion and torpid liver. Sometimes there are spots before the eyes and hot flashes. At other times a sensation as of vertigo occurs, at once suffocating and blinding. It is a waste of time to attempt to cure this condition by ordinary means or medicines. The stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition must be restored to healthy activity, the blood must be purified, the liver cleansed and strengthened, before a cure can be hoped for. This is the work done by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a medicine specially beneficial in diseases of the stomach, blood and liver. It strengthens the stomach, purifies the blood, cleanses the clogged liver, and promotes the health of every organ of the body.

"My wife was greatly troubled with indigestion, torpid liver, dizziness, and also irregular periods," writes Mr. W. A. Preston, of Shuqualak, Noxubee Co., Miss. "We tried many different remedies, but none of them gave perfect relief until we were induced by a lady to try your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' 'Favorite Prescription,' and 'Pleasant Pellets.' These medicines did more good than anything we ever tried for those complaints. We have used four bottles of your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' one of 'Favorite Prescription,' and two vials of your 'Pellets.' These medicines have done the work we desired, and I do heartily recommend them to all similar sufferers."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets assist the action of the "Discovery."

Mr. Harry LeBrun says that the grain will be used for the manufacture of pea soup for the Quebec end of the contingent. We presume that the next order will be for corn meal to make pan cakes for the Toronto men.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

The Pupils Celebrate.

The surrender of Gen. Cronje's army, which was first announced in the Times yesterday, secured for the pupils of the schools a half holiday. There was patriotic demonstrations galore by the juveniles as a result.

New Readers

We have just received a neat little book of new readings in Scotch and English for social gatherings. The selections are from the works of Mr. John Imrie, Toronto, and are up to date. For sale at the Times Bookstore.

A Sad Affliction.

The Times tenders its sincere sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Donovan, in the death of their daughter, Mary, aged 13 years, whose demise occurred on Monday. The funeral will take place this morning from the family residence, Charlotte street, at 9 a.m.

County Maps.

Only a few copies of the splendid new map of Peterborough County left. Mounted on canvas with wooden rollers $2.00; paper 50 cents. Times Bookstore.

A Pointer.

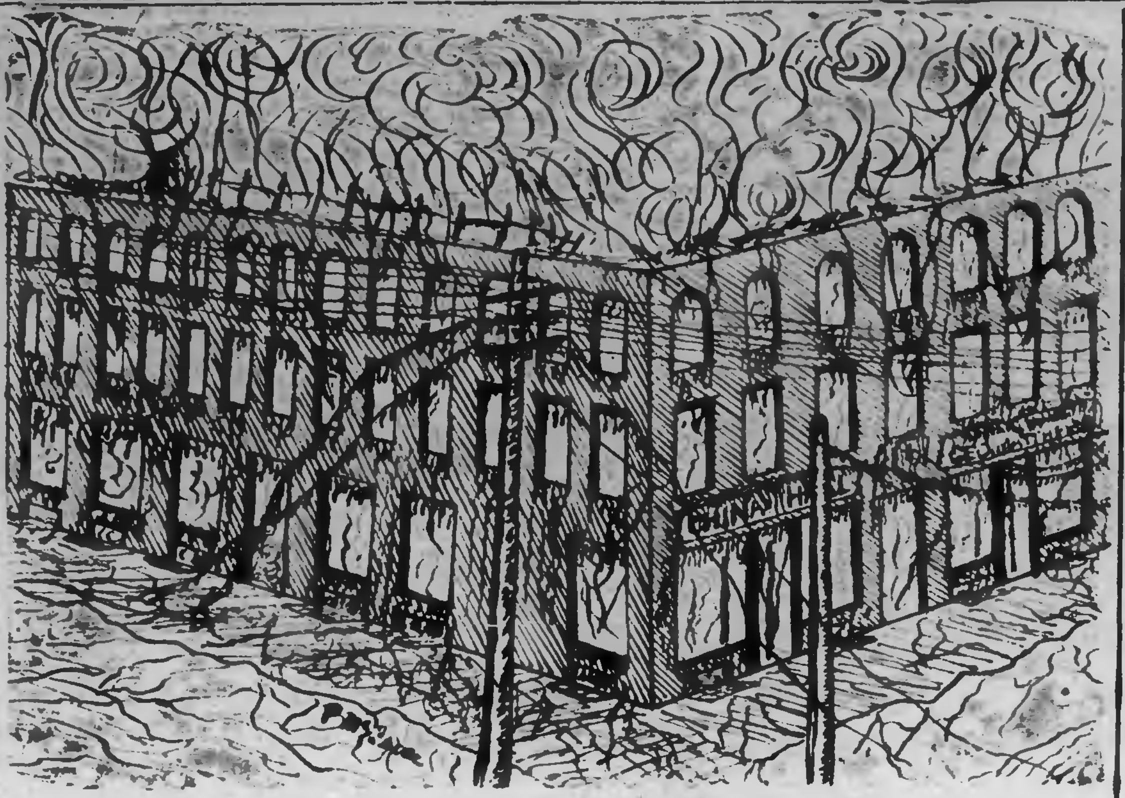
Mayor Kendry announced at the Council meeting on Monday night that Ladysmith had been relieved. This good news was received with favor by the Aldermen and those who occupied benches in the rear. But when the Times appeared yesterday morning the report was found to be incorrect. The Mayor is old enough by this time to know that he should make no such announcements unless he sees it in the Times.

A Steamboat War.

By the Oshawa Vindicator we notice that Capt. Thomas Nihan, owner of the Garden City, and Mr. T. G. Jackson, of Whitby, are at war over the control of the Oshawa harbor. Last year the Garden City people had control, paying $600 for the privilege. This year Mr. Jackson got in ahead and secured control, and now intends to put on an opposition boat between Toronto and Cobourg. How the matter will terminate we cannot at present see, but Mr. Nihan says he has $10,000 at his back and will test the validity of Mr. Jackson's claim. The Garden City afforded a popular route to and from Toronto for many of our readers.

Boys on the Streets.

Boys are in the habit of standing on the streets while waiting for a ride, and often, not ever careful, are in danger of being run over. A ten-year-old boy, thus carelessly standing on the road on Brock street, was knocked down by a horse driven in connection with a local laundry yesterday, and came very near being injured. Luckily for him, the driver pulled up in time and the boy escaped with only a few scratches.



An early morning view of yesterday's fire from corner of George and Simcoe streets.

PETERBOROUGH'S BIG FIRE.

Further Particulars Concerning the Fire Yesterday Morning.

The report of the fire which occurred yesterday morning was substantially correct. The total loss will be in the neighborhood of $25,000. The cause of the fire is a mystery. Mr. Wilson left his store on Monday night at 9.30, when everything appeared to be as usual. There was a wood stove in the cellar which was used on very cold days and which was in use on Monday. The company had also a small gas stove in the cellar, but this had not been utilised for some time. The Times was in error in stating that Mr. Wilson thought the fire originated in the Matthews premises.

Mr. Lundy's loss is about $250, covered by insurance.

Mr. R. E. Wood's loss is about $300.

The George Matthew's company lost about $1500, on which was insurance.

The Ledger Monthly for March.

The Ledger Monthly for March has as a frontispiece a beautiful engraving of Washington at Valley Forge, from an original design by Charles Kendrick, an interesting feature for Washingtno's Birthday. The cover of the March number of the Ledger Monthly is a picturesque Dutch beauty, entitled A Holland Belle, from a painting by the popular artist, Charles J. Blenner. John N. Hilliard contributes an incident of early Boer history in South Africa, a sketch of Marthinus Oosthuyse, the hero of the great Trek, whose story is told in every Dutch farmhouse in the Transvaal. Sir John Everett Millias, the most popular of modern painters, is the subject of an interesting article with twenty-four reproductions from his most celebrated works, including portraits of both Millais and Lady Millais. The article on the cultivation of physical beauty by Stella Stewart, this month, is devoted to the care of the hands and the feet. Current fashions for the spring season are beautifully illustrated and are accompanied by the Standard Demorest patterns of everything new and fashionable. The Binks Family, by John Strange Winter, is continued. General James Grant Wilson's article on Famous War Horses is devoted to Gen. Grant and his battle chargers. The War Room at the White House is the subject of an illustrated article. Wellington and the Painter of Napoleon furnishes the subject of a telling anecdote. This number of the Ledger Monthly is crammed with interesting sketches and illustrated short articles. All the usual departments are given, with many appropriat eillustrations. The price of the Ledger Monthly is fifty cents per year, five cents per copy. Robert Bonner's Sons, Publishers, Ledger Building, New York City.

Wedding Bells.

A quiet wedding was celebrated Monday evening in St. John's church by Rev. J. C. Davidson, the contracting parties being Elizabeth Lillian, eldest daughter of Mr. A. Neal Clark, and Mr. E. J. Boswell, C. E. This wedding has taken place sooner than was intended on account of Mr. Boswell receiving on Friday last instructions to return immediately to British Columbia, where he has been employed for the last three years. Mr. and Mrs. Boswell left by the midnight express travelling via Ottawa.

Flags and Decorations.

British Ensigns, Union Jacks, Dominion Ensigns, Irish Ensigns, Scotch Ensigns. All of the above flags kept in stock or made to order. Now is the time to sho wyour loyalty. Bust a flag and hoist it up, or we can rent you one. Decorations of all kinds done to order. If you want the best and cheapest, go or send to J. J. LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Mr. Robert Fair has already began to open up spring goods. This progressive store is always abreast of the times.

Orillia citizens have already raised $1,000 for the Canadian Patriotic Fund $622 of the amount being the proceeds of a concert.

The decorations at St. Luke's entertainment last night was the work of J. J. Turner & Sons and was exceptionally pretty.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. will be held in the building on Thursday afternoon at three o'clock. All ladies interested are requested to attend.

The Times was five hours late yesterday, owing to the fire. As usual when the g.f.j. does not appear on time, there was a deluge of enquiries by telephone and otherwise as to the cause of the delay.

The contract for the construction of granolithic walks this year has been awarded to Mr. Frank Dolan. Mr. Dolan has been connected with the construction of Brockville and Peterborough walks for two seasons. His work has given excellent satisfaction, and the contract could not have fallen into better hands.—Brantford Courier.

Patriotic Concert.

The patriotic concert held in the opera house last evening under the auspices of the 57th Battalion was a great success. The house was filled to overflowing and immense enthusiasm prevailed among the audience. The Battalion band opened with the playing of the National Anthem which brought the audience to their feet. The programme was a lengthy one, consisting of baton swinging, choruses, quartettes, solos, physicial drills, tableaux, etc., which were well received. Lack of space dies not permit of comment upon each number, but all were well rendered. Particular mention might be made of violin solos by Prof. McIlmoyle, who made that instrument go to the hearts of those present and who was wildly applauded again and again. The Professor is an old Peterborough boy who has returned to town after an absence of some years. During the intermission Major Edwards made the announcement that Canadians had taken prominent part in compelling Cronje to capitulate, also telling of their losses in killed and wounded. The house was prettily decorated with flags, etc., by Col.-Sergt. Alf. Kingscotte.

THE DOCTOR SAID.

Stop Coffee and use Postum Cereal Coffee.

It seemed a hard matter to get through breakfast without a cup of hot coffee, so I stuck to it for several years, although I was a great sufferer from sick headaches, which sometimes attacked me as often as three times a week. I used to take medicine for my head troubles, not knowing the cause of them, and kept on drinking coffee, until I finally came down with serious stomach trouble and had to go to the doctor. He said I had dyspepsia in a bad form and some other complications; that I must stop drinking coffee or tea for a year or more. I got hold of the Postum Food Coffee, and since using it, have been entirely free from the headaches and stomach trouble.

"It has evidently been a great benefit for me, for my health has been revived and I have grown fleshy since beginning its use. My husband and daughter drink Postum and like it very much. Daughter does not think she can have breakfast without her Postum. I find people occasionally who have tried Postum but complain that it is not strong enough. I find in such cases that they are either helter-skelter housekeepers or have been very careless in the preparation of the Postum Food Coffee. It requires full fifteen minutes of actual boiling after the bubbling begins, and two heaping teaspoonsful to the person. This gives an elegant cup of coffee. Anyone who is troubled with coffee drinking can well afford to abandon it and take up the Postum Food Coffee." Mrs. L. W. Bell, 2532 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

Some good housekeepers mix the Postum, four heaping teaspoons to the pint of water, in a very little water, and place it in a tall coffee-pot so it will not boil over, then after it has begun to boil and been stirred down, they add enough water to make up the requisite amount of liquid.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

There was no use that Colts' cup had to become the property of the Peterborough boys. The Midland Colts Association has been in existence but six years and one rule is that the cup shall become the property of the club winning it three times. The Peterborough Colts are now owners of two cups, so that you can do your own figuring. Yesterday morning the final game was between Campbellford and Peterborough and at the finish the home team were up 23 shots.

* * *

It is time the "points" competition was arranged. It should not be put off until the ice gets to be no good.

The Colts are going to win that championship at Stratford on Thursday notwithstanding McFadden's boast.

* * *

The referees allow too much loafing in these hockey matches. That little colored gentleman of Stratford was the worst offender on the ice.

* * *

We would suggest a slight change in the rule against stopping the puck with the hand. The eastern clubs all want a change made to conform with the style of play allowed in all other parts of Canada outside of Ontario, to allow stopping the puck with the hand. We think the Ontario game is more scientific but would like a rule to allow the "point" to catch the puck when necessary. He is often playing right in on the nets and the temptation is always too strong for him to resist when he sees the puck flying towards him straight for the goal nets. If he and the the goal keeper only are allowed to stop or catch the puck with their hands it would help the game. If the change should be made let the rule be made more strict with regard to the rest of the team—put any man out of the game for five minutes if he should stop the puck with his hand.

The Telegram in reporting Monday night's match says:

When the teams took to the ice in second half, oh mamma, it was hot. But the Colts knew their own ice and shot in three goals while Stratford were getting two. The Peterborough Colts, unless they are very careful, will get trimmed in Stratford.

What makes you think so "Cully."

* * *

It is really too bad that all this trouble has occurred over the final two matches in the O.H.A.. The rinks are holding the O.H.A. up this year, but thank goodness 'twill be the last year of it. The year 1901 will see the biggest rink and athletic arena in Canada, built by some well-known business men in Toronto.

* * *

The Wellingtons, the O.H.A. and the Caledonia Rink Co., have come to an agreement, and the result is the first of the final games for the senior championship to-night in Toronto.

Startling Pulpit Announcement.

A minister not a hundred miles from Peterborough on a recent Sunday surprised his audience by reading the following announcement from the pulpit—"The regular session of the Donkey Club will be held as usual after the service. Members will line up just outside the church door, make remarks and stare at the ladies who pass, as is their custom. Any member known to escort a lady to church like a man and sit with her like a gentleman will be promptly expelled from membership." The effect was marvelous.

38 Counties in Ontario, six of the United States, together with five from Manitoba and Alberta, have sent their representatives. They come from the Atlantic on the East to the Pacific on the west. Distance proves no hindrance to those who are determined to attend the best.

A Railway Ticket.

Editor Morning Times:

Sir,—If a ticket bought by A. reading between two common points, say, Toronto to Peterborough, is lost by him and is found by B, who attempts to use the same, can the railroad company, at the request of the purchaser A, cancel the ticket and prevent the finder of the same, B, from using it?

W. D.

Reply—Not if it is an ordinary ticket. —Ed. Times.

The British Army.

Editor Morning Times:

Sir,—Does every officer buy his commission in the English army? My friend says there is not one English officer that rises from the ranks; is this so?

D. L. E.

Reply—The purchase of commissions in the British Army was abolished by royal warrant in 1871. By "purchase" was not meant that anybody could buy any commission he wanted, provided he had the money; every commission had a fixed regulation price, but a person had to enter at the lowest grade. Some commissions were given without purchase, and when a senior officer died the promotion caused by his death was not purchasable. There has always been promotions from the ranks in the British army, though most of these were to riding-masterships and quartermasterships. But between 1871 and 1885, 857 men were promoted; of these, 622 were to the grades named, and 235 to lieutenancies in the line, foot-guards, artillery, engineers, cavalry and horse-guards. Gen. MacBean, a holder of the Victoria Cross, rose from the ranks; and Gen. Hector Macdonald, Aide-de-Camp to the Queen, now commanding the Highland Brigade with Lord Methuen, enlisted not quite twenty years ago as a private. —Ed. Times.
